We left our home on the South Platt River, on the 24th of August in company with wife, our two little boys, sister Kate Brenizer and a teamster. The weather was pleasant, so our trip up the beautiful valley of the Platt was enjoyable. At night we camped by the side of the river, the starry canopy of Heaven the roof over our heads, and the grass-covered earth our mattress to sleep upon. Camping out is a common thing in this country, often as a matter of choice, even by invalids. The afternoon of the third day we arrived at the house of brother C. Myers in Greely. Enjoyed the hospitality of brother and sister M., and others of the same like faith, there being some 8 or 10 members in Greely. Evening of the 27th preached in the Baptist Church to an attentive congregation. Next day set out for Longmont, Boulder Co. Bro. and sister Myers, and sister Anna Sanger joined our company. In driving thro' the colony grounds we had an opportunity of seeing some of the beautiful farms that surround the town. There has been a heavy crop of wheat harvested of which the numerous stacks of grain and straw give evidence. The corn, oats and vegetable crop was somewhat damaged by the grass-hoppers. But of the necessaries of life there will be plenty and to spare. After leaving the beautiful and fertile valley of the Cache La'Poudre our road, (the "Gun-barrel" road being straight as a line for 12 miles) led us across a beautiful extending plain into the valley of the Big Thompson river, which too is a beautiful, fertile and green "Oasis" in the "Great American Desert." On the bank of the clear, purling stream we took lunch and fed our teams. Thence our course was for some miles up the river. Numerous stacks of grain, grass and green meadows lined each side of the river. Abruptly we left the valley and crossed another rolling plain and camped for the night on "Little Thompson" where we found wood and water, but no signs of civilization. Nothing occurred to mar our repose except the occasional howlings of the coyote, (a species of wolf), some of which came near the camp but were driven off by the dogs. Next day we continued our journey across the wide plains, suddenly we came to the out skirts of the section of country watered artificially by the waters of the St. Vrain. 'Tis a little singular to thus come to ditches with running water far out on the thirsty plain, and see growing crops on every side. We noticed one field of wheat that stood well on the ground yet in a perfect green state, looked as though it would not do to harvest until October. Near by, one of the irrigating ditches was emptying its waters into a large natural basin forming a fine lake. After driving about eight miles further we came to the town of Longmont which is quite a town considering its age—being about four years old. It is situated on the St. Vrain river. The St. Vrain valley and adjacent country form one of the best agricultural sections we have seen in Colorado. It lies at the foot of the Rocky mountains, and spreads out in a beautiful expanse similar to the prairies of Illinois, is of an undulating nature, known as first bottom, second bottom, and upland. The soil is chiefly a gravelly loam, very productive. Three streams, flush with waters from the melting snows course their rapid way through the country in their natural beds as well as in the ditches, some of which carry the water to the high lands far out on the plain, so that the whole extended area of land is susceptible of easy irrigation. Numerous fine farms may be seen, generally well fenced, and the number and size of grain and straw stacks equal or surpass anything we ever saw anywhere. Some farmers count their wheat by the thousands of bushels, and they all tell us it was a poor crop year. The oats, corn and other crops were damaged some by the "Hoppers," yet we see some fine crops of corn and vegetables.

About three o'clock we arrived at brother J. R. Ullery's, 5 miles south of Longmont. Next day (Sunday,) had two meetings in the stone S. H. near by. There are residing in Boulder Co, some 7 or 8 members of the Brethren. We were glad to meet them and worship the God of our fathers with them in the spirit of love and Gospel simplicity. We were impressed with the belief that with efficient labor properly directed much might be done in that vicinity to the building up of Zion. A few sermons preached by Bro. A. Hutchison a year ago while on a visit for his health, resulted in bringing about an interest of inquiry concerning those people that are separate from the world in their religious principles. We are satisfied his labors were creative of good, tho' it were sowing seed by the wayside.

From the night meeting we accompanied friend Turner home and formed the acquaintance of his kind family. He has made farming in Colorado pay, and as an instance that might give satisfaction to many querists I notice this. Mr. Turner came from Iowa and rented a farm of 160 acres for the year 1863, about one half was in a state of cultivation. With the assistance of one hand he made over and above expenses something like one thousand dollars. He then purchased the farm for $3.000. This year his net proceeds will be more than last, notwithstanding the grasshoppers injured his crop considerable. His "onion patch" is worthy of notice, containing a fraction over one half acre he will probably harvest 3 or 4 hundred bushels from it and realize a clear profit of as many dollars. He says one reason why he likes Colorado better than Iowa is because he can irrigate here. Thus he with others look upon irrigation as an advantage to the country.

Monday, the last day of August, after laying in a good supply of commissary stores, we set out for this place on a sight seeing, pleasure seeking and fruit gathering expedition. After driving a few miles we entered St. Vrain canyon and soon we were surrounded with grand and sublime scenery which was very impressive to every lover of nature. Perpendicular cliffs hundreds of feet high rise majestically on either side. The different statues of rock piled up so artistically and in slope like massive walls and towers, one is reminded of the paintings of ancient Jerusalem in ruins. After ascending a rugged hill our road led us into a kind of park or cove surrounded with lofty mountains. Here we found grass, wood, and water, so we camped for the night. The next day we travelled over terrible roads, over hills and mountains, some in steepness equal to about 45 degrees, however about sundown we entered this much talked of Park. The evening was cool, we soon had a huge log fire of pitch pine under a large pine tree, and thus we camped. During the night it commenced raining. If sitting around a log fire with umbrellas in hand, or lying rolled up in blankets and robes with wet heads was pleasure, some of the company could not see it! However taking in the situation as a novel one we laughed more than cried. Next day, to the rain was added snow. We were fortunate in renting a good spacious house belonging to an English nobleman who is out on a hunt. The house is well carpeted and furnished, so we are "at home" and enjoying ourselves here amid the towering mountains as best we can. This Park has been visited by pleasure-seekers for some years. This season it seems to be the center of attraction, not only by citizens of Colorado but by hundreds of travellers. Fine speckled trout abound in the waters of the Park and vicinity. Angling is a favorite sport, but so far not for us, the weather being unfavorable, we have succeeded in catching about half as many as the Savior had with the five loaves of bread taken to feed the five thousand! To-morrow we want to take a more extended look at the Park. More anon.

A Visit to Kentucky.

For the satisfaction of my brethren, and at their request I write the the followiog:

At our District Meeting, in the South-western part of Ohio, in 1874 there was a letter presented from a friend by the name of Fitzgerald, living in Kentucky, near Frankfort, asking the Brethren to send some brethren to preach for them. We took the matter into council, and appointed a committee to see to the call. And after some correspondence with the friend, it was agreed upon to send two brethren from this District upon the mission. Brother Nead and myself were appointed to go, and the 20th of August was fixed as the time for meeting.

I went to Troy, and started for Cincinnati. In Dayton I met brother Nead, who informed he was not going. I concluded to go as the appointments were made, and fill them if the Lord spared me to do so. We had but a few words, as the cars moved off, and I was on my way to Cincinnati, and arrived there at 4 o'clock P.M. I then went to the depot in Newport, Ky., across the Ohio river and at 11 o'clock at night started for Frankfort, by way of Lagrange, and arrived at Frankfort at 9 o'clock A. M. I found Fitzgerald waiting at the station for me. Soon we were on our way to the place of abode. Upon our arrival at his house we found his family well. His family consists of himself, his wife and a child. I was kindly received, but somewhat fatigued.

On the morning of the 22d, we had our first meeting at 11 o'clock in the Reform church, known here as the Campbelites or Disciples. We had meeting in the evening at the friend's house; the meetings were pretty well attended, and we had most excellent attention. Many present had never seen a brother. Next day being the Lord's or the Christian Sabbath, we had full meetings both forenoon and afternoon for the weather, as it was a little rainy. We then moved our meeting to another place, and had them in another Reformed church. We had four meetings then, and the people were very anxious to hear the Gospel. I had many calls to come to other neighborhoods. There was a very pressing call to go to Scott county, Kentucky, but I now had to make arrangements for home. On Wednesday the 26th, the ordinance of baptism was attended to, and no member but myself within one hundred and fifty miles of the place. But there was no other way to do, but as Philip did, and friend Fitzgerald has become a brother in the Lord. Upon consulting with his companion she seemed to be well pleased with the order of the Brethren. And many others were deeply impressed with the truth, and were anxious for the brethren to come and preach for them. I never was pressed more forcibly with with the propriety of the brethren going to preach if possible, where they are called.

There is certainly a prospect here for doing good. I was kindly received by all. I spent one night with friend B. O. Nelson, and one with friend Wilson. They were very kind and treated me with respect, for which they have my thanks.

Now brethen, we want you to remember Bro. Fitzgerald as he is away in a far distant land, he is young and promising. May God bless him and his family, and give Him grace to be faithful. He lives eight miles from Frankfort, the capital of the State. His address is Farmland, Lancaster county, Kentucky.

A Visit.

In company with brother Conrad Bashore left our homes on the 11th of Sept., and rode some 20 miles over hills and mountains and through valleys to fill an appointment at brother Polser Whetsels that day at 4 o'clock. Had meeting and married a couple, namely, Bro. James Ledbetter and Margaret Wetsel. This was on a high mountains about one mile from the main valley. At a distance it looks as though there was no valley on its top, but on arriving, there is a kind of basin or rather a small valley some 10 miles in length, and diversified with hills, among which live quite a number of inhabitants, who are very kind and plain in their manners and poor in this world's goods. Some have horses to farm with, others oxen. They have a small house built for school and to worship in, free for all. It is not adorned with cushioned seats and carpet walks, but in their little house they seem to enjoy themselves in their worship and praise God from their hearts. Godliness with contentment, says the apostle, is great gain. We spent the night with brother Whetsel. We had our first meeting on the morning of the 12, when we started for the little church. In 2 hours we arrived at the place. Meeting at 10 o'clock and 4 same day. After meeting, home with brother Green Gilbert who was lately elected to the ministry. In this place are 15 or 20 members. They meet every 2 weeks to worship, visit each other to sing and pray, every 4 weeks. The ministers from the adjoining churches visit them and preach for them. On the 13th (Sunday) went back to the meeting-house where we were to preach the funeral of brother Isaac Hamilton, who departed this life in May last. On arriving at the place found a large congregation, so much so that the house would not contain half of the people. We moved to a grove where they come flocking in from every direction. I wondered where so many people could come from in these mountains. The occasion was improved from the 21th and 25th verses of the 11th chapter of St. John. Brother Hamilton was a consistent member of the church about 4 years. He had many sympathizing friends who mourn their loss, but their loss I hope is his great gain. There was quite a feeling manifested in the meeting, many tears were seen to flow, and at the close of the meeting 4 souls came out of the congregation and wished to join the Church, saying that they believed and wished to be baptized. They were then privately examined according to the usages of the church and received. This called for a place to baptize, which was some 2 miles off, and here there was water sufficient. We dismissed the congregation until 4 o'clock, when the ordinance of baptism was attended to. After returning to the house of Bro. Gilbert for refreshment we then went to the place where the ordinance was to be administered. On arriving at the place it was a break off in the mountain where the little stream that wended its way through the valley leaped off, making its way to the Holston River. Here was a kind of basin formed, where the water had been dashing over rocks for ages past. Many had gathered up to witness Triune Immersion, which caused some remarks. After baptism was performed 2 more came up like the Eunuch and were willing to follow Jesus in the way. It being late in the day, we appointed meeting on next morning at 10 o'clock, and attended to the ordinance of baptism Had meeting at brother Thomas Hamilton's that night where we received word to come and anoint old brother Gilbert, the father of the young minister. Accordingly on the next morning we went, found him suffering very much with a sore cancer. He is reduced in flesh to a mere skeleton. He said that he had obeyed all the commands of God but one, and that was to be anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. We performed the holy unction, surrounded by many spectators, after which the old brother rejoiced with tears, craving the prayers of the church. We filled our last appointment in a crowded house, went to the water side where prayer was wont to be made, baptized and reclaimed two that were disowned by the Church, bade them farewell and returned home.

Report of Altoona Church Funds.

Below we furnish a list of the churches which have responded to the call for aid in building a meeting-house in Altoona, with the amount paid in to me by each, which has been forwarded to an authorized committee at that place. I will here further say to those churches which have not yet done anything in this work, that it is hoped they will also contribute to this good work, as there is still a considerable amount wanting to meet the expense of purchasing and repairing the church building there, now in use.

Information Wanted.

Will Bro. Daniel Snowberger explain himself more fully on his explanation of strange query, as he calls it, in the PILGRIM No. 29. He says there is not a hint of it in the Bible, that ever Noah preached to the spirits in prison. Will brother Daniel tell us who these spirits are, whether they are dead or lost spirits out of the body; or whether they are living spirits in prison houses, such as Matt. records. See Matt. 5:25, 26. And also the time that Christ went and preached to the spirits, whether it was during the three days that he was in the grave, or when it was?

THE FAMILY

Keeping Accounts.

The great mass of the farmers of this country keep no account at all—not even a memorandum book in which they note down current expenses, etc. The idea of "keeping books" has a terror about it, which deters most people whose success in life does not absolutely hang upon their keeping accurate accounts to have much to do with them. The amount of money which passes through the hands of a small farmer in any part of the country is so small that his recollections about money transactions are usually pretty accurate, and the real necessity of spending the few minutes a day necessary to keep tolerably accurate accounts is not apparent to them, and will not be until proved.

It is not our object now to enter into an argument to convince any one the of esirableness of keeping accounts, but to show how it may be done conviently and very easy. The writer has for some time used the following system for keeping his farming and farm accounts, which are kept together, and it certainly is simple, convienent and appears to be all that is required.

The book is ruled with double dollar-and-cent columns. In one of these columns the expenses are set down, in the other, the receipts. The boook need not be larger than a common school copy-book, and three minutes a day will serve to make all the entries If the farmar is cold, and his fingers stiff, his wife or one of his daughters will gladly take the pen. Oftener than otherwise, we think the wife, if not overburdened with the cares of household and children, would be the best one to keep the accounts. In a great many cases, dimes and half-dimes slip away from personal indulgences (glasses of something warm, or tobacco), which, were it the good wife's daily duty to make the record, would not be spent.

These accounts ought to be balanced as often as once a month. It will be observed that this book, if accurately kept, will only show the transactions in ready money, and hence should be called cash accounts. We almost all have, of necessity, another class of accounts to keep. It is not always possible or best to pay cash, and we may make little debts and give credits all the time. The settlements are often made in produce, labor, or something besides money, but these should be just as accurate a record of the transactions for all that. With those persons with whom a running account is kept, there should be an account opened in another book, and some pages devoted to it. In other cases, a simple memorandum of the transactions may be sufficient. It requires no knowledge of book-keeping, or skill as a mathematician. Any child of sixteen can do all the work, and the advantages are, it is safe to say, beyond computation.—American Agriculturist.

LITERATURE.

The October number of "The Popular Science Monthly" closes the fifth volume of that very valuable periodical. It opens with "The Fossil Man of Mentone" which is followed by a paper on "Microscopic Architects." Prof Tyndall's Inaugural Address before the British Association for the advancement of science, delivered at Belfast, Aug. 29th, is given in full. This was one of the greatest efforts of this age, and commands the attentions of the world. Prof. Huxley's address before the same body—"Are Animals Automatons"—is also given in full, besides an incredible amount of scientific information, much of which cannot be obtained elsewhere.

"Scribner's Monthly" for adults and "St. Nicholas" for the children, together constitute a rich variety, of always interesting and entertaining household reading The illustrations are very fine and the literary matter is of a high order. The Nos. for October close the volumes, and thus affords a good opportunity for subscribers to commence with the volume, for which a brilliant prospectus is announced. For full sets of either, liberal reductions are offered

The Atlantic Monthly still maintains its high character as a literary periodical. Its fiction is of a pure order; its personal sketches are of persons of world renown; its poetry by the best living poets, in this number, by Bret Harte, Trowbridge, Thaxter and Hayne; its articles on philosophy are by men of unconbted ability; its criticisms sharp, dignified and impartial.

The Quaker City Publishing Company of Philadelphia Pa., has lately published a very valuable work entitled "Landmarks of Truth, or, Harmony of the Bible with Reason and Science," It is designed to form a complete defensive manual of the Bible,—an armor to the Christian, against the assaults of modern skepticism; establishing the truth of religion and the fundamental principles of Christianity. It is a work worthy of the confidence of every Christian, and every searcher after Truth. Agents are wanted.

Hurd and Houghton, of the Riverside Press, Cambridge Mass., are the publishers of the complete, unabridged, enlarged and corrected edition of Dr. William Smith's great Dictionary of the Bible. It comprises four volumes octavo, 3967 pages, and 599 illustrations; and forms the most complete work of the kind in the language.

MY CROSS.

"O Lord, my God!" I oft have said,
"Had I some other cross instead
Of this I bear from day to day,
'Twere easier to go on my way.

"I do not murmur at its weight;
That thou hast made proportionate
To my scant strength; but, oh! full sore
It presses where it pressed before.

"Change for a space, however brief,
The wonted burden, that relief
May o'er my aching shoulders steal,
And the deep bruise have room to heal!"

While thus I sadly sighed to-day,
I heard my gracious Father say,
"Canst thou not trust my love, my child,
And to thy cross be reconciled?

"I fashioned it thy needs to meet;
Nor were thy discipline complete
Without that very pain and bruise,
Which thy weak heart would fain refuse."

Ashamed I answered, "As thou wilt.
I own my faithlessness and guilt!
Welcome the weary pain shall be,
Since only that is best for me."

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

TWO SUBJECTS.

7. And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write: These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth and no man openeth:

8. I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9. Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.

10. Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11. Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

12. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name.

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches. Rev. 3:7-13.

I do not pretend to say that this languague of the Revelator was written prophetically, with a view, that in the lapse of ages it should be literally applied to our city of Philadelphia. We notice that the Philadelphia Church of Asia Minor held a distinguished position of faithfulness among the seven Churches, addressed in this scripture. We also notice, that the Church in our Philadelphia maintain some views and practices, with the utmost tenacity of purpose, and with great fidelity, as they assure us, that are almost entirely peculiar to themselves, and which it is not my purpose to call into question. Indeed I do not know but they are nearer right—more in harmony with the written word—when fairly understood than some of the rural Churches who are disposed to arraign them for non-conformity with the majority of the Churches of the Brotherhood. If I were to indulge in predictions, I would perhaps say that time will come, when the other churches will conform more nearly to the present practice of the Church at Philadelphia, because the Philadelphia standard seems to be founded upon a purely scriptural basis, and upon a reasonable and comprehensive policy of Church progress. If I am not in error, they practice the single mode in feet washing, and do not not require a uniformity of style in dress or wearing of the hair, neither do they cook or use any fresh meats in any manner, in the holding of their lovefeasts. I also observe that they do not make use of the scriptural mode of salutation in so discriminatine a manner as some of the more isolated rural churches do, probably restricting its use more to their lovefeast occasions. The object sought, most likely, in avoiding the preparation of fresh meats and soup at their lovefeasts, which can hardly be proven from the scripture, doubtless is to avoid all occasion for levity and loose talk about "soup." The liquids used, are coffee and tea usually, if I am correctly informed.

As to plainess of dress: I notice about as much difference between the Brethren and other congregations, in Philadelphia, as I do between the Brethren and other congregations in the country, yet to a country member, the city members look dressy, notably so, but taking their avocations and occupations into account, then they are fully up with the country standard in this respect also.

The Brethren of Philadelphia furnish to our periodicals as sound testimonies on all questions before the Churches, I am inclined to admit, as are furnished from any other quarter. The subject of a "Supported Ministry," recently examined by my esteemed brother Silas Thomas, is one that has exercised my mind for a long time, and upon which I have had much difficulty to arrive at what seemed to me a satisfatory opinion even. A settled conviction however may come by and by. So far as the Masters instructions go the idea conveyed by the word "hire" seems to be altogether inadmissable. He says that "the laborer is worthy of his meat." Paul uses the term "hire" and moreover, Paul neutralizes the force of his precepts, by the force of his example, to a great degree. But apart from the Scripture testimonies bearing upon this question of ministerial support, I believe it is a common consent understanding, that whenever the Church sends a minister upon any important work they furnish the means to cover his expenses. Now let me offer several practical queries.

First: Since all our preachers in the service now were selected with the understanding that they were to receive no "hire," is it perfectly fair and consistent for the Church to require more of them than was understood in the "bond" or for them to do less, since they were at liberty to decline this sacred office?

Second: Since the Brethren experience no kind of difficulty in providing or securing just as many ministers, upon old terms, as they can find use for, why burden the Churches to provide "support?"

Third: Since the Brethren provide, say, three ministers to perform the labor of one, who would put his whole time to the work, so dividing the burden and labor of the minister that it falls but little heavier upon him, than the labor of the deacon falls upon the deacon, have the advocates of "support" any just ground for what they claim, so far as home service goes?

Fourth: Since the Churches are thus exempt from the payment of "hire," why are not ministers sent into new localities to stay, in order to foster and build up new communities of believers, and to remain permanently with and to care for them, and those preachers assisted with "support?"

Fifth: Since almost nothing of this kind of work—"Sending"—is being done by the Brethren, isolated or congregated, at whose door will the delinquency lie?

Without decidedly espousing either side of this question, I desire, more especially to concern myself in regard to the facts as we all know them to exist in our midst, and if I see these in their true light I feel to apprehend the represented, oversbadowing importance of this, what shall I call it? A backward, or forward "departure?" as Bro. H. calls it.

One thing is certain, where we ask our Brethren to spend, the most, or all their time in a given work for the advancement of the best interests of Church and God's people, then we must support them, and if we fail to do so properly and cheerfully, we bring upon the Church and upon ourselves the just odium of a blasting shame, for our negligence and avarice. Debts will not half so soon keep a man out of heaven as covetiousness will. He is just who doeth justly.

Bring Jesus More into Home.

The little loving charities of daily life preached loudly for him who went about doing good. Bring Jesus into your home and your circumstances more than you have hitherto done. Things do not go on well in your household, perhaps, nor in your circumstances either. You wonder why it is. Wonder not. It is because you bring the Lord so little into them. How can it be otherwise, with him so little acknowledged? How can it be otherwise, when you are not cast upon him in all that pertains to you? Change your plan. Bring Jesus more into home, and plans, and duties, and circumstances. Live not on as you have done, realizing his presence so little. The name of Jesus is no mere fancy. He is a reality—a blessed reality. He is a bosom friend, a tender physician, a loving Father a gracious Savior, a very present helper. Oh, make him so to you. Live not outside of these precious relationships. How strangly will all things change then! How you will be lifted up above things that once fretted you and hung heavily upon your mind! How little appear the things which men are struggling after and panting for around you! You will rise above them into a new element. Try it! Bring Jesus more into everything. Tell him everything. Make him your constant friend and companion. Make him a reality. Only then will you begin to know him as you should. Only then will the unutterable preciousness of Jesus begin to unfold itself in your heart.

It seems sometimes a long way off to the blessed day the prophet speaks of, when in the common affairs of daily life, "Holiness to the Lord," shall be the watchword and motto. Yet day by day, the number of those who walk by faith increases, and the light of the great salvation spreads. Do you seek to help forward the glorious time. Let this motto be yours, and by patient, loving, true and joyful following of Christ, you will aid in spreading scriptural holiness over all these lands. "Taste and see that the Lord is good." Drink yourself of the fountain of life, be wholly the Lord's, and then with joy tell the glad story of the great salvation.

We should not only break the teeth of malice by forgiveness, but pluck out its sting by forgetfulness.

The bread of life is love; the sweetness of life, poetry; the water of life, faith.

MORE ABOUT FEET-WASHING.

As the subject of feetwashing seems to be agitating the minds of some of the brethren, and while some are asking for information on the subject, others seem to differ with the ideas advanced, but this is all right, for I hope that we "do nothing through strife or vain glory, but in lowliness of mind: each esteeming others better than themselves," "in honor preferring one another."

Then as feetwashing is not esteemed a command by some of our religious friends, and thinking that it does not receive as much attention from our brethren as it should, I purpose to investigate the subject, critically, not for any motive of controversy, but for the purpose of vindicating the truth as I understand it, and a final conclusion on my part.

In the first place then, let us examine or notice the object of the command. Like all other commands, it has its purpose, and that object is to test our simplicity, our fidelity, or rather our humility, and by practicing we vindicate our faith in the Lord. A circumstance that we just now think of was an ample reason for the command or lesson that is taught by the example. The disciples at one time disputed among themselves who should be the greatest. "Jesus called them unto him and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you, but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister, and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." Matt. 20: 25—27.

Now this certainly is reason enough for a lesson tending to humiliate; and after it is introduced Christ says, "If I then"—take notice—"If I your Lord and Master have washed your feet ye" certainly "ought to wash one another's feet," for "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the servant is not greater than his Lord." This plainly shows the level that all christians should be on, none should be the greatest, but even those that would seem to be the greatest should be humble enough to stoop down and wash his brother's feet, the humblest part of the body, and the very act, stooping, is humiliating of itself.

Peter understood it to be humiliating, and thought it to be too humiliating for his Lord to stoop down and wash his feet, and said, "thou shalt never wash my feet." But Jesus answered him, "if I wash thee not thou hast no part with me." When Peter understood this, he was willing to be washed all over if need be, "but Jesus saith he that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit."

In the above, Jesus uses the term "Lord and Master" to more fully impress upon the mind what he had done, and if the "Lord and Master" stooped and washed feet, we certainly ought not to be above that level, and it is our opinion that all professers that have elevated themselves above that level, will finally be abased far below it.

Now as we have in our weakness endeavored to show the object of feet washing, we come more fully to the point of argument that our brother H. C. H. makes, which we will proceed to notice and then pass along.

We say the point, as we only notice one point that he makes, and that is this: "For I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you," that is wash feet. The brother insists that "the command is to wash, and not to be washed." This is all very true, yet we fail to see any force of argument here. The command was given to wash simply because it could not be given in any other term, and imply what it was intended for. If it would have been given "to be washed," then all would have to be washed and none to wash. "To be washed," would not be humiliating, but on the contrary, it would be dignifying. Yet when we as a body wash feet, whether every individual member washes or not, we have washed feet and it is all humiliating alike, and wiping is identical to washing.

When the Lord came to Peter and he refused to be washed, he said "If I wash thee not thou hast no part with me." The argument here seems to be on the part of being washed, hence we conclude that being washed, so that we "are clean every whit" is highly necessary whether we really wash or not. Now allow us to notice our brother's position a little farther. He notices that Christ says we must do just as he done. If the brother will be so very precise, perhaps he would have to wipe the feet that he washes—and possibly about a dozen too,—just as Christ did. Then we could not all wash every time. Now then as no one would be willing to take the responsibility and say, I your Lord and Master wash your feet just as Christ did, we feel to submit to the judgment of our old brethren, and as they have taught and practiced for many years past. Still we can find no fault in all washing, if it can be so done, yet our position is that it is not so particularly necessary when it is not convenient, and the reasons given above are the grounds for such conclusions. We say when it is not convenient, and will give the reasons. Here in the West where we have large churches and where three to five hundred members commune together, it is not convenient, because it is very much crowded, and to change so many times would consume too much time. As we have it, it takes to a very late hour in the night to get through with the services, and old brethren of experience say that it could not be conveniently done.

The brother thinks if his notion is not carried out some may pass away without ever practicing the command in full. We do not see any force of argument there, from the fact that some do not come into the church at all, and pass away. Some, after they become members, are not so zealous as others, do not attend meetings as regular, and do not go to as many communions &c. That is no fault of the church or any command, but it is their own fault, and theirs alone. There are still other points that we thought to treat but finding that our article is already too lengthy, we submit it to all concerned, and especially to brother H. for whom we have the kindest regard, and hope he will exercise the same charity towards his unworthy brother.

J. B. LAIR.

Christ at the Heart's Door.

JESUS CHRIST sometimes gives the last knock. Where? We answer, at the door of human hearts. For the human heart is likened in the Word of God to a house. One heart-house may be compared to a lordly castle, difficult to take, but a stronghold for the truth when captured. Another is a broad capacious mansion: another a lowly thatched cottage. Each heart has room in it for various afflictions and passions—room for pride, for ambition, for love, for fear, for selfishness, for unbelief. Each heart-house has room for the Lord Jesus. The very lowliest creature may become a temple of God through his indwelling spirit.

To that dwelling-place of sin, an unconverted human soul, the blessed Savior cometh in his condescending love. His own tender call is, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock?" He stands at the door in patient importunity. If no answer is given, he waits and knocks again and again. He tries various doors, and every method of knocking. At some sinner's heart-door he has lately knocked by a powerful, thrilling sermon, that rang through every appartment. At another, by a gentle knock—a still small voice of conscience, that reminded the ungrateful one of his guilty ingratitude. At another heart lately there has come the startling knock of affliction. The cry of sorrow, the wail for the dead, has resounded through those chambers. At some stout man's stubborn heart Christ made himself heard in the voice of a wife's pleading prayer; at another, in the touch of the little hand of a sick or dying child. By scores of various methods the loving Jesus knocks at impenitent hearts.

"He gently knocks, has knocked before.
Has waited long, is waiting still;
You treat no other friend so ill."

As the last knock of the divine visitant may soon be heard at the heart's door of some of my impenitent readers I beseech you to "hear his voice and open the door" to the Lord of light and glory. This is my message to you. Christ shut out of the heart will be a condemning Judge. Christ within the heart will prove a faithful and almighty friend. Your first duty is to open the door to him, and at once.

This implies activity on your part. You are not to remain passive and quiescent. Christ never compels a man to be a Christian in spite of himself—never breaks into a heart with the violence that denies all liberty of choice. He addresses you as a free agent. He says, "If you will hear my voice and open the door I will come in" to you. He does not tell you to wait for more light; for he is himself the light of the world, and will bring illumination with his coming. The willingness to obey him will be attended with a discernment of the path of obedience. "If any man will do my will, he shall know of my doctrine"—i. e., of my teachings.

He does not require you to wait for deeper convictions, or distressing compunctions. What does a sinner need to know and feel in order to admit Jesus into his soul? He needs to know that he is a sinner, that he deserves to be punished, that he cannot save himself, that he requires a divine Savior: and there is one already waiting and willing to save him. You know all this already. Deeper convictions never came by waiting for them. Your duty is to admit the knocking Jesus instantly. And when you do honestly begin to obey Jesus, and try to serve him, you will make discoveries of the hardness, and waywardness, and guiltiness of your heart such as you never knew before. "When I did resolve to become a Christian," said an intelligent person once to her pastor, "I found that my heart would not yield. I discovered that I was such a sinner that I could not convert myself. I gave that up, and cried to God for mercy and help. A while after that I began to be at peace. I did nothing for myself; but it seems as if when I gave all up, and cried to God for help, he did everything for me." This was the first chapter in the history of a useful life. This person opened the door to Jesus; and his omnipotent grace did the work of discovering her sin to herself, and of renewing her heart from sin to godliness.

Pray do not suppose that, if the holy Jesus comes into your soul to abide there, he will allow you to keep all those long sheltered sins in the same dwelling with him. You must turn out that accursed selfishness and that grasping covetousness. If dishonest gains are hid there, you must disgorge them. If old enmities and malicious grudges toward your kinsfolk or neighbors are festering in any closet of the heart, Christ will not dwell in such company. Nor will there be room there for your brandy-bottle, or your pack of cards, or any illicit harlotries, or sensual indulgence of any description. The sin that shuts Jesus from the soul will damn that soul; remember that! He comes into the human heart only as a purifier and refiner; unless you are ready to repent of and hurl out the long-harbored iniquities which have held unclean orgies in those chambers, the divine visitant cannot dwell within you. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

Methinks that, as I write these few beseeching lines to my impenitent friends, I seem to see the blessed Jesus knocking at some heart-door in tender compassion. He knocks with a hand that was pierced through upon the cross—a hand that never wearies. He has great gifts for you—gifts of pardon, grace, strength, peace, and eternal joy. Through the barred and bolted door he speaks to you, "I will come in and sup with you." And back through that door goes your impatient reply, "do not interrupt me. I am busy—busy with my work. I have no time to think of religion; when I have a convenient season, I will call for you."

So he lingers. He has lingered about that closed door a long, long time. He lingered through your youth, and has lingered through the prime of your sinful, guilty life. He waited for you through many a revival-season. He has knocked sometimes with loud, startling summons, that sound as if they came from a sick-room, a dying chamber, or an open grave! But no voice from within bids him welcome.

By and by he will come and knock again for the last time. The sweet voice of patient love will be heard for the last time, saying, "Behold, I stand at this heart and knock. If thou wilt hear my voice and open to me I will come in and dwell with thee and thou with me." He retires to come no more. Presently another footstep is heard approaching! It is the swift-coming step of death! You start up in terror. You open the door. You look out for the long-waiting-Savior. You call for him with piercing cry. Alas! he is gone! He gave his last knock, and left you forever!

For the Pilgrim.

The Sabbath.

This subject has been somewhat agitated in our papers, but by some means it has died away. The Sabbath was created in the begining, and we understand the word Sabbath to mean rest, for on this day, God rested from all his works. He blessed this day and hallowed it. Now the question arises here, is the Sabbath which God blessed and hallowed binding on us now in the gospel dispensation. If it is, we should keep this day of the week.

I shall in this essay give all the evidence I am capable of giving at the present time in favor of the seventh day which God blessed and hallowed. Has the Sabbath or seventh day been changed to the first day of the week by the authority of God? This is the question that ought to be investigated, ought to be settled by a fair investigation of God's Holy Truth. Why has this subject been so much neglected by the brethren? It is not for the want of intelligence, but perhaps on account of an indifference to the subject.

By reading the Bible we find the Sabbath observed down until Christ. We find Him observing this day, we find His keeping this is the days of Paul. Now for the testimony. And He came to Nazareth, where He was brought up and as His custom was He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day and stood up for to read." Luke 4: 16.

Luke 4: 30, 31, (see also Mark 1: 21.) "But He passing through the midst of them, went His way, and came down to Capernaum, a city of Gallilee and taught them on the Sabbath day."

Luke 15: 10. "And he was reaching in one of the synagoges on the Sabbath."

Mark 3: 1, 2. (when He healed the withered hand.)

Mark 6: 2. "And when the Sabbath day was come, He began to teach in the synagogue."

The apostles also honored the Sabbath day. Examine Acts 15: 14. 13: 44. 14: 1. 16: 13. also 17: 2 again Acts 18: 4. Here in this chapter we have Paul preaching every Sabbath day for one year and six months, which will make about seventy Sabbaths in succession.

Examine the above Scriptures carefully and you will find that once discovering that Christ and the apostles honored this day. We also find in Luke 23: 56. Here the woman rested on the Sabbath according to the commandments.

Now the question is can we find one solitary apostolic example of unnecessary labor performed on the seventh day? We think not. Can we find where Christ or his apostles said this day would cease to exist. We think not. Christ has very plainly intimated the contrary.

But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, or the Sabbath day. Matth. 24: 20.

The flight here spoken of to take place about the time of the destruction of Jerusalem. It seems to me if Christ had any allusion to the first day of the week He would not have said Sabbath. Now if he knew that the Sabbath day would be changed into the first day of the week forty years before the event, He had just alluded to, why did he speak of it as a thing that would at that time. that is, the time of the destruction of Jerusalem be in existance.

Now did the apostles when they spake of the Sabbath mean the the first day of the week? If they did they did not call it Sabbath.

We will notice some remarks in brother J. H. Moore's article on the Sabbath. We have the first day of the week, John 20: 19 This meeting of Christ and His disciples was on the first day of the week, and eight days after they met again. Let us examine this and see who is correct I or brother Moore. Eight days after the day they met, I understand eight days after the first day. This is correct or I cannot understand the language. Supposing we say eight days after Sunday. Count for yourselves, where could it bring us to? Monday. Just eight days after this is plain to every one of you.

They met on what we call Sunday and eight days after would be Monday. I do not wish to dispute Bro. Moore's word, but say to all to examine the word of God on the subject of the Sabbath.

We often hear it said that Christ abolished the old law and therefore the Sabbath ceased to exist. We know when he was crucified, ceremonial law ceased, but the ten commandments, what about them? Nine of them we claim to be binding yet.

Now the question is, when and where did Christ pull the fourth commandment out of the ten and abolish it? Why do we claim that Christ and His apostles set aside the Sabbath? Why obey nine and disobey the tenth? These are questions which I ask our intelligent brethren to answer. I appeal to you to investigate the matter. The seventh day is the day to observe, or is it not. If it is we should obey it. If not, then we know what day to observe, the first day.

Brethren some of you certainly know when the day was changed and by whom it was changed.

I will leave the matter with you hoping to hear from some of you. I heard a man remark of the brethern that they lived nearer to the simplicity of the apostle doctrine, but they kept the Pope Sunday.

May God guide his people in the way of truth, is my prayer.

A Few Thoughts.

We have now seen the third letter from Julia A. Wood of W. Va., and find that she has at last concluded to join our little band, and travel with us. We are not personally acquainted with her, nevertheless we feel like recognizing her letter. Truly we can say we are glad to read such letters. They are encouraging to us. Her language would impress us with the idea that her faith is strong, and that she is not entering into this great work without forethought. We would also suppose from the reading of her letters, that none can say, "her friends pursuaded her," for it appears that there are no brethren near where she lives. It may be she has opposition. Perhaps the finger of scorn is being pointed at her. We think that we have a knowledge of the effects of such things, and are sorry now that we allowed it to wound so deeply, sorry that we allowed it to cause the heart to ache, and the tear to trinkle down the cheek. We know that such things are not agreeable, rather the reverse, but if we reflect a little we will certainly not be so sensitive in regard to such things. Look back to the time when our Savior wore the crown of thorns, when he was spit upon and buffetted, how calmly He endured it all. Truly the path sometimes is rough. Dark clouds gather and hover around, but soon again sunshine disperses them, and our path is brighter than ever. There are thorns and thistles in the way, but frequently we find a rose. Let us pluck the roses, and with patient hand remove the briars from our way, toiling on cheerfully, not forgetting that "labor sweeteus rest." We are glad to see others turning in with us. We hope they will not cease to come to the Vineyard and labor, for we know our labor is not in vain in the Lord. Let us try and influence others. Perhaps we think because we are not of the hand we are not of the body. Some may think because they do not preach they can do nothing. Let us not come to this conclusion, for we can loudly speak by our actions. We are all casting an influence around us; let this be for good. Little deeds of kindness sometimes will sink deeper, and make impressions more lasting than words spoken by great men. This we can all do. Speak gently to the erring, remembering that "to err is human," and that we too are in danger.

We know not what we can do, and if trial is not made we never will know. We should exert ourselves and try to be more useful. There are many talents lying dormant, undeveloped which if trial were made, would benefit the occupants, and also those around them. but we fail to improve them, or even to make an attempt; we should cultivate the mind, cultivate the good thoughts, but the evil ones cast aside. Brians need no cultivation, they are the natural production of the earth, but grain must be cultivated in order to produce well. Let us try to cultivate more of a charitable nature among us, more of a forgiving nature, not exposing one another's weaknesses. If we see a fault in another, let us not point it out to others, tell of some good trait, the evil will be found out soon enough. Better not speak at all than to speak ill of any one. Let us have more charity for our fellow beings. Some persons are more unfortunate than others, while the faults of one seem to be exposed, easily observed, those of others are easily concealed, so that none of us have anything to boast of Be kind to all, for in this way we may win souls to Christ.

Fulfilment of Prophecy.

Egypt shall be a desolation and Edom shall be a desolate wilderness for the violence against the children of Judah, because they have shed innocent blood in their land. Joel 3: 19.

To the inquiring mind this portion of prophecy will give rise to many confectures. Why was the doom of that populous and wealthy land so vividly portrayed? Why were those mighty works of art that had been accumulating for centuries, to be swept into oblivion, and lie entombed beneath the very dust upon which they had been reared? Because they have shed innocent blood in their land, saith the prophet, and has the prophecy been fulfiled? Yes in every sense of the word, the desolation and poverty of the land to day stands forth in bold contrast, when compared with the prosperity of it, when ruled by the Pharisees. It is justly termed the land of antiquities, and scientific researches among its buried ruins award to Egypt the prominence given to it in the ancient history of the world. Hundreds of years before Christ, the pen of inspiration had written her history and her doom pronounced by that God who rules and overrules the destinies of the nations of the earth. "They shall be a base kingdom." "Behold I am against thee and against thy rivers and I will make the land of Egypt utterly waste and desolate from the tower Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia." Egypt is supposed to have derived its name from Ham, one of the sons of Noah, and hence in the Bible it is often spoken of as the land of Ham. The Hebrews call it Mizraim from one of the sons of Ham who was the father of the Egyptians. To the antiquarian, Egypt presents many attractions, and viewed in connection with the prophecies against it, he will behold the literal fulfillment of the same. Her buried cities and fallen statutes attest, in silent eloquence, the vanity of human greatness and the uncertainty of human hopes where existence and dominion are alone based upon the intelligence and refinement of the masses. He may walk over the buried ruins of On and Nopn and strange voices will be heard amid their desolate solitudes. Ancient tablets will speak to him and tombs be eloquent with sermons and information, and amid all the ruin and desolation noticeable at every step, behold the hand-writing of God and trace the foot-prints of the Deity.

"Oh all-preparing Providence, divine,
In thy large book what secrets are enrolled,
What sundry helps doth thy great power assign,
To prop the course which thou intendest to hold."

O, mighty land of Egypt, what wonders dost thou unfold at every step! Thy history is worthy the study of every student of the Bible. Strange events have transpired in thee. Thou wast visited by Abraham, ages ago, he who lived and communed with Shem, Shem reaching back before the flood. In thee the infant Jesus and his parents found a safe retreat from the vengence of a jealous king. Unburnt bricks brought to light from the ruins attest to the fact of Israel's bondage. Thy towering pyramids assert that ambition occupied a prominent place in the imaginary dreams of the ancients, and reflecting on thy past and present condition we are led to exclaim with the Psalmist; "Vanity of vanities all is vanity." One Deed of Good.

"If I might do one deed of good,—
One little deed before I die;
Or think one noble thought that should Hereafter not forgotten lie:
I would not murmur, tho' I must Be lost in death's unnumbered dust."
—F. W BOURDILLON, in the London Spectator.

Well, dear Sir, pray why not up and do that one deed? As to thinking the thought, that may be a harder matter, and unless you let it out, we do not see the use of it. But do the deed; that's easy enough, and if your dust will lie more quietly for doing it, why worry about it; just do it.

The truth is that thousands of people,—not little poets only,—are wishing, they could do something; talking about it, sighing about it,—even like this man, professing to be willing to die about it, but never doing anything, when the world is full of opportunities, everything to be done, the harvest ripe and laborers few!

Unless a tree has borne blossoms in spring, you will vainly look for fruit on it in autumn.

Silence is the perfectest herald of joy; we were but little happy if we could say how much.

Reverence the highest, have patience with the lowest. Let this day's performance of the meanest duty be thy religion.

The best thing which we derive from history is the enthusiasm that it raises in us.

Borrowing Trouble.

At our Annual Conference held in the Clover Creek Congregation, Blair Co., Pa., there were, seemingly, several important queries presented for deliberation, but, as is our misfortune, they only had existence in the mind of some over fearful brethren who were laboring to suppress a supposed evil before it came. After some discussion we remember of Eld. D. P. Sayler remarking; "Brethren, you are trying to prop up the Heavens before you have any evidence that they are going to fall." This manner of meeting trouble half way is not in harmony with the spirit of our avowed principles, it is an unwarrentable aggression and involves us into many difficulties. There is no truer saying than, "a preventive is better than a cure," but to apply the adage there must be a certainty that disease is generating, not only so, but in addition to this knowledge there must be an absolute certainty as to the nature and character of the disease, or else the preventive may be unwisely applied, and thus prove dangerous and even fatal in its results. Exactly so may this theory prove in things relating to the Church. We are too much disposed to accept and maintain fearful apprehensions which have no real existence except in the minds of those who generate or bring them about. We have known persons who were, in every way, well provided for and most favorably circumstanced in life, take it into their minds that they were destined to come into want, and to obviate so unfavorable a condition, introduce a most strict system of economy. This is propping up the heavens before there are any indications of them falling and meeting trouble, not half way, but going after it and even begging for it.

So it seems to us it is with us as a Church. That we are beset with danger on every side is an evident fact, but notwithstanding we know this and also know that it requires our united strength to withstand the pressure brought to bear against us, yet we are disposed to go a borrowing, seeking after troubles that otherwise might never reach us. We sometimes hear brethren prophesy as to what will come to pass perhaps fifty years hence, and then to destroy the fulfilment of their own predictions, commence a warfare against it. This is equivalent to beating our swords against the wind, the time has not come, no enemy to fight, but it is begging the question, courting trouble and agitating for war.

There are things that seem to be threatening our peace, but we should carefully discriminate between those having a tangible or real existence and those that have not. We admire the carefulness with which our brethren are watching the innovations that are urged upon us, and we cannot be too careful to nip them in the bud when we are fully persuaded that our conclusions are true. But to do these things indiscriminately is dangerous work, as by so doing we may destroy the good with the bad. The good and bad grow so closely together sometimes that there are circumstances under which our Savior has commanded to let them grow up together, not because he wishes to show respect to the bad, but because he would rather suffer with it than run the risk of injuring the good in the act of destroying it. It should ever be remembered that in our over zeal in fighting against the evil, we may unintentionally greatly impede the growth of some vital good yet in an embryo state.

Just now, the subject of a paid ministry is seriously agitating the minds of some, and because a brother who acts prominently in the school movement has unfortunately expressed himself rather freely on the above subject, the cry is, away with the school, if such are the first-fruits, what may we not expect when once in operation and under the control of such brethren? The merits or demerits of the subject of a paid ministry it is not at all our intention at this time to discuss, but that the school move should suffer on account of the private opinion of one, relative to the ministry is unfair, as it must be admitted that such ideas can, in no way, be the outgrowth of a school which as yet has no existence. They are claimed to have their origin from careful deliberations upon the tenor and spirit of the Gospel. If the brother has not the Scriptures on his side, it becomes those who see it thus, in the spirit of Christian charity, to show him his error by giving some thing that has more Scripture in its favor, and that too, through the same medium by which his views were put before the public, as we would prefer not at this time to discuss that question at any length. While brother Holsinger, in his "Serious Departure," may be in one extreme, there are others just as far in the other extreme, and as one extreme must produce another, there should not be more blame attached to the one party than the other. Brethren should not take the responsibility of ignoring that which God intended for good because the devil is using it for evil. That a school among the brethren means a paid ministry and a hundred other evils prophesied, has no real existence, save in the mind of those who have come to these conclusions, therefore such fears are a little like proping up the heavens before there is any evidence of them falling. Hence we think it unsafe to suppose certain things and then offer them as real, and as supports to our argument. An argument based on suppositions is like a house built upon the sand, it must fall, and when brethren resort to such means to prop up an argument for or against any cause, it looks to us, very much like borrowing trouble. We are made to feel sorry that we are so disposed to jump at conclusions and hope that henceforth we will all be more careful in judging the motives of our brethren for whom Christ died. Let us cultivate more charitable opinions of each other, believing that we are all actuated by a desire to accomplish good and to promote the cause of our blessed Master. Let us ever be ready to meet the enemy and defend the gates, but there is no necessity of borrowing trouble by seeking after it while yet afar off, sufficient for the day is the evil thereof.

Evening Thoughts.

Every body desires a good paper but all are not exactly agreed on what it takes to make a good paper, yet on a whole, as to the general character of what it should be, we agree as nearly as possible under existing circumstances. We just now wonder if our readers ever thought of what a wonderful change would be necessary in order to think alike and desire the same things. When we look at the millions of human beings in the world and consider that there are scarcely two that think alike, we are astounded and the great wonder is that we agree so well as we do. For us all to think alike there would a number of impossible things be necessary. First, exactly the same organization bodily, and subsist on the same food. Secondly, be surrounded by the same circumstance, and receive the same impression by a reception of the same information. Thirdly, receive the same physical and intellectual development. As by the nature of things, and fortunately too, for us, we can be thus brought up. It is quite a satisfaction to know that notwithstanding the millions of different developments in the world, we harmoniously agree in many things and such things too as afford us most enjoyment. But how our thoughts have been drifting from our subject! As we all possess more or less of the Athenian Spirit, we desire something new, something that adds to our store of knowledge, something that strikes us forcibly enough to make impressions and leave them too. There is such a thing as eating for the sake of eating, it is enjoyable because it leaves a pleasant sensation upon our sense of taste, independent of the effects that may result therefrom. Just so it is in reading. There is a kind of reading that produces pleasant sensations while in the act of reading but it is of such a character as to leave no impression by addition, it simply gratifies a kind of an abnormal condition of the mind by enlarging abnormal cravings, thus increasing our capacities for the enjoyment of such sensation without adding a particle to our stock of knowledge. This is very much less than redeeming time, it is a positive loss to the person, to the society and to God. These things we have carefully considered and we endeavor, as much as possible, to give our readers, such reading as may be interesting, instructive and beneficial. In accomplishing this very desirable work, we gratefully acknowledge the generous assistance of our many contributors. Of late, we made a little extra effort in that direction and as a result our Pilgrim seems to be infused with new life. Brethren and sisters, continue the good work. If you see anything good being done in God's vineyard, communicate it to us, and we will tell thousands of other anxious hearts who are almost starving for just such information. The more familiar we become with each other, the more we talk together about our hopes and fears, the stronger will become our attachment.

Then do not withhold anything, even if it should be but a crumb. Poor Lazarus would have been glad for a few crumbs from the rich man's table, but he would not even grant so much. How much better are some of us who enjoy such plentiful repasts from the Lord? Have we not got many crumbs that are wasting while poor Lazarus is starving? Oh, sweep them up carefully and send them along, the Master hath need for them to feed his hungry children. Do not fear of overstocking us. If we can not give it whole we can cream it. If every brother and sister would thus come to our aid it would so infuse the Pilgrim with "The Life" that "The Power" would accompany it on its mission and thousands of homes that are now hungering after the "Bread of Life" might be filled.

Praying to be Heard.

Not long ago we picked up a sheet of paper that had been accidentally dropped, and the contents attracted our attention. It was a written prayer, and one too, in manner of expression and arrangement that indicated considerable thought, but as to whether it expressed the feelings of the writer we had considerable doubt. By the hand writing we knew the author, and the circumstances that brought about this preparation was something like this: The young man had entered a community in which the external forms of religion were amongst the prominent things, and having a great desire for popularity and general applause, he used every effort to throw himself into the good graces of the persons with whom he now expected to associate. His former life, though not really bad, did not indicate much concern about the subject of religion, but had there been a perceptible internal change, we should have rejoiced. This however was not apparent, and judging the tree by the fruits, we suppose the object of that written prayer was to make a favorable impression on those in attendance at the next prayer meeting as to his natural abilities This really seemed to be the central object, and it is likely that it was written more to be heard of men than of God. Does studied eloquence strike God favorably? Does he smile upon the golden mouthed, and frown upon the stammering tongue? No! God looketh to none of these things. He looketh to the heart, and if our hearts are filled with love and gratitude to Him we can find a few words at least to express it without writing it on paper, or reading it from a prayer book. "Lord teach us how to pray," should be the earnest entreaty of every Christian heart, and if we come to Him and talk to Him directly, He will teach us. True prayer is the earnest longing desire of the soul. God knows our feelings, and if we ask in mockery to hear our fine words, because we can talk well, or to be heard of men, what will be the result? Oh! God from such hypocrisy deliver us and may such who are in the habit of making special preparation, having this object in view, stop and think. The thought of approaching God in mere form should cause you to shudder and fear, because He is insulted and the spirit is grieved. It is the duty of every Christian to engage in public, prayer at certain times, yet if it is not done with a full purpose of heart, but for mere show, Christ says they have their reward. "But when thou prayest enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret." Here is the place where the true Christian will often hold sweet communion with His God, and where he does not feel the need of a written prayer, or prayer book. We have great faith in secret prayer. We have heard persons say that Christ did not mean that we should enter a retired place to pray, that it has reference to the heart, and that we should have the door of our hearts closed when we pray. It is certainly so that our hearts should be wholly given to God while in prayer, but the Savior was in this instance condemning the pharisees for performing external religious actions in an ostentatious manner. In giving their alms, they done it in too public a manner, and if Christ meant that they should conceal this act from public gaze, he also meant that our persons should be in a retired or concealed place for secret prayer. What is meant in one instance is meant in the other, and it is not at all apparent to us that Christ meant the door of the heart when he reproved the public exhibition of the giving of alms. Let us therefore have our places for secret devotion and resort to them frequently, for here unseen and unheard by the world our hearts are turned pure and warm to God. J. B. E.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

A WEE ONE'S MORNING PRAYER.

The morning bright,
With rosy light,
Has waked me from my sleep;
Father, I own
Thy love alone
Thy little one doth keep.

All through the day,
I humbly pray,
Be thou my guard and guide,
My sins forgive,
And let me live,
Blest Jesus, near thy side.

O, make thy rest
Within my breast,
Great Spirit of all grace!
Make me like thee,
Then I shall be Prepared to see thy face.

The Old Clock.

One Sabbath day Arthur was left at home alone, while all the rest of the family attended church. Instead of regarding the day as he should, in the quiet perusal of the Bible and other good books, he made it a day of self-amusement. As soon as all were gone, Arthur began to search all the curious nooks and corners in the time-honored dwelling. The garret was explored and many rare curiosities exhumed. Ancient desks and drawers were examined, revealing their curious contents to his impertinent and childish curiosity.

An old clock stood in one corner, with a tall, gaunt, brown case. Within this dark, hollow closet, Arthur had often peered, but he had not been allowed to examine very closely the mysteries of the clock case. Now was a fine opportunity. He opened the narrow door. The long pendulum was swinging back and forth at regular intervals with a loud tick, tick, tick, tick. Two large cylindrical tin weights, and two very little lead weights, were hanging by small cords.

Arthur had often seen his father "wind up the clock," and he knew it was done by pulling down the little weights. "It would be rare sport," he thought, "to wind up the old clock." He would make the attempt, at any rate. So, taking hold of the small weights, he tugged away right manfully. The wheels purred, and the great weights began to rise.

"Faster," said Arthur, "go up faster," and giving a sudden pull the cord broke, and down came the heavy weight with a loud noise. Then there was a terrible whirring among the clock wheels for a moment, and then it stopped. The ticking ceased, and the pendulum stood still.

"Oh, what have I done now?" cried Arthur, in distress. "Oh, what will father say to me when he sees what I have done?" Arthur closed the clock door, and for the remainder of the day, until his parents returned, was a very humble, quiet boy.

When his father returned, on looking at the old clock, he perceived that it had stopped. Opening the clock door, he saw that the cord of one of the weights had broken, and that the weight had fallen to the bottom of the case.

"How is this, Arthur; did you know that the clock is stopped?"

"Yes, sir," replied Arthur. "I heard a great noise in the clock case, and when I went and looked in, behold it was silent."

Mr. Milton made no more inquiries, supposing that it was an accidental occurrence. Night came, and little Arthur went to bed as usual. His father had tied the cord, and the clock was ticking as loudly as ever. It seemed to say, in the silence of the night:

"Boy! boy! boy!" A lie! a lie! a lie!" "Own it! own it! own it!"

Arthur did not sleep much. Conscience whispered to him, and with the words of the old clock, said: "Arthur, you have told a lie."

Early in the morning he arose and gazed up in the face of the old clock. It looked very sternly at him. "Quick! quick! quick! quick!" said the clock. So the poor boy went to his father and told him all with a very sorrowful heart. His father freely forgave him. And he prayed that God would forgive him, and never suffer him to tell a lie again.

Dear children, never tell an untruth. Lying is a low, mean vice, and very wicked.—Chris. Press.

School Children In Germany.

Would my little friends like me to tell them something about the school children in Germany, how they are taught, and how much study is required from them? In the pleasant summer time their school begins at half-past seven o'clock in the morning; in the winter at eight o'clock. When I come from my room in the morning at half past seven o'clock, I find the streets of our city quite full of little folks, on their way to the school house. At this early hour many of the children in America are fast asleep in their beds, not even dreaming of books and study.

The rules of the German schools are very strict. If any boys or girls are late, for even one moment, they are obliged to remain at their books one hour after the school is dismissed. Children are not excused with a half learned lesson.

The number of school hours in the public or day schools—about which I am telling you—is seven. But a tardy pupil has to stay still longer.

Now, I dare say you think a child who has to go from home as early in the morning should have a very nice warm breakfast at any rate. I will tell you what they get: A large piece of brown bread; sometimes a little butter and a cup of coffee; as a great treat, a roll of white bread. Perhaps at eleven o'clock; after two or three hours at school, they come home just long enough to get a second piece of brown bread, then back again to their books. Usually, they have their plain dinner of meat and vegetables at one o'clock, and go to the school for another three hours.

I wish I could send you a picture of these little children on their way to school. They never carry books in the hand, but put them in a kind of square, stiff box, which is fastened on the back by shoulder straps, like a soldier's knapsack. This knapsack serves two purposes. It keeps the shoulders straight, and leaves the hands quite free to roll a hoop or play ball.

The German children of the better class do not have as many pleasures and privileges as our little folks at home, but they seem very happy. How much spending money do you have in the week, dear child? In Germany, if a boy or girl gets six krentzers a week, he is happy, if twenty, he is rich. Six krentzers are about four of our cents. With one krentzer a child can buy here a small cake or piece of white bread, or some little toy.

The children are almost without exception good scholars. Very many of them speak and write English as well as their own language, and they are very proud at being able to do this. Then, again, you must know, that usually they are very well-mannered children. The boys all touch their caps when they meet older people, and it is a rare thing to see a rude child in the street. On Saturday afternoon you can find them everywhere, walking or driving in the little German carriages, with their parents. From what I have seen of these children, I think them very studious and very happy, and quite contented with their few and simple pleasures as our dear ones are in America, where so much is done to give them pleasure, and make them bright and good.—Christian Weekly.

BUFFALO, COL., September 13, '74.

We last wrote from Estus' Park in the Rocky Mountains. The night of the 2d of September quite a little snow fell in the Park, the mountains were clothed in a mantle of white. We had no trouble to gather snow and summer flowers with the same hand, which beats those who have said they could gather snow in those mountains with one hand and flowers with the other. During the day we took a drive in the Park, which is an extent of country hemmed in by lofty mountains, among them Jame's and Long's Peak, the latter over 14.000 feet high. Fine luxuriant grass make the surface of the Park look like a meadow. Pine trees are rather profusely scattered over the ground. A large lake, springs, and running streams are found in the Park. It was too cold to think of ascending Longs' Peak. All of the party, except my wife, ascended some rugged peaks hundreds of feet high, from the top of which we could see the surrounding lofty mountains the tops of which were often hid in the clouds. Occasionally we could, through a rent in the clouds, see the top of Longs' Peak towering far above us. Some of our party came to Colorado a few months ago invalids, unable for actual exercise, but now climb steep and craggy cliffs and return and "feel no harm." So much for the healthy climate of Col. Our days "pleasure" brot us a good nights rest, next morning we "pulled up stakes" and bid adieu to this renound resort. We may speak of the wonders of the scenery, say it is inconceivably majestic, picturesque and sublimely grand. Language cannot portray the amazing and indescribable impressiveness of the awe-inspiring scenes that breaks upon the view in the grandeur of those mountains, and yet the "half is not told." As well try to describe God in the Universe, as to describe his handiwork in those mighty mountains.

On our return we came across abundance of cherries, plumbs and grapes. We gathered what we wanted and arrived at brother Patterson's, near Longmont, Saturday p. m. Two meetings next day,—good attendance, Monday one meeting, two additions by baptism. In the evening one came to where we were and wanted to be baptized before I left, next morning early, another made application for baptism. On our way, coming to water, we baptized them and then came on to Greely the same day. Bro. and sister Myers and the two sisters the day previous left us taking another route in search of fruit, expecting to get to Greely some days later than we. We tarried one day at Greely then set out for home, arrived here last evening and found our children whom we had left to keep house, all well, thanks to the Lord for his goodness.

When we left Longmont the grasshoppers were leaving, at Greely they were gone; here they done but little damage, only remaining a few days. We neglected to mention in the proper place that we had a pleasant visit at the house of friend Rou-nion near Longmont. In his orchard we saw fine apples and pears growing. He is an old settler, so called, having lived in Colorado 14 years. In that time, he tells me, but one crop was destroyed by grasshoppers and two others injured. He came to Colorado in poor health, now he says he feels stouter than he did at 21 years of age; he is near 60. Persons desiring information concerning land to rent or buy near Longmont, will get a response by addressing Bro. J. R. Ullery, Pillce P. O., or brother R. J. Patterson, Longmont, Boulder Co., Col.

May the grace of God be with you all dear brethren and sisters, readers of the PILGRIM, and as we now can only meet in this way, let us continue faithful that we may meet to part no more in a more serene clime. In the bonds of love, fraternally yours.

WAYNESBORO', PA., }
September 27, 1874. }

Beloved Brethren:—

Greeting of love, peace and good-will to you all.

We all love to read Church news, and learn of the success of the spread of the Gospel, and the general prosperity of Zion. We rejoice to hear of the conversion of souls, and the faithfulness of the membership in obeying the Truth. A special cause of rejoicing at this season is that the simple commands of our blessed Savior are observed in so many places in the land. I mean, particularly, the trio command, Feetwashing, Lord's Supper and Holy Communion.

How it thrills the Christian heart with sacred joy to read in the Scriptures, how Jesus, blessed Master, gave commandment, and how faithfully His chosen disciples recorded the identical teachings, so that to-day, we who are "afar off" in the order of time, can turn to the pages of inspiration and read that good word of precept and promise.

The occasion of our Lovefeast service on Tuesday, the 22nd inst., brought very vividly to my recollection the stirring scenes that gathered around the last day and night which our Savior spent on earth before He completed His sacrifice for us, and "gave Himself for us." O sacred memory! How we wonder and admire as we hear the Heaven-appointed preacher rehearse the story of humiliation and self-sacrifice. How can we go to the house of the Lovefeast without a preparation of heart that we may keep the feast truly unto the Lord.

We are often made sad on these occasions to see too much display among the members. One will display a fine new suit made "for the meeting," and I much regret to say, in too many cases, the brother neglected to instruct his tailor properly to cut the corners of his coat round and leave the collar straight. By this neglect his suit misrepresents him, for he professes to be "not conformed to the world." "He that is able to receive it, let him receive it," and profit thereby. Brethren, lay fashion aside, lay your tobacco aside, "lay aside every weight," and then you can more fully "sanctify the Lord in your hearts" by the sacred service of this occasion. This is not all the display, and I think I am not fully aware of the extent of this display which is so sadly retarding the success of the Truth and causing many remarks from the observing world, saying, "he's not much Dunker," or "Is it possible he is a member," or "She don't compare well with the young sisters of ten years ago," or "there's a good deal of difference in those caps," and "didn't think the Church would allow them wear such lace and ribbons and water falls," How my heart is pained to hear such remarks from those whose hearts should rather be drawn to Christ by our simple life, meek spirit, modest dress, clean mouths and hands and hearts.

Bro. D. P. Sayler, speaking to the afternoon service, upon the precept: "Keep yourselves in the love of God," said that the children of the Church are cradled in the fashions of the world, and that under this influence they stray away and then the ministry must labor hard and long to preach them back into the Church. Is not this a sad truth, dear mother, sisters? How many of you pray over your infants, and when they can talk understandingly, how many of you teach them to pray, and at the same time guard, with anxious care, the society they come in contact with? Some good Christians, however oppose this course, and we have no fault to find with such provided they have a better way, but there is nothing better than the religion of Jesus applied to train and strengthen the heart and lead it to God. Pure and kind religious influences thrown around them, will incline their hearts to yourselves and to the Lord, and you will more likely keep pride away and experience the joy of bringing them early to the Savior, and that too, as fit and willing subjects. It will not be difficult to preach them back again to the Church and Kingdom.

Brethren and sisters be neat and plain, and don't talk too much, but I entreat you, examine yourselves, and whatever of pride, and whatever kind of departure from the Church, you find, put it away. At your last day you will likely regret that you did not live nearer to the Church.

Our examination service was one to be remembered. How do I stand? Have I been as faithful as was my privilege to be? Have I done my whole duty? Such questions bring the soul nearer to the cross, and humbles it, so the Master can use it as a potter uses the clay.

Then followed the observance of the Holy Ordinances. These are sacred memorials of Christ's love to his disciples. It seems to me that every brother and sister should live so near to God, and so peaceably with all men, so dependant upon the grace of Christ, that these Lovefeast occasions would be longed for and hailed with joy, not for empty pleasure and display, but communion with Christ and His faithful disciples. What joy in Heaven over such meetings!

The ministry was well represented, being fourteen in number. We are glad to see the brethren come out so, and we are glad there is no paid ministry, lest the pure word preached should be corrupted for that "filthy lucre's sake." Is any in need, let him say so, and we are confident the Church will not let him suffer.

We feel glad that the church has been edified. To God be all the praise. Yours fraternally.

D. B. MENTZER.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—As you still solicit news items, I thought perhaps some would be acceptable from this part of the west. We have had a very dry hot Summer. We had no rain to speak of, from the 14th of June 'till the 12th of Sept. The corn crop is almost a failure, wheat was good, some of the farms yielding 38 bushels to the acre. Oats were good, sweet potatoes about half crop, no Irish potatoes. Plenty of peaches and grapes where there were trees and vines, this country being too new for apples.

In addition to the drouth, the chinch bugs were very destructive with us on corn, and about the 15th of August the grasshoppers came upon us in swarms, devouring nearly every green thing, except grass. All the corn that was not cut up was stripped of its blades in about four hours time, though they were not as numerous here as they were in other portions of this State. They came on Saturday, and left the Thursday following. They were not so numerous as to darken the sun, as some claim. For a person to look into the sky, it looked like a snow storm when they were going and coming.

We are having an abundance of rain now, making the land in good condition for seeding, and also making abundant pasture for stock. Health is very good. Very respectfully yours.

Dear Editor: —

The PILGRIM came to us quite unexpectedly but a welcome guest. I never knew there was such a paper published, until I received your Almanac which I would not part with for the price of the paper. I am an afflicted sister and do not get to preaching very often, so the PILGRIM just suits my case, and I love it next to my Bible.

I wish I could hear from Fayette Co., Pa. There I was born and raised, ten miles from the county seat, Uniontown. The Brethren's Meeting-house was a half mile from where I lived. It was called the Fairview Church. (Who will respond to our sister's wish? Ed)Here in Adams Co. Ohio, we formerly had preaching regularly every month, but no speaker. The brethren, John Garman, Mills Calvert and others, from Bush Creek preached for us. Of late, we have no regular preaching. Brother Isaiah Custer preaches for us sometimes. Out of fifteen members there are but four left. Some went west, some to other churches, and some to the world. I, for one, am determined to live and die in the faith as held by the Brethren, which I believe to be the Gospel faith. Pray for me. I want the PILGRIM as long as I am able to read it. It comes as a refreshing shower of rain on wilted grass, and greatly cheers my thirsty soul. Good night. Your unworthy sister.

Dear Pilgrim :—

Our Communion is now over. We had a pleasant meeting. The ministering brethren were as follows: E R. Buechley and Jacob Murray from the South Waterloo church, Martin Buechley from the North Waterloo, Henry Strickler and Smith Urtz from Grundy County and John Miller from Linn Co. The truth was preached with power, but no addition at this meeting, and I have only baptized three persons this Summer. Bro. George Moore and wife, a dear sister, with a little daughter 16 months old came from Grundy County to enjoy our meeting, but only enjoyed it on Saturday and evening, as their child took sick and on Saturday night it died. On Monday, the 21st, I accompanied them home, a distance of 28 miles, and attended the funeral on Tuesday, the 22nd. Returned home that evening. May God bless those parents and grant them grace and strength to bear them up in there present sorrowing, as this was the fourth child they have buried, and have only one left out of five. On the 23rd, Wednesday, attended the funeral of Jane Loy, wife of John Loy. She lived in the town of Legrange with her son, and he has been in Illinois with his children for more than a year but her children wrote to him, and also sent several dispatches so that he got back in time to attend the funeral. She was in her 68th year. She was born in Washington County Penna. and became a member of the Presbyterian Church in Ohio at the age of seventeen years.

ELD. JOHN MURRAY.

The Merced River Meeting.

I left home with my family, Thursday Aug. 27, to attend the Communion with the brethren on the Merced River. We went across the country with our own conveyance and arrived at the place of meeting on Saturday 29th. The weather being unusually warm, made it rather disagreeable traveling, and especially so to my wife, she being a weakly woman. We found the place for the meeting a very pleasant one, being located in a beautiful grove of large oak trees. We also found the preparations ample for the accommodation of all. The people were fed during the meeting, two meals a day. The ministers present were Bros. Wolf Prather, Broadhurst and myself. The meeting began on Friday 28th of August, and continued until Monday September 7th.

There were three discourses preached each day—had the very best of order during the meeting, and much interest felt by all. We celebrated the Communion on Sunday evening the 30th in love and union.

During the week there were eight added to the church by baptism, so when the Lord's day drew near we all felt a desire to celebrate the sufferings and death of our Lord Jesus Christ with those young members that had united with us during the week. The church was counseled, and there was union, so the arrangements were made, and when the evening drew on we surrounded the table, and were made to rejoice that our number was increased by eight precious souls during one week. The feast was one that will be long remembered by us all. We may fall asleep in Jesus, but those refreshing showers from the presence of the Lord will live and refresh our spirits in the vast ages of eternity.

The whole meeting was one of unusual interest, and we felt sorry that the eleven days of meeting had passed away so soon, and we had to take the parting hand and each go to his place of abode. There were others almost persuaded to go along with us, and I trust will soon be adopted into the family of God.

We are now looking forward with unusual interest to the time for the Woodland Meeting, which is appointed to commce Oct. 15. We feel that we will have a time of rejoicing in the Lord. Pray for us brethren, that the spirit of Jesus may direct us in all things, and that we may be lively instruments in his hands to the doing of much good—pulling down the strong fortifications of darkness, and to the building up of the marvelous light as it is revealed in Christ Jesus our Lord.

ELD. JONATHAN MYERS.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

We have been receiving your paper for three or four years and we like it very well, but we feel a little like some others, as I hear that some wish for articles that would be more edifying, as the apostle says, "Let all things be done unto edifying." The more edifying you can make your paper, the more subscribers you can get. But I don't blame you editors so much for it. I think there are a great many brethren and sisters too, that have the talent and could help to make it a good and instructive paper. I asked a Bro. why he did not write, one that I knew was a good speaker, and also a good writer. The answer was, that some write to make themselves popular. I also talked to a sister about it, and she said she had too many faults herself to instruct others. I think if all the preachers would not try to preach until they would be faultless themselves, we would have but very few preachers. I think if a brother or a sister could write a good sermon and send it over the country, it might do as much good as if he would leave his family and go out himself. I have read sermons in the Brethren's papers that done me more good than many a meeting that I have attended.

ANNA EBY.

Louisville, Ohio.

REMARKS. That our readers want an edifying paper is certainly encouraging, as it shows they wish to be edified, but for us to know exactly what everybody calls edification is very difficult indeed. This we do know, that we are trying to make our paper just as good and edifying as we know how under existing circumstances. But as much of that which makes our paper interesting must come from others, it cannot be expected that we can do the work alone, therefore may we not hope that those who are desirous of having a good paper, will be interested in helping us to make it so. For brethren to say that some write for popularity, and on that account refuse to write themselves, is very unbaritable. Because a few write for show, is certainly no reason why others should not write for the good of our blessed cause, for the edifying of the saints and for the conversion of sinners. Brethren and sisters, let us have a rush of copy from you, and see what can be done towards the edification of our readers.

Dear Pilgrim :—

I will give you some news of what is going on in this part of the we-tern country. In the first place we had a good crop of wheat, rye, barly and oats, but the corn crop is nearly a failure. It is not more than a third of a crop, if that. The cause of it was first, the drouth set in just at the time when it was tasseling, and continued dry until now. Then the hot wind came and dried up corn and grass. It was so hot that it was almost unendurable. Then the chinch bug, leaving the stubble fields, went to the corn fields and done sad work, and then here comes the grasshoppers, making a terrible raid on our gardens, playing sad havoc on our cabbage, beans, turnips and fodder, and what was a little strange they all chewed tobacco. One of my neighbors had a small patch of the weed, and by the time Mr. grasshoppers all got a quid there was none left for poor neighbor. It was right laughable to see him squirting his amber. He slobbered much like men do when they have their mouths full of the weed. I said to my-elf there is no great difference between man and grasshopper, in some things, after all. A. J. CORRELL.

Our Next Annual Meeting.

According to previous arrangements, there was a meeting held on the 17th of September, 1874, by the brethren of the Southwestern District, of Ohio, in the Sugar Grove meeting house, Covington District, Miami county Ohio, held by the Brethren in the Miami Valley, in order to make the necessary arrangements for the next Annual Meeting of the Brethren. After some committees were appointed, and other arrangements made that were necessary at this time, the meeting unanimously agreed to conduct said meeting according to the arrangements of 1866, and as recommended by last Yearly Meeting, i. e., that there will be no preaching in the tent, and no boarding or eating here, until Monday. This we want distinctly understood, that no members collect there before that time. Members coming a distance, particularly ministers, are requested to go to the different districts in the valley, to have preaching on Sunday. They will have ample time to get to the meeting for the council. Written by order of the committee of arrangements. Samuel Mohler, senior, of Covington, has been appointed corresponding secretary. S. MOHLER.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Bro. James A. Sell, of Newry, Blair Co., Pa., is on a western tour. What his object is, we are not informed, perhaps to do a little towards "go ye."

—Brother P. H. B., of Montandon Pa., says, "Our Lovefeast begins on Wednesday. Solomon Mattes of Ill. is here, and brethren C. Long and R. Badger of Iowa are expected today or to-morrow."

—Bro. J. Y. Heckler, of Mt. Carroll, Ill., says: "The cause of the Master is doing reasonably well here in Northern Ill. Not very many are found willing to renounce sin, but the members in general appear steadfast in the faith, so that we, as yet, have no reason to despond. May the Lord still add many more to be saved."

—From Adams Co., O we have the following: "We had a wet Spring—corn planted late, then followed very dry, and corn and potatoes suffered much for want of rain, the bugs were also very bad. At this time, dry. Late potatoes will be small and late, corn poor. The wheat crop, with a few exceptions, was good, and the fruit tolerably abundant."

—Eld. J. Myers of Merced, Cal., says the Church there has never before been so quickened and refreshed in the cause of Jesus. We cannot tell why it is, but we feel especially interested in the welfare of our brethren in California, and we are always made glad to learn of their prosperity. We hope their growth may be solid and that they may not be forgetful of the "ancient landmarks which the fathers have set."

—Bro. Lewis Glass, of North Georgetown, Ohio, says: "We the members of the Sandy Church, Columbiana Co., Ohio, feel thankful to the Lord that He has visited our arm of the Church by inducing 16 precious souls to become willing to confess Jesus and come out on the Lord's side, during the Summer. There are still others almost persuaded. Would to God that many more might come to the fold of Christ and be saved."

—We will soon commence preparing for our next volume, and to do that we need money to square up our old bills and also to pay new ones. Those who are still endebted to us will please make arrangements to pay us as soon as possible. Some of our agents complain that the credit system gives them trouble. We are sorry for this, and hope that those for whom we disobliged ourselves to benefit, will be as prompt as their circumstances will allow.

—Some of our brethren are sending money at their own risk to their loss. One brother says he sent us $10.00, and a number of others, small amounts which never came. To send $10.00 of currency in a letter is risking these hard times, as some of the P. M's cannot endure the temptation. Those who took the $10, the $5, and the $3, will take more, but who and where are they? Brethren, do not risk the chances. If possible, get a postal order, draft or check. If you can get none of these, have it registered.

—For 1875 all postage on papers will have to be paid in advance at the office where mailed from, therefore our subscribers instead of paying their postage at their own offices, will be to send it to us. This new law will be an advantage to our readers but a great disadvantage to us, as their postage will cost them only about 10 cents instead of 20 as before while we will be compelled to pay the postage on all whether we get paid for paper and postage or not.

—Eld. A. J. Correll, of Craig, Mo. says, "I want to tell the brethren that are in favor of education, that they have given the school the wrong name. Why call it a high school when you know that anything high does not at all suit us as an humble people. The Brethren's High School! Why brethren I thought you should have known better. Why not give it some other name? Call it something significant of a place where all necessary learning can be obtained, a place where our children can be taught by our brethren. We all need knowledge, that fact none will deny. Then let us have what we need, a school where this knowledge can be obtained from the brethren. We have brethren who are competent to teach and take charge of such a school. Brother S. Z. Sharp is a brother of ability and would make a good teacher for the school. Brother H. R. Holsinger charges his gun too heavy at times, and shoots in the wrong direction, but nevertheless I believe him to be a good brother and would make a good teacher. Now brethren, take the "High" out of your school and I think it will do better. As there is no, thus saith the Lord for or against the school, I have no more to say."

What is Trouble.

A company of Southern ladies was one day assembled in a lady's parlor, when the conversation chanced to turn on the subject of earthly afflictions. Each had her story of peculiar trial and bereavement to relate, except one pale, sad looking woman, whose lustreless eye and dejected air showed that she was a prey to the deepest melancholy. Suddenly arousing herself, she said in a hollow voice: "Not one of you knows what trouble is."

"Will you please, Mrs. Gray," said the kind voice of a lady who knew well her story, "tell the ladies what you call trouble?"

"I will, if you desire it," she replied, "for I have seen it. My parents possessed a competence, and my girlhood was surrounded by all the comforts of life. I seldom knew an ungratified wish, and was always gay and light-hearted. I married at nineteen, one I loved more than all the world besides. Our home was retired, but the sunlight never fell on a lovlier one, or a happier household. Ye ars rolled on peacefully. Five children sat around our table, and a little curly head still nestled in her bosom. One night, about sundown, one of those black storms came on, which are so common to Southren climate. For many hours the rain poured down incessantly. Morning dawned, but still the elements raged. The whole Savannah seemed afloat. The little stream near our dwelling became a raging element. Before we were aware of it, our house was surrounded by water. I managed with my babe to reach a little elevated spot, on which a few wide spreading trees were standing, whose dense foliage afforded some protection, while my husband and sons strove to save what they could of our property. At last a fearful surge swept away my husband, and he never rose again. Ladies, no one ever loved a husband more; but that was not trouble.

"Presently my sons saw their danger, and the struggle for life became the only consideration. They were as brave, loving boys as ever blessed a mother's heart, and I watched their efforts to escape with such agony as only mothers can feel. They were so far off I could not speak to them, but could see hem closing nearer and nearer to each other as their little island grew smaller and smaller.

"The sullen river raged around the huge trees; dead branches, upturned tanuks, wrecks of houses, drowning cattle, masses of rubbish, all went floating past us. My boys waved their hands to me, then pointed upward. I knew it was a farewell signal, and you, mothers can imagine my anguish. I saw them all perish, and yet—that was not trouble.

"I hugged by babe close to my heart, and when the water rose to my feet, I climbed into the lower branches of the tree, and so kept retiring before it, till an All-powerful hand stayed the waves, that they should come no further. I was saved. All my worldy possessions swept away; all my earthly hopes blighted—yet that was not trouble.

"My baby was all I had left on earth. I labored night and day to support him and myself, and sought to train him in the right way; but as he grew older, evil companions won him away from home. He ceased to care for his mother's counsels; he would sneer at her entreaties and agonizing prayers. He left my humble roof that he might be un estrained in the persuit of evil, and, at last, when heated by wine one night he took the life of a fellow-being, and ended his own upon the scaffold. My heavenly Father had filled my cup of sorrow before; now it ran over. This was trouble, ladies, such as I hope His mercy will save you from ever experiencing."

There was not a dry eye among her listeners, and the warmest sympathy was expressed for the bereaved mother, whose sad history had taught them a useful lesson.

HOPS IN THE MOHAWK VALLEY.—The work of hop picking in many yards in and along the valley has been completed. Many growers have already disposed of their crops at a wide range of prices. Several cases are known to the writer in which growers contracted to sell at thirtyfive cents. But since the hop has been gathered and found to be of superior quality, growers are selling without any trouble at forty cents, many growers even refusing those figures. The long interval of no rain during August proved very satisfactory to the hop crop, and the good round price of forty cents is the result, and but few rusty crops.—Albany Argus.

Alone With God.

Alone with God, O, blessed thought
That he will always hear—
That humble, trusting souls may still
In confidence draw near,
And tell him every hidden grief
And find a glad and sweet relief.

Alone with God! O, dearest place
Of all beneath the sun,
We joy to seek the Father's face
Through Christ, the anointed one;
And in this high and holy claim
Ask and receive in Jesus' name.

Alone with God. The world aside
And every care forgot,
Our spirits drink the healing tide
Of love that changes not—
Find holy peace, communion sweet
Still flowing from the mercy-seat.

Alone with God, O, sweetest joy
That earthly pilgrims know.
A foretaste of the bliss on high,
We love, and long to go—
To join the ransom'd host above,
And swell the song, Redeeming Love.

My Lord Delayeth His Coming.

[From Songs in the Valley of Achor" by Sophie E. C. Downing: just published by A. D. F. Randolph & Co.]

Lord, dost thou know I am waiting,
Longing and watching for Thee?
Counting the moments as hours
Until thy face I see;
Questioning, "Is He not coming?"
Asking it o'er and o'er—
Listening for Thy knock, Lord,
Longing to open the door.

I thought last night He was coming,
That I heard Him at the gate;
But He only sent a message—
"A little longer wait;
I, too, am watching and waiting
For the glad hour to come,
When I shall bear thy spirit
Rejoicing to thy home.

"But I want thee, O my servant,
To suffer for me still;
'Tis well to long for thy Master,
But 'tis better to do His will."
So I cried unto my strong Jesus,
Whose love is so tender and great;
Strengthen my longing spirit,
Make me willing to wait.

I am glad that He asked me to suffer,
Because I surely know
I can never do that for Him
In the Home to which I go;
And I am sure I shall not be sorry
When my Lord does really come,
That I suffered a little longer
Before He took me Home.

RETALIATION.

Matt. 5: 38—42. Ex. 21: 24, 25. Lev. 24: 19, 20.

The law referred to has a judicial regulation, and the magistrate's rule in deciding causes, declaring the utmost punishment he might inflict, when nothing less would satisfy the offended party; yet the scribes explained as if it had authorized private revenge, and even required people to demand or exact this severe retaliation. But Christ declared that the moral law required the reverse of this spirit and conduct. His disciples were not allowed to resist evil, either by violent opposition or litigious law-suits. In the present state of human nature, there is little need to enumerate exceptions and limitations to such general rules, self-love will suffice.

The preservation of life and liberty, or important property, will, in many cases, require a man to stand in his defence, at the peril of the illegal assailant, but in ordinary cases it is better to give way, and yield to insults and injuries than to repel them by force or legal process; and it seems not to accord with the spirit of Christianity to put the life and soul of a man in competition with a sum of money when there is no reason to fear further violence. In smaller matters, however the case is clear. If a man give a disciple of Christ a painful blow on the cheek, it is his duty and wisdom to imitate his Master and take it patiently, nay, rather to turn the other than to begin a contest by returning the blow, sending a challenge or commencing a lawsuit. If a man be sued at law and injuriously deprived of his coat or outer garment, which though of small value, he could ill spare it, yet he had better suffer himself to be defrauded of his cloak also than to be involved in the temptation and evils by seeking legal redress. 1 Cor. 1: 8. Indeed in cases of great importance other duties may require him to avail himself of the protection of the law. Justice to his creditors and to the public and his family may engage him to defend his estate and to give a check to unreasonable men; and a Christian may prosecute criminals out of love for public justice, though not from private revenge, yet there will be men of the world enough to deal with such men, and a disciple of Christ will seldom have occasion to waste his time or lose his temper about them. Under various pretenses, also, unreasonable men may require Christ's disciples to attend them about business, public or private. But if they should insist upon a man going a mile it would be better to go two, and it would be expedient rather to give or lend to those who required it than to refuse with harshness—and much more to give or lend where there is need, and doing good—it is self evident that many limitations must be admitted in the last instance, for no man could go giving and lending to every one that should ask him, but must consider his own ability and the nature of the case and act accordingly. And therefore we must suppose that limitations and exceptions are implied in the other admonitions which will be judged of according to the general law of loving our neighbor as ourselves. The grand and obvious instruction is this: Suffer any injury for the sake of peace, when no duty requires the contrary, and commit your interests and concerns to the Lord's keeping. The case of those who were compelled by authority to accompany and convey the baggage of travelers, who sustained a public character, is supposed to be meant in the 41st verse. Even if the case was oppressive, or the person compelled was legally exemplied, compliance would be preferable to a contest.

A Pilgrim.

OH, DEATH WHY BE SO CRUEL?

Such was the thought that came to my mind on last eve when sitting and perusing in the Pilgrim the sad bereavement of Bro. D. B. Sell, of Hamilton, Mo. I also had to wonder in my meditation why it is that God removes from our midst so often a "shining light" and strong "pillars from Zion." The thought came, "God's ways are past finding out." "God's ways are good." Yet in our mind we sought an answer why, oh, why should sister Fanny be removed from the happy sphere in which she moved, from her beloved husband, her dear little ones, her fond parents, her beloved sisters and brothers, from her friends, yea, from the church which she chose in her childhood; the church in which she moved as a shining light to light others on the way to Jesus. Oh, death why so cruel? As an answer to my musings the words of the "Song of Death" came to my mind:

"Ye call me a cruel reaper,
And say that I love to mow
The fairest and sweetest blossoms,
And lay their young beauty low;
But, oh! if ye knew the heart-aches
That all who live long must know,
Ye would hail me a pitying angel,
Your best friend and not your foe.
Ah, yes! I'm a pitying angel of light
On a mission of mercy sent;
And whene'er I see a smile too bright,
And a heart too innocent,
Too tender and warm for this world of ice,
I waft them away into Paradise."

A heart "tender and warm" are words well deserving to be applied to the character of sister Fanny, as we knew her, and knew her to love her in the bonds of christian fellowship. Her amiable disposition and christain devotion were such that to know her once was to remember her always. We met her and in that meeting we learned to hold her in high esteem as a sister and friend—we parted—in that parting fond remembrance reserved for her a place, and now no hope of meeting until eternity's realm shall bring us together in "the sweet by and by."

Dear brother, look up and see the dark cloud of thy bereavment has gilded edges and a "silver lining." The halo of God's love shineth around. The bright glory of God's covenanted promise to your Fanny, as a believer in Christ, lights up the bleeding heart. O, the bright hope we have in her death,—nay, sleep in Jesus. Safe in the cleft of the rock—safe from any storm that blows. Weep not for her. Live to the glory of God as she did; live to the end. Your motherless children may early seek the Lord and imitate the good example of their mother. Oh, my brother, my prayer is that we may all so live that when we die we may have such bright evidences of future glory as she had. Accept this as a faint evidence of my sympathy with you in this your day of trial, and believe me to be yours in hope of a blessed immortality. J. S. Flory.

Family Worship.

There ought to be no sweeter hour in the day than that in which comes the morning meal and family worship. Yet it is sorrowful to see what sometimes passes for the latter. A chapter of the Bible hurried through, a rambling, stereotyped prayer mumbled over, and the participants rush off to their work which they have been meanwhile thinking about, and which they enjoy a great deal better. The exercise is wrapped in fog, instead of being crowned with heaven's light.

It is a mistake to suppose that fluency or education are especially needed in conducting family worship. It wants a heart most of all. Let there not be a single petition that is not born of real desire—even if the prayer be not two minutes long. Blessed be the home where the spirit of song dwells, and adds its charm to the morning worship.

The exercise need not be long, but it should not be crowded. Break up the formality; carry all the soul-life you have into it; and its savor shall not go through the day alone, but among all the home memories, none shall be stronger to hold the grown up children to the faith of their fathers.

When our sins are before God, we are here by them, no matter how careless and forgetful about them we may be. But on repentance, and rest in Christ, they are blotted out and remembered no more. Can you say, with Hezekiah, "Thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back?" The fountain is open, and healing and cleansing are offered now.

The Crumbs.

No matter how careful we may be in breaking or cutting our bread, while eating, the little crumbs will fall off and roll under the table. These, in Bible scenes, were the portion of dogs, and not unfrequently do we yet see the hungry yet hopeful dog linger under his master's table patiently waiting for the falling crumbs. While the rich man had no scruples in thus allowing the dog to carefully gather up the fragments that dropped from his ladened table, a poor Lazarus dare not take the lowly place, but at the gate, full of sores he was left to hunger and starve in the sight of plenty and to spare. O, how hard must have seemed the fate to hunger, to suffer and die while dogs could feast under his master's table! While the rich man was asking, "Am I my brother's keeper?" poor Lazarus was made to say, am I worse than his dogs? In the eyes of an ungrateful brother he was, even the dropping crumbs were a dainty too sweet for his unfortunate brother to share. How different the scene in the borders of Sidon. Here comes another rich man, but he had a large family and it took a great deal to fill them, there seemed to be nothing to spare, even the fragments were carefully gathered so that nothing went to waste. A poor hungry and strange woman makes her appearance and desires some bread. He tells her, woman, it would be my pleasure to give you but here are my children, they must be filled first, it would not be lawful to take the children's bread and give it to dogs, would it? O, no good master, I know that, but do not the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs? Can not I have some of that? What was the response? Did he close the door, did he turn her off? Hear the answer, "For this saying thou shalt not only have the crumbs, but thou shalt be filled, thy whole desire shall be granted. This poor woman was not clamoring for the bread that perisheth in its using, but it was for "the life." For this purpose our rich man came into the world, for this he suffered and for this he died, that the bread of Life might be broken for all that desire it.

Brethren and sisters, has not God ladened our tables with plenty and to spare? What are we doing with the fragments, where falls the crumbs, and where is poor Lazarus and the Syrophenician? Lazarus is still lying at the gate as poor, hungry and sore as ever, waiting for the crumbs, while the Syrophenician is weeping for her daughters and desiring, for them, the Bread of Life. We may think that we have nothing to spare, that the children need it all, but let us not forget the crumbs. The time has now come that pearls are no more to be cast to dogs and swine, but to our brethren and sisters in the flesh. Though they may not need our natural bread, and we have none to spare, yet we have the crumbs of "Manna" that may be dropped to all around us. There are thousands out on the plains hungering and even starving for the Bread of Life, and many are anxiously waiting for the crumbs, for some one to take them by the hand and raise them from the slough of despond. Our crumbs, little acts of charity, may often accomplish greater things than we ever dreamed of. Love, like the sun, warms and cheers everything upon which it falls, it is life-giving, and greatly invigorates the hungry and careworn sinner, it has attractions which cannot be withstood even by those who are most indifferent to religious impressions.

The other day, a brother related a little circumstance which most beautifully portrays the power of the dropping crumbs. He was on his way to meeting, and along the road he overtook an aged lady trudging along seemingly with considerable effort to make some point in good time. As he yet had room for one more—a very nice crumb by the way—he offered her a seat on his carriage which she gratefully accepted, and then informed him that she was on her way to the Brethren's meeting. In Lewistown, she said she became acquainted with a sister, and she was such a good woman and so kind that she became greatly attached to her, and because of this she wanted to hear the Brethren preach. That sister, no matter how humble she may be, has a power that perhaps she knows not of, and the crumbs which she dropped for this woman may be the means of saving her from a spiritual death.

By this little circumstance you can see how we may all distribute the crumbs of life. Because you have not five or three talents, do not think you cannot have any use for one. God has a work for us all to do and he gives us thousands of ways to do it in. Then, take courage and with a renewed confidence in the ability which God has given you, go forth letting your lights so shine that all may see your good works and thereby glorify your Father which is in Heaven, not forgetting the poor Syrophenician who craves not the children's bread, but only the crumbs that fall from the Master's table.

The Beauties of Heaven.

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things that God has prepared for those that love him.—1 Cor. 2:9.

Language would fail us to express, neither can the mind comprehend the glory which is held in reservation for those who love, serve and obey the meek and lowly Lamb of God. The inspired apostle terms it "joy unspeakable and full of glory." Well might the poet say,

"Who can paint the scenes of glory,
Where the ransomed dwell on high?

Could we for a moment look beyond this vale of tears and catch as it were but a glimpse of that bright and heavenly world, that "eye hath not seen," no doubt we would be led to exclaim with the Psalmest of old, "Oh, that I had wings like a dove, then would I fly away and be at rest." The Savior has made rich provisions for all those that do his commandments. He said unto his disciples I go to prepare a place for you, and says further, "I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." The Savior has done his part, and it is now on our part to accept the terms of mercy so freely offered to all, and to become heirs of that inheritance which God has prepared, but has never yet been seen by mortal eye. O, who would not sacrifice the sinful pleasures of this world which are but for a moment, for pleasures that will never fade away, but endure when time will be no more! In that heavenly mansion we will never meet with the manifold temptations that cross our pathway here in this unfriendly world. Sickness and sorrow, pain and death, can never enter there, friends will never be called to take the parting hand, but will enjoy each other's society thro' out the ceaseless ages of eternity. O, glorious land! Those who meet there shall part no more, and those long parted meet again. Oh! happy day, when we shall meet those of our dear friends and associates who have long since crossed the river and are waiting on the other side, till we land on fair Canaan's happy shore. Who can imagine what joy in every heart shall reign?

Dear young friends who are yet out of Christ, is not Heaven worth striving for? Methinks it is. Jesus says, "Come unto me." Do not scorn the message sent in mercy from above. Heed the gracious call from Heaven, "Seek the Lord while he may be found, call upon him while he is near." Yield obedience to his holy commands, relying upon his faithful promises, and finally when your earthly career is ended, he will not leave you nor forsake you but will go with you through the "dark valley of the shadow of death," and you will hear the welcome applaud, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Fair Weather Christians.

There are a great many fair weather Christians in this age of the world, who are always willing to do anything that suits their convenience. You may start out on a Sabbath morning when the weather is fair and everything pleasant, and if you ask your neighbor as you pass along whether they are going to church, one will say, "Yes, I believe I will go to day, the weather is too pretty to stay at home. I will go and see who will be there anyway." Another will say, "I expect there will be a great crowd there, there are different ones that I want to see that I expect will be there, so I believe I will go." Another will say, "I believe I will go to church to-day, I am going to wear the new clothes I purchased the other day." So you will see great crowds going in every direction, but you may start out on a cloudy morning when the roads are a little muddy, and things are not so convenient, you will not be apt to have much company on the road. You may call on your neighbors again, one will say, "I don't feel very well to-day, and it is so muddy I don't think I will go." Another will say, "It looks so much like rain, there won't be anybody there anyhow," and another will say "It looks so cloudy, and I think they can do very well without me there to-day anyhow, I will stay at home home and sleep," and when you get there you will find a few members scattered over the church. The minister comes in looking downhearted and discouraged because so few of his members are there. He does not feel like preaching, so you see a good sermon may be spoiled because so many staid away. You might ask those Christians who are so much disposed to stay at home on a rainy day if they thought the preacher would be there; they will say, Oh yes, as a matter of course he will be there, he never fails to come rain or shine, sick or well.

My dear friends, what would you think if you were to call on the minister when the weather was not so favorable and you would find him sitting at home careless and unconcerned? You would ask if he was not going to church and he would say, I don't feel like going to-day, my members stay at home so many Sundays, I think I can stay at home one Sunday once in a while, what would you think of such a man? Would you not say at once that he was not fit for a preacher? Do you not think that he would be as excusable in the day of judgment as you? You can preach as loud by filling a vacant seat as he can by filling his appointment. Let us all go to church whenever we have an opportunity and encourage the preacher as much as we can.

The Old Catholic Conference

No doubt many of our readers have read something relative to the factions in the Catholic and Greek Churches. The following account of a Conference held at London, we take from the New York Observer, hoping that it may be of general interest.

The London Times has a full account of the Old Catholic Conference held at Bonn as previously announced by Dr. von Dollinger at the Congress at Freyburg. It was designed simply as a friendly assemblage for the purpose of seeing what can be done for the union of the creeds of the Anglican, Greek, and Old Catholic Churches. Among those present were the Bishop of Winchester, who arrived in the course of the proceedings express from England; the Bishop of Pittsburg; the Dean of Chester; Canon Liddon; Dr. Nevin, the American Chaplain in Rome; Dr. Langdon, the American Chaplin in Geneva; the Rev. G. Broade, the British Chaplain in Dusseldorf; Professor Mayor, of Cambridge; M. Kireef, Aide-de-Camp of the Grand Duke Constantine, who is Secretary of the Friends of Spiritual Enlightenment in St. Petersburg; and Professor Rhosin from Athens. There were also representatives from St. Petersburg and Moscow; Le Pere Michaud and M. Quily, Cure de Chene, Geneva, the opponent of Pere Hyacinthe. There were about forty present, of whom about a third were English and American. There were among the rest representatives of Russia, Greece, France, Switzerland, and Denmark.

Dr. von Dollinger was chosen President, and opened the afternoon meeting with an address, in which he called attention to the main question of creed, which separates the Western from the Eastern Church. He then submitted various propositions for consideration. They were in English:

1. "We agree that the apocryphal or deutero-canonical Books of the Old Testament are not of the same canonicity as the Books contained in the Hebrew Canon."

This was accepted without hesitation.

2. "We agree that no translation of Holy Scripture can claim an authority superior to that of the original text." Accepted.

3. "We agree that the readings of Holy Scripture in the volgar tongue cannot lawfully be forbidden." Accepted.

4. "We agaee that in general it is more fitting and in accordance with the spirit of the Church that the Liturgy should be in the tongue understood by the people." Accepted.

5. "We agree that faith, working by love, and not faith alone, is the means and condition of man's justification before God."

"Alone" was objected to, on the ground that it seemed to be aimed at the English articles of faith. The Bishop of Pittsburg moved the amendment that the words "without love" should replace "alone." This was agreed to, and the proposition was accepted.

6. "Salvation cannot be merited by 'merit of condignity,' because there is no proportion between the infinite good of the salvation promised by God and the finite merit of man's good works."

The Bishop of Winchester suggested the amendment of replacing "merit" (in italics) by "good," and striking out "good" (in italics.) This was done and the proposition accepted.

7. "We agree that the doctrine of opera supererogationis and of a thesaurus meritorum sanctorum—i. e., that the overflowing merits of the saints can be transferred to others, either by the rulers of the Church or by the authors of the good works themselves—is untenable."

This was commented upon at length by Dr. Dollinger. He enlarged upon Indulgence and pointed out, among other things, that Papal Bulls according to the Papists were infallible.

8. (a) "We acknowledge that the number of Sacraments was fixed at seven first in the twelfth century, and then was received into the general teaching of the Church, not as a tradition coming down from the Apostles or from the earliest times, but as the result of theological speculation.

"(b) Catholic theologians (e. g., Bellarmine) acknowledge, and we acknowledge with them, that Baptism and the Eucharist are principalia, præcipua, eximia salutatis nostræ sacramenta." Accepted.

The consideration of the propositions was resumed the next day.

9. "We agree that the genuine tradition—i. e., the unbroken transmission, partly oral and partly by writing, of the doctrine delivered by Jesus Christ and the apostles is an authoritative source of teaching for all successive generations."

The members of the Greek Church were averse from dealing at once in a decisive manner with so important a question. However, after a little discussion, the proposition and its corollary (a) were accepted.

(a) "This tradition is partly to be found in the concensus of the great ecclesiastical bodies standing in historical continuity with the primitive Church, partly to be gathered by a scientific method from the written documents of all centuries."

The second corollary (b) led to some discussion. M. Janicheff had heard Archbishop Philarete's doubts, and the question, in his opinion, must still remain open, viz:

(b) "We acknowledge that the Church of England and the Churches derived through it have maintained unbroken the Episcopal Succession."

10. "We reject the new Roman doctrine of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin as being contrary to the tradition of the first thirteen centuries, according to which Christ alone is born without sin."

The words "born without sin" having been changed into "conceived without sin," the Article was accepted.

11. "We agree that the practice of the confession of sins to a congregation or to a priest has come down to us from the primitive Church, and that, purged from abuses and freed from constraint, it should be preserved in the Church."

Accepted.

12. "We agree that indulgences can only refer to penalties actually imposed by the Church herself."

Accepted without discussson.

13. "We agree that the commemoration of the faithful departed, i. e., a calling down of an out-pouring of Christ's grace for them, has come down to us from the primitive Church and should be preserved in the Church."

After a few words from the Dean of Chester, who feared that the old corruptions which had sprung from it might rise again, it was accepted.

14. "We acknowledge that the Invocation of Saints is not commanded as a duty necessary to salvation for every Christian."

This was strongly resisted by the representatives of the Greek Church. Dr. Dollinger withdrew the article.

On the third day the following article on the Eucharist, which had been prepared by a Committee consisting of the Bishop of Pittsburg and Dr. Nevin, representing the Americans, and Canon Liddon and the Dean of Chester, on the part of the English, with Dr. Dollinger, was accepted.

"The Eucharistic celebration in the Church is not a continuous renewal of the propitiatory sacrifice offered for ever upon the Cross, but its sacrificial character consists in this—that it is the permanent memorial of it, and representation and presentation on earth of the one oblation of Christ for the salvation of redeemed mankind, which according to the Epistle to the Hebrews (ix. 11, 12.) is continuously presented in heaven by Christ who now appears in the presence of God for us, (ix. 24). While this is the character of the Eucharist in reference to the sacrifice of Christ, it is also a sacred feast, wherein the faithful, receiving the body and blood of our Lord, have communion one with another. (Cor. x. 17.)"

Dr. Dollinger then turned to Article 9, already reported upon. He thought it was necessary for the clear comprehension of the article to add, commencing with the words, "the Holy Scriptures being recognized as the primary rule of Faith, we agree that genuine tradition," and so on. Professor Rhossis, of Athens, had scruples as to accepting this. After a few more remarks, the addition was agreed to.

Dr. Dollinger then announced that all was finished which he had undertaken for this Conference except the decision of some questions which lay entirely between the Germans and the Oriental Church. The Bishop of Pittsburg and the Dean of Chester thanked Dr. Dollinger for the service he had rendered to the meeting and the admirable way in which he had discharged his onerous duties. M. Janicheff joined them in their expression of thanks to the chairman.

Irreligious Children.

A mother asked a minister the question: "Why is it that my children are not inclined to be religious? I see other children whose tendency is to piety—united with the church early in life, interested in devotional services, and growing in strong attachment to the Savior, while mine are becoming more worldly every day. Why is it?" she asked. "I send them to Sabbath school; I take them to church every fair Sabbath; but no saving impressions are made upon them. I cannot understand it."

He proposed a few questions:

"Do you show any particular religious example daily to your children in the house-hold?"

"I cannot say that I do; but they know that I am a professor."

"You say you send them to Sabbath school and to church; do you converse with them about the sermon they have heard, or the lesson of the Sabbath school? or do you discuss trifles of no religious bearing before them on their return?"

"I am afraid the former is never done, and the latter often. Still, there can't be much harm in that."

"Do you ever speak to them personally about religious duties?"

"No, I do not like to; it is a very delicate subject."

"Do you have family worship? Do your children hear your voice raised to heaven for them, and thus know that you have an interest in their religious welfare?"

"No, we never had family worship. My husband and I are both diffident, and never could bring ourselves to pray aloud; but we do pray for them in secret."

"Do you allow them indiscriminate—newspapers, magazines, books, whatever they fancy?"

"Yes; we never trouble ourselves about that. They go to the circulating library, and suit themselves. Reading, you know, is improving to their minds."

"Do you cultivate worldy tastes in them? let them go into godless society, indulge and foster the love of fashion, send them to dancing schools, take them to the opera and theatre, and thus mature a keen relish for irreligious persoits?"

"Yes; they must have some amusement. Their companions all do the same, and we want them to be in the best society."

"Well," he said, "now look at the matter in the light in which you yourself have put it. You are a professing Christian, and want your children to be the same. Yet you do nothing to make them such. You give them no religious counsel.

"God has given you an immortal soul, purchased by Christ's blood, and trusted in your care. You are to beautify it by instruction and example. As you treat it, it may be a jewel for the King's crown, or a darkened, blighted spirit, unfitted for heavenly companionship. And how do you expect this trust? You throw it off from your keeping. You fail to watch it. You permit the King's enemies to surround it, and impress their taint upon it. It is daily slipping away from you while you are swiftly going to God to account for it,

"The reason why your children are irreligious it is plain from your own acknowledgement. The fault is not theirs, but yours. Change your treatment; give your children healthful amusement, such as will be good for soul and body; teach them to look away from follies for their enjoyment. Be what a mother should be to her children—a spiritual director. Establish a confidence with them about religious matters. Let their eyes read upon your heart an intense desire for their salvation. Surround them with a religious atmosphere. Show them that to be a Christian is to be cheerful, joyous, sunny, and at the same time of exalted purity. Teach them the sweetness and the ineffable delight of communion with God. Ask God's help upon this course, and you will see the result you desire."

Trust in Jesus.

At times we feel discouraged, as we have met with disappointment, misfortune, or affliction. The cares of this world may bear like a burden upon us, everything rests under a cloud, and we perhaps are ready to despair.

At such times we can go to Jesus for sympathy, feeling truly thankful for his love, favor, and help in time of need. We are living in trying times; everything bears the impression of uncertainty. Temporal affairs rest upon a tottering basis, men of the world are loosing courage, all acknowledge that we are upon the eve of some great event. The billows of life's troubled sea beat high; shoals abound; false beacon lights are set up; clouds gather thick and fast; the outlook is one of dread, darkness, and evil to those who do not discern the signs of the times, and who are not ready to go out and meet the Bridegroom.

Jesus is coming soon. How sweet the thought, carrying comfort, consolation and strength in the anticipation, and in the reality more than feeble, moral man can depict or conceive.

Weary, toiling ones, cheer up; gird on the armor; look above the earthly, with the strong eye of faith piercing the cloud, look over present evils, knowing that these things are but for the moment.

"Yet fearful saints, fresh courage take;
The clouds ye so much dread
Are big with mercy, and will break
In mercy on your head."

Strong faith in Jesus is needed. Early wisdom, good works, names, theories, truth itself are nought, if we are out of the ark of salvation. Let us then consecrate all, trust implicitly in him whom to know is life eternal. He doeth all things well. We are in his hands therfore we must,

"Judge not the Lord by feeble sense,
But trust him for his grace;
Behind a frowning providence,
He hides a smiling face."

A little while longer and we shall end the songs and sights of time, in the glorious hallelujahs of an unending, unalloyed peace in Paradise restored.—Advent Time's.

Humility is a preparation for every fruit of the Spirit.

HUNTINGDON, PA. OCT 13 .874.

☞ How to send money.—All sums over $1.50, should be sent either in a check, draft or posta. order. If neither of these can be obtained, have the letter registered.

☞ When Money is sent, always send with it the name and address of those who paid it. Write the names and post office as plainly as possible.

Please Notice.

As our post office is now removed to the new building specially erected for that purpose, there has been a number of changes made and among others the number of our box. After this those writing will please address box 50 instead of 172 as formerly. We hope our patrons and friends will note this change and address us accordingly.

Our Visit Home

Although our present home is in the Pilgrim building, yet there are other places that seem equally homelike. Not least among them, in our estimation, is the place where our parents reside. Though not now surrounded by the scenes of our youthful days, yet it is none the less homelike and attended with home associations, and there is no other place we enjoy a visit more than we do at father's house. According to previous arrangement, brother Archy VanDyke, who lives some five miles from Huntingdon, came to our place with the intention of accompanying us on a visit home. In a short time, we, with part of the Pilgrim family, were on our way homeward bound, and after a pleasant drive of about eleven miles, we landed, though a little later than we expected, but none the less welcome. We found all in good health, which has always been the happy privilege of our parents to enjoy After having our bodily wants cared for, we enjoyed a happy season together in conversing, singing and prayer.

On Sunday morning was the regular appointment for preaching in the Bethel, about a half mile distant. At this place a goodly number congregated and were profitably entertained by Bro. VanDyke. After services were over, three made application for baptism. We then resorted to the river side and they were buried with Christ in holy baptism, and then, we believe, went on their way rejoicing. Such seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord are truly refreshing, and greatly encourage those of us especially who have been faithfully laboring to call sinners to repentance. Of late, we have been assured that our labors have not been altogetner in vain, as a number have come out on the Lord's side, and we believe that there are still others counting the cost. In the evening we returned home again feeling well pleased with our visit home and our religious privileges enjoyed at the Bethel.

Educational.

The subject of High Schools is becoming fearfully agitated and if not stopped, we fear it will end just like every other subjects that has been so rabbidly discussed through our periodicals, nothing gained, but a great deal of love lost. In the last Companion, No. 40, we notice no less than ten columns devoted to the subject, and the writers differ so widely that we feel to say, brethren better not. We have also opened our columns for a friendly interchange of ideas relative to the move now under contemplation, not so much from choice, as to meet the issues now incumbent upon us. After a mature deliberation upon our duty and that of the Church, towards the School project, we are not at all sure whether or not we are pursuing the proper course, or indeed whether we are acting charitably or not. If we or any other set of brethren were to engage in a legitimate business, sanctioned by Annual Meeting, and make it known through our periodicals to give it publicity, and thus secure patronage, we would feel very sore towards our brethren if they would, through the same medium, commence to destroy the character of our project and thus plunge us into a great financial loss. In the eyes of the law it might be considered libelous and there would be nothing wanting but the animus to make it criminal. The subject of introducing schools among us, has been before our Annual Meeting at different times, and our brethren all know that as a private enterprise it has been granted. Just the same as that of the publishing of papers and some other things that we might name. On the strength of this grant the brethren favorable to a better means of obtaining a good education among us, have made a move in the enterprise now before us for consideration. Those who are engaged in the work are sacrificing both time and money in the hope that it may prove a success, and in the end, reward them for their labor, if not in dollars and cents, in the consciousness of having done their duty. Now what we wish understood is this: every brother that writes against the enterprise does it with the hope and intention of destroying its character and thus defeating the project altogether. Having accomplished this, you have also brought upon your brethren a financial loss, if not of money, of time, which is its equivalent. But says my brother, it deserves to be defeated because it is a wrong, it is dangerous. Whether this is so or not we shall not now determine, but this we do know, if it is wrong, Annual Meeting did wrong in granting the privilege, which is possible, as we do not pretend to say that it is too infallible to pass a wrong decision. But under the existing circumstances we do think our wisest course would be to let our brethren go ahead with their school, and if it proves a success and gets into operation, the Church has lost none of its power. If the school is improperly conducted, or, in the wisdom of the Church, it proves a hindrance to the cause, it can be either remoddled or suspended at the pleasure of the Church, at all events, we do not believe that discussing it largely through our papers will make the matter any better either for or against, therefore we would be pleased to have our brethren to turn their minds in another direction and exercise their talents in things that more directly pertain to our spiritual interests. We are in favor of having everything set forth in its true light, but an extensive repetition of the same ideas is not entertaining, is not instructive.

The Spring Run Meeting.

On Wednesday and Thursday of last week we had the pleasure of participating in a communion season with our brethren and sisters of Spring Run, and as occasions of this kind are always fraught with interest to those "who are of the same precious faith," we think it proper that we should tell our readers something about this, to us, bountiful spiritual feast.

The services were opened at the appointed hour by singing the good old hymn, the hymn that so truthfully expresses the desire of every Christian heart, "Nearer my God to thee." After a season of prayer the very important inquiry made by the disciples of the Savior, "Are there few that be saved," was presented as a subject by brother Badger of Iowa. He treated the subject intelligibly and earnestly. Several other brethren also followed with some remarks and then closed the first service, after which three souls were buried with Christ in baptism. This church seems to be in a prosperous condition. We were informed that two were baptized at the council previous to the meeting, and that there has been some accessions at every regular appointment held in the meeting-house, which is every two weeks, for some time. There was also an election held for two deacons, and the lot fell on brethren Michael F. H. Kinsel and John Yoder. After the baptisms were over and the election concluded, the regular examination service followed and by this time the number of brethren and sisters was large, so much so that there was not room for all to be seated at the tables. Some from adjoining congregations who had already attended a Lovefeast did not participate. The exercises were solemn and impressive, and indeed they cannot be otherwise if the mind is fixed on the subject before it. The next morning there was again public service at 9 o'clock. Eld. Christian Long of Iowa discoursed from Isaiah 48: 17, 18. Subject the service of the Lord. He first showed the value of this service, that it is profitable, and will not fail to bring a glorious reward When we are about to engage in service of a temporal nature it is natural for us to inquire whether it will pay. In this we may be disappointed, but in the service of God, we cannot be disappointed. The Savior says we shall receive a hundred fold in this life. But how can this be when we are to forsake everything, even father and mother for the Gospel's sake? Then too, we must be severed from our former associates and this, apparently, is a great sacrifice. Wherein is the great reward in this life? He then went on to show how we find fathers and mothers in the church a hundred fold, how orphans find fathers and mothers in the church, what pleasant associations we have in the church, how we enjoy each other's society, what peace and joy we experience, and how we will be enabled with the Psalmest to exclaim, "How good and pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity." He then presented some of the inducements to enter the service of God. God cares for us. He careth for us as the shepherd careth for his sheep. Illustrated it by referring to David as a shepherd, how he cared for his sheep. The Lord is our shepherd and careth for us. He will do as he has promised, and it is a great advantage to be in his fold and under his protecting care. Again it is an advantage to us when we come to a bed of affliction and death. We can then, if we have been faithful in his service, have the hope that after death, we can enter the Father's house—our heavenly home. At this point he made some very touching appeals by referring to the attractions of that home. There we have friends that have gone before, and the great joy that will be realized in a reunion creates in the Christian heart a longing for that heavenly home. In this life we have troubles, trials, and conflicts, and some of us may see the time "when the heavens will depart as a scroll," but we have the glorious consolation that if we keep in the service of the Lord we are safe. He then referred to the latter part of the text, "Then shall thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea." Illustrated this by referring to the Mississippi river. At first it is but a small tributary, but as it advances from its source it becomes larger and larger until it is finally swallowed up in the gulf. When we first enter the service of the Lord, we experience a peace the world knows nothing about, but if we advance in the divine life our peace becomes greater and greater until we are finally swallowed up in death. This peace can not be taken away from us; it is a continual flowing stream even amidst the greatest external obstacles. He then referred to the power of righteousness, how the waves of the sea illustrate that power, how this power is obtained and in what it consists—the word of God. We should study the word, and throw away all novels. Closed with a strong appeal to the young brethren to study to make themselves approved workman, and thus qualify themselves for active service in the church. He was then followed by Eld. Grabill Myers, Badger, and others with very instructive and appropriate remarks, and although the services continued from 9 o'clock until nearly noon, the time appeared very short. We seldom enjoyed a richer feast of heavenly manna, and we surely think all present will realize that it was good to be there.

The ministerial force was well represented. Besides our western brethren were Eld. Isaac Myers of Buffalo, who is now over 70 years of age, yet looks stout and hearty; Eld. Grabill Myers of Warriorsmark. Eld. Jno. Glock, Abram Funck, and John Spanogle of Anghwick; Eld. Wm. Howe, Andrew Spanogle and Geo. S. Myers of Dry Valley.

After the meeting we accompanied brother Abram Myers to his home, where there were a number of brethren and sisters, and in whose society we enjoyed ourself much until the 4 P. M. train when we were homeward bound, feeling much strengthened and encouraged in our Christain pilgrimage. J. B.B.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

"Do Your Best."

"When I was a little boy," said a gentleman, "I paid a visit one evening to my grandfather, a venerable old man, whose black velvet cap and tassell, blue breeches and huge silver kneebuckles filled me with awe. When I went to bid him good-by, he drew me between his knees, and, placing his hand upon my head, said, 'Grandchild, I have one thing to say to you: will you remember it?' I looked into his face and nodded, for I was afraid to promise aloud. 'Well,' he continued, 'whatever you do, do the best you can.'

"This, in fact, was my grandfather's legacy to me; and I proved better than gold. I never forgot his words; and I believe I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Robert and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid out plans for something else. Robert, vexed and illhumored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I began pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind and I determined to follow it. In a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation as his eyes glanced over my bed, or the fourpence he slapped into my hands afterwards, as he said my work was well done. Ah! I was a glad and thankful boy, while poor Robert was left to drudge over his weeds all the afternoon.

"At fifteen I was sent to an academy, where I had partly to earn the money to pay for my being taught. The lessons seemed hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age, and not very strong, my mother had three offers of a situation for me before the year was out. When I joined the church, I tried to do the Lord's work as well as I could; and often when I was tempted to leave the Sabbath school, or let a hinderance keep me from prayer meeting, or get discouraged in any good thing, my grandfather's last words, 'Do the best you can,' have given me fresh courage, and I would again try."

Let every boy and girl take this for their motto. Act upon, it will do wonders. It will bring out wonders. It will bring out powers which will delight yourselves and friends. "Do your best," or as the Bible says, "Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."—Daily Days.

What is Believing?

"I believe in Eddie Morse," Mrs. Eaton heard her little son say to his companions as he bade them "good evening," when his mother opened the door to admit him, on his return from school.

"Do you know what is meant by the words you have just spoken, my son?" said Mrs. Eaton.

"Oh! yes, mother," was the ready reply; "I meant that I could trust him every time, and feel sure that he would stick to me."

"But why, my boy, do you place so much confidence in Eddie Morse? Are you sure he deserves it?" again asked the lady.

"Why, mother, if you knew Eddie you would never ask such a question. He is just the grandest boy in school; and when a fellow once takes Eddie for his chum, he may feel sure of him through thick and thin. He'll never desert his friends, nor fail of the least thing that he promises. Every body believes in Eddie."

"I am truly glad my son, that you can give such an account of your friends; but do you know that in praising him you have unconsciously been dwelling on the very traits for which I commended to you our dear Savior; and how you answered me that you did not understand what believing in Jesus meant—it all seemed so strange and mysterious? Now just apply to the loving Redeemer what you have been saying of your friend; only remember that it is all true in a far higher nobler sense of the Lord Jesus than it can possible be of any mere human being. Our Lord is the just and 'grandest' being in the heaven or on the earth, and when one once receives him for a friend, he may feel sure of him in every possible emergency. He never was known to desert a friend, or fail in the fulfillment of a single promise. You understand what it is to believe in Eddie; can't you in the same way believe in Jesus, place all your reliance on his finished sacrifice for sin, and love, and cleave to, and obey him now and evermore, feeling assured that in sickness or health, life or death, time or eternity, he will never leave or forsake those that put their trust in him? This is believing in Jesus, and it is just as simple an act as that expressed by your assersion that you believe in Eddie Morse."

Heroism.

"Oh, dear!" said Willy Gray, as he sat down on the saw-horse, and looked at the kindling-wood which he ought to have been splitting up for his mother. "I do wish I could do something for the world. Some great action, that every one could admire, and that would make the country and the whole world better and happier. I wish I could be a hero, like Washington, or a famous missionary, like Judson, but I can't do anything nor be anything."

"Why do you want to be a hero?" asked his cousin, John Maynard, who, coming up just then, happened to overhear his soliloquy.

"Oh!" said Willy, coloring, "every one admires a hero, and talks about him, and praises him after he is dead."

"That's the idea, is it?" said John. "You want to be heroic for the sake of being talked about?"

Willy did not exactly like this way of putting it.

"Not only that, but I want to do good to people, convert the heathen or—or—save a sinking ship, or save the country, or something like that."

"That sounds better, but believe me, Willy, the greatest heroes have been men who thought the least about themselves, and the most about their work. And so far as I can recollect now, the greatest—I mean according to the Christian standard—have always begun by doing the neatest duty, however small;" and here John took up the axe, and began to split the kindling-wood.

Willy jumped off the saw-horse, and began to pick up the sticks without a word, but though he said nothing, he thought the more.

"I've wasted a lot of time in thinking what things I might do, if I only had the chance," he thought, "and I've neglected the things I could and ought to do, and made a lot of trouble for mother. I guess I'd better begin my heroism by fighting my own laziness."

Will any boy adopt Willy's resolution, and carry it out in his daily life?—Child's World.

Obeying Mother Pleasantly.

Little Harry had seen some older boys fly their kites from the tops of houses, and he thought it would be nice fun if he could do so too. So he came to his aunt, and said:

"Aunt Mary, may I go up to the top of the house and fly my kite?"

His aunt wished to do everything to please him; but she thought it was very unsafe, so she said:

"No, Harry, my boy; I think that is a very dangerous sort of play. I'd rather you wouldn't go."

"All right. Then I'll go out on the bridge." said Harry. His aunt smiled, and said she hoped he would always be as obedient as that.

"Harry, what are you doing?" said his mother on one occasion.

"Spinning my new top, mother."

"Can't you take the baby out to ride? Get out the carriage, and I'll bring him down."

"All right," shouted the boy, as he put his top away in his pocket and hastened to obey his mother.

"Uncle William, may I go over to your store this morning?" said Harry, one day at breakfast. "I want to see those books again, that I was looking at yesterday."

"O yes, Harry," said his uncle, "I shall be very glad to have you."

"But I cannot let you to-day, Harry," said his mother. "I want you to go out with me; you shall go to the store another time."

"All right," said Harry; and went on with his breakfast.

No matter what Harry was asked to do, or what refusal he met with when asking for anything, his constant answer was, "All right." He never stopped to worry or tease. He never asked, "Why can't I?" or why musn't I?" Harry had not only learned to obey, but he had learned to obey in good humor.—Youth's Companion.

How dangerous to defer those momentous reformations which the conscience is solemnly preaching to the heart. If they are neglected, the difficulty and indisposition are increasing every month. The mind is receding, degree after degree, from the warm and hopeful zone: till at last it will enter the arctic circle, and become fixed in relentless and eternal ice.

Our Lovefeast.

We, the members in Stone Valley, a branch of the Spring Run congregation, held a lovefeast on the 25th and 26th of September, in the barn of brother George Fry near Manor Hill, Huntingdon Co., Pa. Brother Grabill Myers, of Blair Co., came and labored with us, and had he failed to come, we would have been left entirely alone, so we surely feel thankful to him that he did not forget us. We rather expected others, but they failed to come. Services opened at 1 o'clock on Friday, and closed on Lord's day at noon. Truly we think it was good for us to be there. We are as ye few in number, but we fondly hope that the time is not far distant when others will buckle on the armor and come forth prepared to meet the foe. Indeed we think we had striking evidence of being surrounded by a God-fearing people, and that evidence was, order and attention. We are glad to remark that we never attended a meeting where the spectators showed such a high regard, and especially during evening services, for which they have our warmest thanks, and we feel encouraged. Bro. Myers labored earnestly with us. Many solemn truths were spoken, loud and inviting appeals were made to the unconverted. May it be as seed sown on good ground, spring up and bring forth fruit abundantly.

ELLIE J. VANDYKE.

Huntingdon, Pa.

Brother Brumbaugh:—By your permission I will give the readers of the PILGRIM a short account of our Lovefeast which was held on the evening of the 24th of September in the Conemaugh Church, Cambria Co., Pa. 4 o'clock was the time appointed for the meeting to commence, and by that time there was a fair representation of brethren, sisters and friends. The ministers from abroad were Elders Jos. Berkey, Jacob Holsopple and Hiraam Musselman of Shade District, Somerset Co, and Caleb Secrist of Manor, Indiana Co., and with the earnest labors of these brethren, we had a very good meeting.

After the Communion was over bro. John Harshbarger and brother Joseph S. Burkhart were advanced to the second degree in the ministry, when services closed for the night Next day about 10 A. M. we again met for public preaching, at which time Berkey, Holsopple, and Musselman were absent, and brother Secrist remained with us and preached from the words, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my father which is in Heaven." Brother Burkhart also followed with a few very appropriate remarks, had a very good meeting from first to last, for which we feel to thank God.

STEPHEN HILDEBRAND.

BUFFALO, Col. Sept. 20, 1874.

To Clara Morrison, Sebastopol, Cal.—In reading over the columns of that ever welcome paper, the PILGRIM, No 25, volume 5, page 197, my attention was drawn to what you say is a reward being offered of $500 to any person that would produce one text plainly stating certain points, among others, the following:

"That the disciples ever had a religious meeting in the day time of that day," (the first day of the week.)

"That the disciples ever had more than one meeting, even in the evening of the first day."

Now it is not for the sake of the reward that I reply to the above, but to show the party that offers the reward that if they had read the Scripture a little more they would have had no occasion to offer the above reward, for the Scriptures are surely not silent as regards the above points.

In the first place I will refer the party that offers the reward to St. John 20: 1, "The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark." This was early in the morning that she came and on the first day of the week. Again same chapter, 19th verse, "Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled." Now then the disciples had this meeting in the evening. Again 29th verse, "And after eight days again, his disciples were within." This was undoubtedly again the first day of the week, either in the day time or in the evening. Now then we have them assembled twice, either both times in the evening, or once in the day time and once in the evening, and both on the first day.

The next place we will go to Acts of the Apostles, 20th chapter 7th verse, "And upon the first day of the week when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them." Here again the disciples have another meeting either in the day time or in the evening. Now then the disciples either had three meetings in the evening, or they had one or more meetings in the day time, and all on the first day of the week.

In Rev. chapter 1 verse 10, "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day." John here calls it the Lord's day, where in the Gospel by St. John he calls it the first day of the week.

Brother Brumbaugh: As you requested if any of the readers of this State have the facts you would be glad to record them. Now I can say I have been in this place over one year, and I will give you a true statement of the terrible grasshoppers and their work of destruction. The hopper's first raid was July 26th. On Sunday evening a little before sundown they fell to the earth like large flakes of snow, just like a moderate snow storm, and continued coming in this way for three or four days. They commenced on the corn fields first, and stripped every stalk and, ear that was not too hard, they took it clear as they went. Then they left, and in that way they continued coming for three or four weeks But we never saw any difference in regard to the sun shining. To look towards it they looked very thick up in the air. The corn and the leaves of the fruit trees was the principal part of the destruction, but you may know that it is very hard for us poor homesteaders to bear the first year, when corn was the most for us to depend upon for feed for our horses and hogs. That is the greatest trouble, as for the coming year we will have all our grain to buy, just as we had when we first came here. But it will still be harder next year than this, for grain was a reasonable price last Fall. Corn was worth 20 to 25 cents per bushel, oats 25 to 30. Now corn is worth 60 cents per bushel and scarce at that. Oats 60, wheat 60 to 80 according to the quality. Winter wheat No. 1. $1.10 per bushel. There is plenty of wheat and oats in market at present, but the people all have to feed wheat to their hogs, and a great deal is chopped for horse feed, so that the wheat may get scarce after while as well as corn. But wheat, oats, barly and rye was a bountiful crop, and we are thankful to our God for the blessing of the bountiful harvest of small grain.

There is considerable in the papers concerning emigrants leaving their homes and going away. This is a fact, but what is the cause of them going away? They came here and homesteaded their land and perhaps some had not one dollar left, but they worked along and put out a corn crop and that was all they had to depend on. This the terrible grasshoppers devoured, and what were they to do? Perhaps a great many have large families, which I know to be the case as I have talked with some and they said if they just could live here they would not go back East again under any circumstances, but they had a family of children and they were compelled to go away and leave their nice homes. They nearly all seem to like Kansas and would rather make it their home than anywhere else if they were not compelled to go East to get work to make a living. Some say they are determined to come back if they get able. Of course, there are men here like everywhere else. They thought a living would come without work, but they find it not to be the case. Such persons are not needed in this new country, for people must work here if they expect to reap the benefit. As for us, we must work for our living, but our family is small, (2 children, myself and husband) and we are both blessed with good health and are able to work. So we are not alarmed if the hoppers did eat all the corn. We will try to stay here and stick to our home for that is just what we came here for. We have a beautiful home and will try to stay here, hoppers or no hoppers.

Now I will tell you about the emigration coming in Kansas. 80 families landed here last Tuesday night, and located 21 sections of rail road land, about 15 miles from us. These are all—Mennonites. Besides these a number of others are coming every day. So as some go out, others come in to fill their places. Brother Arnold from Iowa, and brother Henrick from Ohio, were here this Summer and they seemed to be very much pleased with the country. Brother Arnold has sold out, and he wrote that he was coming here. We will be very glad to see him come, and hope he will not be the only brother that will come. The want of brethren is the most of our loss in coming west. We do not have the blessed privilege of meeting our brethren and sisters and friends in the Millmine Church, as we had when there. Some Sabbath mornings I think, Oh! if I just could meet there and hear the brethren preach and sing and pray, what a happy day it would be, Oh, you don't know how hard it is. I tell you we deeply feel the loss of our church, as we seldom get to see any members. But we hope we will soon have a church of our own here in this beautiful country. Brethren this surely is the place for you to come and start a church. The worldly people say, "if only some of your members would come and preach for us. I like your Church and would be a member if I had a chance." Now, some of you brethren East please think of this and take it to heart, and you surely will take pity on us and come and preach for us. I will close by asking the prayers of all.

Sue V. Wampler.

Dear Pilgrim:—

We are ready to give the news that we think will be of interest to our many readers.

On the 17th inst. there were three baptized, on the 20th one, and on the 26th three more. This makes eleven accessions during the month, and about twenty during the Summer.

This will make us a membership of about 400, perhaps the largest Church in the state, if not in the U. S ates.

We have three church Houses consequently have preaching every Sabbath, and frequently have two meetings the same day.

Any ministering brethren passing through this way wishing to stop off with us would at no time fail to meet a congregation, that is on Sabbath days, we would be glad to have brethren stop off at any time they pass along. Three rail roads running through the country, viz:

Indianapolis, Peru, and Chicago, Toledo, Wabash, and Western, and Detroit, Eel River and Illinois. All running nearly centerable through the county, and members living nearly all over the county. Will brethren take notice?

J. B. Lair.

Dear Bro. Brumbaugh:—

Our Lovefeast came off on the 28th and 29 of Sept. at the Dry Valley meeting house, Mifflin Co. Pa. ¼ miles from Maitland Station, on the Sunbury and Lewistown R. R.

There was preaching on Sunday morning 29th at 10 o'clock, when two souls made application to be admitted into the church by baptism,—hope they may prove faithful until death.

Bro. Christian Long of Iowa addressed the congregation from John 10th chapt. 1st—14th which was very fitting for the occasion. He explained the verse, where it says, "they shall go in and out and find pasture,"—that it did not mean, that after we had come into the fold we could go and hold position in the world, as some would make it appear, and find pasture in the church. In all we had a very interesting meeting, one we trust that will long be remembered by the brethren and sisters in this part of God's moral vineyard. If we put to practice what we have heard it will be well for us.

Yours in the bonds of love.

Geo. W. Jones.

Dear Pilgrim:—

I will say that there are a few of the Brethren scattered through this portion of the country, and we have but one speaker and his lungs are almost worn out. I often think that our eastern Brethren ought to scatter out where their help is so much needed. We have a beautiful country and land is cheap to what it is in the East, and I have no doubt but many if them could do well and be a benefit in the way of preaching the word. Our beloved brother has so many places to preach that we only get one sermon a month. There are bodies of brethren in the East where there are perhaps 5 or 6 together every Sabbath. To those who have the interest of souls at heart I would say, come west and see us, and help to preach the word. We have a splendid crop in this part of the country for which we are thankful.

Elizabeth Gatlin.

TO THE BROTHERHOOD.

To the brethren of the general Brotherhood, greeting. In No. 40, page 688, Companion and Visitor, please see notice of Committee of last A. M. to visit California. In said notice it is said, "It will however be proper to say that our brother D. P. Sayler declines going, in consequence of the affliction of his wife," &c. I desire the Brotherhood to know my private view of the whole matter. I will say, that while the precarious state of my wife's health is a reason why I declined going to California at this time, it is however not the only reason, as I had in my mind determined not to go before I reached my home from A. M. I at the meeting believed that the actual expenses of the mission were misrepresented, and on my returning home I, in Baltimore, ascertained that the actual cost to send three brethren would not be less than $1100. a sum I considered too great to spend in one direction, and that too in an enterprise, to me, of very doubtful propriety; and more especially so if those who had the money to pay were not fully informed. I therefore suggested to the committee at the meeting referred to in the notice the propriety of not going until all the facts were fully stated to next A. M., feeling satisfied that the general Brotherhood would not condemn, but approve of our conclusion. The brethren Davy and Moomaw however felt differently and concluded to go, as set forth in the notice.

I will hereby inform the Brotherhood that I have received for the above mission from Jacob Stover, Greencastle, Pa., $2 00, and from D. Keller, Dickenson, Pa., $35, less 50 cents for collecting check. All this for the Middle District of Pa. Also sent me by H. D. Davy for Eastern District of Pa., $40. From brethren D. Long and E. Slifer for Western District of Md., $30, and from the churches composing the Eastern District of Md., $30, all of which I will pay to H. D. Davy prior to the announced time for their departure. And whereas the brethren of the Western District of Pa. have paid part of their quota to brother Quinter, they will please settle their accounts fully with him, and send no money to me, as this is all the report I intend to make of this matter.

D. P. Sayler.

DIED.

DECK.—In the Lick Creek Church, Williams Co., Ohio, Sept. 12th, sister Mary Deck, aged about 74 years. Funeral occasion improved by Elder John Brown from Rev, 14: 12-13. C. NEWCOMER.

BRUBAKER—In the Howard Church, Howard Co., Ind, Sept. 2nd, 1874, our beloved brother John Brubaker, aged 61 years, 3 months and 9 days Funeral occasion improved by the brethren and the writer from 2 Cor. 5: 1. D. BOCK.

SHATTO.—In the Lower Cumberland Branch, sister Anna Mary Shatto, aged 68 years, 9 months and three days. She was a member of the church near 32 ys, lived a widow eighteen years, and for 6 years was blind or nearly so. Funeral services by the brethren from 2d Cor. 5: 9 10, MOSES MILLER.

SLAGER.—Near Buffalo, Weld Co., Col., on the 7th of September, at the house of brother C. M. Armbrust, Nellie, daughter of brother A. Slager, aged 8 months.

The mother had departed this life near 8 month before. Funeral discourse by Eld. J. S Flory, from the words, "He will gather the lambs with his arms and carry them in his bosom."

KIRBY,— August 30, 1974, Mr. Thomas Kirby. Funeral services by Rev. John Brubaker, John Elier and others.

He suffered about two weeks with Pneumonia, and at two o'clock a, m. at the above named date he breathed his last. He was an efficient member of the German Baptist Church, and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. N. E. KEELING.

STOUFFER.—In the Manor Church, Md., Sept. 25. 1874, Bro. Abraham Stouffer, aged 65 years and 8 months.

At twelve o'clock brother Stouffer was in good health, went to the field to assist his son at some work, but soon returned to the house not feeling well, and in 40 minutes his soul took its flight to the spirit world. He leaves a companion (a sister), and nine children, all members of the Church, to mourn their loss. On Sunday 27th, his remains were interred in the burying-ground at Fahrney's M. H. Funeral services by brother A. Cost, and bro. D, Wolf, from the 9th verse of the 8th chapter of the book of Job, to a large and attentive congregation. JACOB REICHARD.

WINE.—In the English River Church, near South English, Keokuk Co., Iowa, August 29th, Solomon Jacob, youngest child of Brother George S. and Hannah Wine, aged one year, 10 months and 22 days. Funeral discourse by Elder Jacob Brower, from Luke 18: 16-17.

Thus has death again removed from the family circle another sweet flower, but then it has only faded, yea, died here, to bloom more sweetly in the paradise of God. Then dear brethren, sisters and friends, one and all, let us so live, yes be so nourished here, that when we also fade away we may grow again in our Father's Kingdom, and there meet with all our cherished ones that have gone over before us, and then we can ever reign with Jesus Christ, B. F. FLORY.

WYNE.—In the Okaw Church, Piatt Co., Ill., Eld. John Wyne, aged 55 years, 10 months and 21 days.

He leaves a sorrowing wife a sister, and 8 children to mourn their loss. He lived in the bonds of matrimony 30 years, 10 months and 11 days. He was the father of 11 children, of which 3 preceded him. Bro. Wyne was an ordained Elder when he came from Virginia 8 years ago. He was housekeeper in the Millmine District for about 5 years, then moved to the Okaw District where he lived till his death. Funeral occasion improved by Elders Joseph Hendricks and the writer from 1st Thess. 4: 13-14, to a large congregation.

JACOB WAGONER.

MYERS.—In the Spring Run Congregation, Mifflin Co., Pa., Aug. 26, 1874, bro. Samuel Myers, aged 76 years, 2 months and 15 days. Funeral services by J. R. Hanawalt and Wm. Howe from Isaiah 38: 15.

Disease general debility, having had nervous spells of sickness and lately a severe attack of asthma, followed by dropsy. He however was, apparently on the mend, the swelling had somewhat subsided, and he began to think he might linger a long time yet, but his desire was to depart and be at rest. About three weeks prior to his death he desired once more to attend to the solemn ordinance of anointing. The Elders were called and it was attended to, when he rejoiced in spirit until the day of his death. He was cheerful and patient, oft joined in the family devotions, exhorting his children, neighbors and brethren to be faithful. On the morning of the 26th he arose from his bed unaided and walked to another room. Part of the family with some of the near relatives were conversing pleasantly when he all at once threw back his head, and the spirit was gone. Without a struggle he calmly fell asleep.

He served as a deacon for upward of 40 years, and was faithful to duty, always seemed much concerned about the Church and its general prosperity. Having lived at the one place from before his marriage up to the time of his death, and being an old citizen, the funeral was largely attended. He leaves a widow and ten children to mourn their loss but his great gain.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Mount Mansfield in Vermont is capped with snow.

—Bro. J. T. Myers informs us that during the latter part of the Summer there were some 39 added to the Middle Creek congregation, Somerset Co., Pa.

—From 1804 to 1873 the Bible has been circulated in 271 languages —over 131,000,000 coppies. Last year every hour of each working day 1,300 Bibles were printed, over 16,000 every day, and in languages spoken by 700,000,000 of people.

—In a short report from D. D. Shively, in No. 38, Elder was attached to his name. This is a mistake as he is only a private member and only as such, he represented himself. The mistake occurred in our office—please excuse.

—The Committee appointed by last A. M. to visit the brethren of California intend to start on their mission about the middle of the month. They intend leaving Chicago on the 17th inst.

Bro. A. C. Neff of Mt. Jackson, Va., says, "The Church here is in a prosperous condition. We had our Lovefeast on the 22nd of Sept. We had a large congregation and good order. Fourteen were added to the Church by baptism a short time before and during the meeting."

—The buildings for the great Centennial to be held in Philadelphia 1875, is under way. The foundation for the "Centennial Art Gallery" is completed. This foundation alone required 7,000 perch of stone, the flooring will be marble and will require 75,00 square feet. The whole building is let at $1.199,273 of which $525,000 is to be spent each year until completed. For each day, after the 1st of February 1876, that the building is not finished, the contractor pays $1,200, and he is to receive a bonus of $1.200 for each day previous to Dec. 1st 1875, that he has it completed.

—The American Bible Society has published the Gospel of John in the New York system of point reading for the use of blind persons. This is thought a decided improvement upon the method of raised letters. It is claimed that by the system of points an adult who has lost his sight by disease or accident can learn to read in a few days, whereas it requires months to learn to read by raised letters.

—Bro. J. B. Lair of Mexico Ind. says: "The health is not very good in these parts, have had a tolerable good rain. Still it is not sufficient to fill up the wells, and give stock water. The pasture is about dried up. The wheat fields are very spotted, partly on account of drought, and partly on account of chinch bugs. Some farmers are resowing their fields, that was eaten up by the chinch. We had an abundant peach crop, but apple crop is rather short. All vegetables are a very short crop."

—The annual General Conference of the Seventh day Baptists was held on the 23rd ult., at De Ruyter, N. Y. The sermon was preached by the Rev. W. B. Gillette. The Recorder says: It is pleasant to comtemplate the fact that our people are, from one end of the denomination to the other, bound together by such sacred ties as constitutes them a great loving family whose bonds of friendship shall only strengthen as time advances.

—In connection with a number of anti-tobacco tracts published by Mr. Trask we have the following crispy and pointed notice.

MR. EDITOR:

I send you a few specimens of my TRACTS, which assault the nauseous, noxious, poisonous abomination—Tobacco. I do not ask you to praise them, but if you will simply tell your readers that such productions exist—that rich people can have them at cost, and that poor people can have them for nothing, by simply paying postage, I will heartily thank you.

If any of our readers wish to become posted on this subject, they cannot do better than send to Geo. Trask, and procure some of his tracts.

—A daily paper says:

The standard of faith of the Presbyterian Church have for generations been the "Confession of Faith," the two Westminister Catechisms, embodying the doctrines of justification by faith, election, reprobation, and the final preservance of the elect. Without declaring full belief in these no candidate for admission to the church could be received into the Presbyterian Communion.

The time never was and is not now when candidates for admission to the Presbyterian Church were required to make such a profession of faith. To become a minister or elder such a declaration is required, but not to be received as a member.

—We had the pleasure of a short visit from our brother J. T. Myers of Philadelphia. He had been attending school there, but more latterly taking lessons in the Hebrew and Greek from a Jewish Rabbi, preaching some for the Germantown brethren and assisting in the "Interlinear Translation of the sacred Scriptures" by Tafles. Bro. Jacob is greatly interested in the study of the languages, and promises to make an excellent linguist.

—Sister S. V. Wampler of Hutchison, Kansas under date of Oct. 1st says: "This morning ten car loads of emigrants landed here in Hutchison that we did not know of. There were over 400 people located here this week, They brought with them a great many horses and cattle, and enough provision to last them a year."

—We just now have the following from sister N. Crouse of Botetort Co., Va., which was waylaid—please excuse us we will now only give a short extract: "Dear editor, I will say to you, my dear afflicted sister Elizabeth S. says to me, have the good PILGRIM to continue its welcome visit to my home. I cannot do without the dear PILGRIM as it gives me more pleasure in my lonely hours than anything that could be offered me. I give it to my friends and neighbors to read, and they all love it very much."

—The Waco (Texas) Advance says "On Sunday the synagogue in Galveston was crowded to hear the profession of faith which Miss Theodosia Rushing, daughter of Col. Rushing of the Ennis Argus was to make the unity and singleness of God. Miss Rushing and her father declared that she did this of her own accord. Babbi Blum warned her that it was no light thing to connect herself with the children of Isreal, whom the bigoted yet treat with opprobrium. But she was firm, and declared her faith. Miss Rushing was then united in the alliency of matrimony with Mr. Phillip Freeman."

—Eld. Moses Miller of McChanicsburg, Pa., says: On the 22nd I went with brethren H. D. Davy, D. Long, C. G. Lint, D. Keller and D. Gerlach to the Indian Creek Church. Then on the eve of the 24th, in company with the first three named, went to Botetourt Church, Va., Bro. D. P. Sayler meeting us at brother Plaine's on the morn of the 29th. Afternoon we were divided and attended meeting that evening and several next day. Myself not being well was unable to do much. Monday 28th was set for council, but the case was such that we did not get through until Thursday the first of October p. m., when we came to Bonsacks, took supper with brother Plaine, and at 7 30 p. m. took the train for home where we arrived on the 2nd in the evening. After a good nights rest I felt better, and am now in my usual health, for which I feel thankful to the Giver of all good. Bro. Davy expected to attend some of the feasts in Md. before going home. Sayler and Long expected to get home the same evening I did. Bro. Lint we left at brother Plaine's. He expected to attend some feasts in the Shenandoah Valley, Va.

Love of Dress.

A distinguished physician writes in the Herald of Health of a recent visit to Europe, and how our notions of dress are esteemed there:

It pains me to say it, but perhaps we may be benefited by seeing ourselves as others see us. The opinions that American girls in Europe have won are anything but creditable and desirable.

While visiting a school near Frankfort-on-Main, I asked if there were any American pupils, and the proprietor replied, "No, we do not take them, they dress so extravagantly, they think and talk so much of their clothes, that they disturb the quiet, simple ways of the German girls; and we find their influences do more hurt than their money does us good."

In Dresden, I knew an American lady who could not find a private school where they would take her daughter, for similar reasons. Who could have imagined for a moment that when the bondage of trailing street dresses was once removed, and short ones sanctioned, that you could ever find human beings in the shape women yielding homage again to that most filthy and abominable of all fashions? But you see even now on the ruins of burned cities, trailed offerings of silks and Thibets,

So long as women were kept in idleness, or allowed to do only such work as confined them within doors, there was less need of practicality in dress. Now that she competes with men in most of the activities of life, shall the style of dress not be changed to meet this new dispensation. Or shall we still see her in this bondage of attire, that enslaves her at every step? You will find weeks of labor spent, with each change of season, in making or remodelling clothes that do not stand gauged by the latest ukase of fashion. You are invited to an evening entertainment in Germany, at the house of a professor perhaps, where you meet with persons the most intellectual and cultivated—persons whose names are known and honored in all lands; hostess appears in quiant dress of drab silk, that served as her wedding one fourteen years before; the bodice is long, the sleeves are mutton-legged; but dear Mr. Grundy's presence is not felt; no one seems to scan her from head to foot, and exclaim, "How horridly she is dressed, how dowdy she looks!" Six months' time, at least, would have been expended upon that dress had it kept pace all of those years with the ever-recurring changes of fashion; and in that time, with the cares of a family—and they are not few that devolve upon the wife of a scantily paid German professor—she has learned, with her children to speak the English so well as to be able to entertain those of her guests speaking only that language. You will find, as a rule, in all lands, that the most cultivated and best bred people are the most simple and unpretendingly dressed. You find women dressed suited to their occupation; the French shop girl in a neatly plainly made black alpacca. The home-spun and woven woollen of the German servant girl meets her necessity for years. The dress of the English and Irish servant girls is made of substantial material. But let them emigrate to America, and what do you see?—this epidemic rage for dress attacting them immediately. As soon as Bridget gathers together a few spare dollars, she takes her mistress for a prototype, and goes forth, prayer book in hand, to St. Xavier's, as gorgeously as the mistress of St. Paul's.

LITERATURE.

Church's Musical Visitor is a monthly journal devoted to music and the fine arts. The August number contains Will M. Carlton's celebrated poem, "The New Church Organ" set to music. Each part contains several pieces of new music.—John Church & Co., Cincinati.

Oxford's Pulpit of the Day is devoted to the publicatioo of sermons of the most distinguished preachers living. The Sept. No. contains sermons of T. DeWitt Talmadge, Adolph Saphir and John Offerd. Monthly, $1.00 a year. 10 a part. Oxford Pub. Co, 300 Broadway N. Y.

The number of Littell's Living Age for Oct. 3d begins the 123d volume of that oldest and best of the eclectics. This is a good number with which to begin subscriptions. What higher recommendation could be given to any Magazine, than the fact that it has been published for so many years with constantly increasing success.—Littell and Gray. Boston.

A finely executed Lithograph of "Memorial Hall" the permanent portion of the Centennial Buildings, will be issued about the 10th inst. It will be printed in black, and two tints, in the finest plate paper, 21 by 27 inches. The process may be seen at Franklin Inst. Fair. Price 50 cents each by mail post paid. Thomas Hunter, successor to Dural and Hunter, 710 Filbert St. Philadelphia, Pa.

The October number of Lippincott's Magazine is exceptionally good and attractive. The publishers offer a set of Chamber's Cyclopedia, 10 vols. worth $50, for a club of 20 subscribers at $3.00 each, the regular price being $4.00. A club was raised, by a student of medicine in this place, and he now has the above substantial oncleus around which to collect a library.—Philadelphia, Pa.

The Sunday Magazine, a monthly Journal of choice, chaste, and valuable family reading, handsomely illustrated, edited by Dr. W. G. Blaikie of England, completes its third year, N. S., with the September past. The conductors return thanks to their contributors and subscribers for their aid, and will still go "hopefully forward." They have secured several new writers for the next volume, which they are determined shall be equal to any of its predecessors in the attractiveness of its contents, maintaining the pure christian principles which have ever characterized its teachings. J. B Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

POETRY.

Whiter than Snow.

SELECTED BY GEO. W. JONES.

Dear Jesus, I long to be perfectly whole;
I want thee forever, to live in my soul;
Break down every idol, cast out every foe;
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Cho.—Whiter than snow, yes, whiter than snow;
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Dear Jesus, let nothing unholy remain;
Apply thine own blood, and extract every stain;
To get this blest washing, I all things forgo;
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Cho.—Whiter than snow, etc.

Dear Jesus, come down from thy throne in the skies,
And help me to make a complete sacrifice.
I give up myself, and whatever I know—
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Cho.—Whiter than snow, etc.

Dear Jesus, thou see'st I patiently wait;
Come now, and within me a new heart create.
To those that have sought thee, thou never said no—
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Cho.—Whiter than snow, etc.

Dear Jesus, for this I must humbly entreat.
I wait, blessed Lord, at thy crucified feet.
By faith, for my cleansing, I see thy blood flow—
Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Cho.—Whiter than snow, etc.

The blessing by faith, I receive from above;
O glory! my soul is made perfect in love;
My prayer has prevailed, and this moment I know
The blood is applied. I am whiter than snow.

Cho.—Whiter than snow, yes, whiter than snow;
Dear Jesus, thy blood makes me whiter than snow.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

EPHPHATHA.

Mark 7: 34.

Brother Editor: There are many things closed by nature, others by the power of our own will, and still others by sin. The above seems to be the work of nature, or perhaps the result of a violation of nature's laws, which, under the old dispensation, and the new one too, was included under sin, as to violate was to die, in part. This we readily infer from the query concerning the blind man. "Who hath committed sin, this man or his parents?" There was, in their estimation, sin connected with the blindness, but they, on account of their limited knowledge of the subject, were not prepared to locate it. According to their knowledge of God, such a visitation could not happen unless on the commission of some grevious sin, either by the person or his parents, possibly back to the third generation. That all such cases, yea, every pain in the flesh, are the result of sin, I am as ready to believe as were they. I mean under ordinary circumstances—all the effects of a violated law. The case adverted to is an exception in reality, as it was declared that, "neither this man nor his parents did sin," but that the might of his power might be revealed, had this man been presented. In the case above, the man was deaf and had an impediment in his speech. His condition was an unfortunate one indeed, so much so that no human skill could reach it—it was the sad effect of sin, a disease for which there was, as yet, no remedy—no balm in Gilead could heal. The way into this life was closed and no man could open it until Christ come into the world and suffered and died as an atonement. This death, in the mind of God, was already consummated. Therefore He had not only the power to forgive sins but to remove the effects. For this purpose He came into the world, to open the eyes of the blind and if any were so hopelessly blind, that they could not see their blindness, He blinded them still the more so that they could not fail to see it. In order to convey more powerfully to their minds, the nature of this deadness of the senses, He makes use of literal cases, that of opening the natural eyes of the blind, and ears of the deaf, loosing the tongues of the dumb and causing the halt and maimed to leap for joy. On account of this literal sin-forgiving, His fame was spread abroad and, no doubt, many were the applications made to Him by these classes.

At the sea of Galilee, where many wonderful works were done and sins both natural and spiritual were healed, they bring him one that, no doubt, was a desperate case, one that was pronounced hopelessly incurable by their most skillful physicians and one that never was known to be cured. What the motive of this people was in bringing this man to Him we are not informed, but we may presume that they were not considered very good Christians by the Pharisees, because of their mingling blood with their sacrifices. The magnitude of this crime, our Savior did not clearly set forth, but He did tell the Pharisees that the sin of spiritual blindness was equally dangerous and that unless they repented they would all likewise perish. Their intentions, however, do not effect the circumstances. The man was deaf and dumb and therefore was a subject for the fulfillment of his purpose. He was deformed by the power of sin and as His mission was to heal these deformities He applies the remedy. spake the Ephphatha and he was healed. Oh what power, what consolation in the short sentence, "Be opened!" And yet for this very purpose our blessed Savior came, endured, suffered and died, and to-day there are hundreds and thousands, yea, millions of closed doors before which He is standing ready to pronounce the Ephphatha. Where is the deaf and dumb or blind man who, knowing his condition, would wait for a second invitation? Where is the one that would even wait for the first? History records it not. In all our observations in the world we never come across a case but what would joyfully accept such a salvation and make all haste to make, or have made, the application.

My brother, my sister, and my dear friend, do you not remember the circumstance of the poor man having the infirmity of thirty-eight years standing? How he waited and suffered at the pool of Bethesda? Though disappointed time and again, yet he despaired not but patiently awaited the next move. When it came, another stepped in before him and was healed. He knows of but one hope and that is to wait until all others who are more able than himself are healed. With this faint and distant hope he remains at the pool until Jesus comes and says, "Wilt thou be made whole?" No doubt he thinks to himself, if you knew how long I have been lying here and the many bitter disappointments which I have met, you would not ask such a question. But he had passed through a good school of patience, and as he had no friends, even this seemingly strange question revives a spark of hope—anything to be healed—all others similarly afflicted have their friends to help them, and perhaps, in this stranger I may find one to help me in, and to him he opens his heart, "Sir * * * while I am coming another steppeth down before me," equivalent to, thou knowest that I would be healed but I cannot. Long has the fountain been closed but now he hears the gladsome Ephphatha, and he is healed. This was a case to command sympathy, but those who are deaf and dumb, maimed and blind with sin are a thousand times worse than was this case, but where is the concern? How many have been afflicted with the awful leprous disease of sin for lo, these sixty years, with the pool of salvation at their very feet and yet they will not step in. The call of Ephphatha has been ringing in their ears for years, but the louder it rings the tighter they are closed. If there had been any at Bethesda suffering under an incurable disease, and would have refused to step in at the accepted time he would have been considered very foolish indeed, but more foolish is the sinner that will risk the death of hell with the fountain for sin and uncleanness lying before his door. When we look around us and see the fearful rage of spiritual sickness and death, we are made to exclaim "is there no balm in Gilead, no Bethesda in Zion or no Ephphatha in the kingdom?" Look around in the world and we see great multitudes marching down the broad road with death and destruction staring them in the face. Why is it? They are blind and they know it. They have been told of the Great Physician, but they will not come and be healed. Go to the sanctuary and you will see the gay and worldly throng sit as unmoved, under the preached word, as the flinty rock. Why is it? They are deaf and dumb. Yet they have, time and again, saw the Great Physician put His finger in the deaf ear and touch the dumb tongue. They know that he is ready to say Ephphatha, but they desire it not. Brethren and sisters, can we look on the condition of such and remain unmoved? Oh, let us labor and pray for the blind and dumb that the eyes and ears of their understandings may be opened to a reception of the truths of the Gospel.

The Christ-life is no sooner quickened in the soul, than it begins to "crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts." The old man must submit to crucifixion, "that the body of sin may be destroyed." There is no easier path to liberty. There is no shorter way to heaven. The new man is only possible on the condition that the old man is crucified. Between life in the flesh and life in heaven, there is one straight gait for the captain and the men. Christ was made perfect through sufferings, so are his seed. Read the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, and the twenty-first of the Book of Revelation,—the one as means the other as end. The sufferings of truth are but for a moment, the victory is forever.

—If we have faith as a grain of mustard-seed, if we have the true gem of this grace, this growing gem, and will go forward in its development by a course of persevering, self-forgetting obedience to God—obedience to your divine Master for his glory, out of love to him, and not regard to yourselves, this seed and principle of faith shall spring and grow, we know not how; and it shall become a great tree, that no tempest can uproot or shake.

A REVIEW OF CRITICISM.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

We much regret the necessity of reviewing your criticism on our essay in PILGRIM No. 34; but as we love truth above the fear of controversy, and some of our ideas not being received in the light we intended they should; we, as we hope with humble boldness, like David, in the name of the Lord of hosts, shall undertake a review of the several criticisms that have appeared against us. In this we have filed four additional arguments, to give us a large basis of operation.

You quote our first argument and admit its truthfulness; that the Scriptures nowhere authorizes the measures of a high school. The idea that you are engaged in a work, that you admit, you are not authorized to engage in, is to us, a very great admission indeed. Authorize means "to made legal; to justify." What! do that which we know the Scriptures do not justify us in! Rather serious indeed. You further remark that, "we are nowhere authorized to build houses and barns for our protection, and that of our stock," &c. &c. closing with these words: "yet all these things and many more we do, because reason and the Holy Ghost have taught us that they are good as a means to carry out that which is taught and authorized." Dear editor, if both reason and the Holy Ghost teaches us that the building of houses and barns are good as a means to carry out that which we are taught, are we not then authorized or justified in doing so? We are required to provide for our own. To do this we must build houses and barns. Will we be condemned for making use of the means by which we accomplish the required ends? We are slow to decide. You affirm that the Holy Ghost teaches us. Dear editor, will the Holy Ghost teach us a thing and the Scripture condemn us for yielding to that teaching? I have not so learned Christ. You further allude to our admission of the propriety, or rather the necessity of a good common education. In this you maintain we destroy our first argument. Not at all, dear editor. How can we search the Scriptures without an education? How can we write epistles, and "study to be workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth," &c., without an education? Hence the Scriptures authorize at least a common education. But this is not the subject we endeavored to treat. We made the remark that we did that we might be correctly understood. We did admit that patronizing sectarian schools was subjecting brethren's children to some danger. Truth we are always frank to admit. To guard the evil we suggested careful parental discipline over children, while you proposed a brethren's school. We feel candid that your remedy will only augment the evil.

Please allow us to insert a paragraph of your criticism: "What have we to fear as a result from patronizing a brethren's school: a school controlled and taught by brethren, and surrounded by their influence; a place where is taught in connection with the arts and sciences, the humble principles of the church, both by theory and practice, precept and example." From the tone of the above you must misapprehend us. The [illegible] differs from the above [illegible]. Please [illegible] to the articles, but did not [illegible] principles of [illegible], even [illegible] theory in this and disregarded her practices also, besides, publicly acknowledged that they were not examples of her humility. Seeing that we were misunderstood, we ask leave to relate one more instance of the same kind to further cast light upon our position. A leading traveling elder from your State, and one from our State, constituted a joint committee to wait upon a certain congregation. They found the evil of pride so prevalent that they frankly told them that under existing circumstances, they could neither of them break bread with them; could not commune with them. We know this congregation to be warm sympathizers with the present school movement. A school having the above as its leading element (with some plain element) is the kind of a school we were opposing. But a school in which the humble principles of the church are taught, by theory, practice and example is quite another school. We did not say in our former essay that we would rather support a worldly institution than the one you described; neither do we say so now, in our present review. You charge us with betraying our trust in the brethren. Rather grave, dear editor! Instead of a betrayal, we have publicly analyzed the subject, and tried to expose the more prominent errors. We see no betrayal, but an important principle of right in it. We have confidence in every brother and sister, but we have a good deal more confidence in the plain element in the church, than we have in the opposite. We remarked in our essay that we patronize the official capacity of magistrates, justices, and lawyers, but we oppose them in the church, in like manner do we patronize the high schools of our country, but we oppose them in the church. To the above you take considerable objection, closing with the words, "the intention in attending high schools is relatively as different from the intention when patronizing magistrates, lawyers, &c. as light is from darkness." When the idea occurred to us, we thought there was considerable analogy and we see some yet. When we go to school it is to gain a development of mind and gain a knowledge which will fit us for the duties of life. When we go to magistrates or lawyers not unfrequently we go to obtain a knowledge to guide us in some business transaction. Knowledge we sought in the first place, and knowledge we sought in the second place. The first were teachers of literature; the second teachers of law. The first we paid a fee, the second also. Persons going to school do not all propose to become teachers, not by any means. If we remain with teachers of literature a sufficient length of time, and desire to, we may in turn become teachers also. If we remain with a lawyer a sufficient length of time and desire to, we may also become lawyers and teachers of law, hence we do not conclude that they are so relatively different as light is from darkness; but we maintain that there is considerable analogy, sufficient for an illustration. If they were alike in all respects, there could be no comparison between them, for they would be one and the same thing. We also illustrated our views by the use of a theory of the science of medicine. We thought the illustration clear and pointed. In behalf of the logic you placed upon it we candidly confess that our intellectual capacities failed to discern either gist or point to it. A strange paragraph of modern literature indeed. We took occasion to consult a professional man relative to our statement and application, and he decided that there was point to it. After an irksome effort, you gave up in despair, stating that you "could not make a proper application of the drug system." This we aimed to do and that intelligibly. As you overthrew my two illustrations or figures all unled to above every illustration in the Bible may be overthrown. Examples. "For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder." Again, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king which made a marriage for his son," says the Savior. While there are visible features of analogy in these figures of the Savior, you, we hope, will admit that there are also visible marks of disparity. Just so in our figures or illustrations. In our efforts to arrive at the truth of figures or illustrations we guard against asking too much of them. That there is a drug or evil effect following education if not closely guarded, is evident, whether admitted by you or not. An elder some time since, in conversation, made the remark that he would like to give his children, his sons especially, a good education; but he feared that natural evil that Paul warns us of, "Knowledge puffeth up." This is not what we term the drug. The theory of medicine to which we made allusion teaches us that the drug effect ruins the constitution in after life. Just so the drug effect of education, pride and exultation will ruin the soul for the life to come. Do you not observe the analogy? You further remark, "The enterprise must have the aid and sympathy of brethren who are well established in the faith, and are willing to stand by and advocate both by precept and example all her principles."

Dear Editor, how you will get the above named happy state of things about, we are entirely unable to see. The enterprise will certainly then be surrounded by an element vastly different to what it has ever been surrounded with before. With this, dear editor, we bid adieu, sincerely wishing you the grace of God.

I. J. ROSENBERGER.

Gilboa, O.

Paid or Supported Ministry.

BY EMANUEL UMBAUGH.

And this is the law of the meat offering. The sons of Aaron shall offer it before the Lord, before the altar. And he shall take of it his handfull of the flour of the meat offering, and of the oil thereof, and all the frankincense which is upon the meat offering, and shall burn it upon the altar for a sweet savor, even the memorial of it unto the Lord. And the remainder thereof shall Aaron and his sons eat: with unleavened bread shall it be eaten in the holy place, in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation they shall eat it. It shall not be baked with leaven. I have given it unto them for their portion of my offerings made by fire. It is most holy, as is the sin offering, and as the tresspass offering. All the males among the children of Aaron shall eat of it.—Lev. 14-19.

The apostle Paul in that portion of his epistle to the Corinthians which is so much harped upon by the would-be-paid ministers of our Brotherhood, refers to the above language when he says, "Do you not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple, and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel." How should they live of the Gospel? In the same manner in which those wait at the altar are partakers of the things of the altar, and also as those who minister about holy things live of the things of the temple. How do they live of the things of the temple? In the holy place, in the court of the tabernacle of the congregation. If then it is to be eaten in the court of the tabernacle, shall we conclude that it was to be eaten for a pecuniary aid, or was it done in obedience to the law? If we conclude that it was done in obedience to the law, in what manner shall we conclude that those who preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel? We think our Savior answers this question as correctly as can be done by any modern commentator. He says, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Matt.

Now our Savior emphatically declares that man (all that portion of the human family who strive for eternal life) shall live of the word of God. Paul says that they that preach the Gospel shall live of the Gospel. Here then the ministry and laity are equal. If one has a Gospel right to demand pay the other has, and if we all, lay members, deacons and ministers demand pay for serving the Lord, whence shall we receive the many dollars? But Christ's servants are not men's servants neither are they paid by men but by Christ, who will reward them abundantly not by giving them dollars and cents, but by granting unto them eternal life.

If Aaron, on account of his priesthood, was to partake of the things of the temple in order to aid him pecuniarily, the female portion of his household were left in a sad predicament indeed, for none but the males were commanded to eat of it. If this partaking of the things of the temple prefigures the paying or supporting of ministers, what a sad condition the wives and daughters of our ministers will be left in, for only the males among the sons of Aaron were commanded to eat, and "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they that preach the Gospel shall live of the Gospel." Where is the money preachers argument in favor of his position? His occupation provides only for himself and sons, while his wife and daughters must look after their own living. But Christ's Church does not employ her own ministers, but Christ employs men as ministers to serve his people without money and without price.

A Crumb.

Dear Editor::—Some time ago, on a Saturday evening, I called at the house of our neighbor and brother Geo. Zollers, where I met two entire strange men. I soon got into conversation with them, and learned that they came from Iowa, a distance of about twenty-five miles. They said they were in search of the true Church. They both had come to this country about four years ago from the Kingdom of Denmark, where they had been brought up in the Lutheran faith, but becoming dissatisfied with the Lutherans they cast in their lot with the English Baptist Church, but there too they failed to realize what they had expected. They told their preachers that the good Book reads so and so, and why don't the Church do so too? The preachers gave answer that those times were past, but said they were not happy. About one year ago they read in "History of all Religion," something about the Brethren and their practices, and then went in search of them. First they wrote letters to New York, Philadelphia and Chicago, but failed to learn from them there. (This put me in mind of the wise men who went to Jerusalem to find the child that was born King of the Jews, but when they searched the prophecies they were directed to a more unpretentious city.) But recently they heard of the Brethren in this section, when they came in seach of them. They said they not only wanted to hear them preach, but they also wanted to see what kind of people they were.

On the day following, we took them along to our meeting, where the word was held forth as God gave ability, when they said they would now go home and search the Scripture and see whether these things be so. Several weeks later, they wrote to us that they now desired meeting and baptism, when brother George Zoller and John Emmert went over to their place, held several meetings and one of the men was baptized in the Mis-is-ippi River, but to him it was a very serious matter, as this was now his third covenant. He was barely able to overcome the tempter who cast many evil suggestions in his path, but a few weeks later he came over here with his family and went with the brethren to the Lovefeast at the Arnold's Grove, where his cup of joy was full. He was scarcely able to express his happiness. He said this was now what he had been searching for for the last twenty years, and sometimes almost despaired of ever finding the people who observed the commandments of the house of the Lord. But now he is satisfied and went on his way rejoicing. We hope God and his word may be his staff and comfort through life, and that through him more may be made willing in the day of grace to keep the commandments of the Lord, and become worthy to enter in through the gates into the city.

Love One Another.

Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.—1 John, 4: 11.

In reading the Scriptures we notice a great deal spoken about love, that without it, it is impossible to please or see God. Knowing this, we the meek and lowly followers of God should run, with patience, the race set before us, ever keeping an eye single to the glory of God, beholding what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we can be called the children of God. In order that we may become the sons of God we must be in possession of that love which the Father promised to bestow upon us. Such love worketh no ill to his neighbor, and creates within us a desire to be with the brethren. I am often made to think when meeting with the brethren, when the weather is a little bad, and see but a few gathered together for the worship of the great Head of the Church, no wonder we are commanded not to neglect the assembling of ourselves together. Brethren, this shows a lack of that true love that should characterize the children of God, and should cause us to pray the Father that he may give us that good spirit which will enliven us to an appreciation of the benefits he promised to bestow upon us at such times and places. Just so sure as we would die naturally without receiving bodily nourishment from the earth, so sure will we die spiritually unless we receive spiritual nourishment from God and when we lose a taste for this spiritual food it is a sure evidence that we are growing weakly and sick, and that we do not love one another as we should. Why was it that God commanded Abraham to go two days journey to offer his son Isaac? It was to try how much faith and love he had. If he had not done as he was commanded it would have been an evidence of a lack of faith and love. Brethren and sisters, if we neglect the assembling of ourselves together it is an evidence that we are not in possession of that love which the Father bestowed upon us. Let us therefore examine ourselves and see if we have not lost a little of our first love. The work before us is an important one and is well worthy of all our labor. Let us not become weary in well doing, for we shall reap if we faint not. SIMON LONG.

Ye are the Light.

"Ye are the light of the world."—Matt. 5: 14, 16.

There is such a wide difference between light and darkness, that these two opposites can never have communion one with the other, but wherever there is a candle lighted and put on a candlestick, there darkness must disappear, vanish away, and the rays of light shine forth. And as the difference between light and darkness is great, so is the difference also great between the children of light and the children of darkness, and between the kingdom of light and the kingdom of darkness, and if we would be the children of light we must come to the light; and this light is Christ Jesus, as he saith, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not dwell in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Jno. 8: 12.

These words show clearly that the children of light must be followers of Jesus, and walk in the light, as he is in the light. But so long as our deeds are evil we will not come to the light, lest our deeds should be reproved and this is, alas! too much the case with the children of men. Christ saith, "and this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." John 3: 19. These evil works belong to the kingdom of darkness, but the good works to the kingdom of light. Now it is a lamentable fact that in our day, light and darkness are not so clearly distinguished as they should be, for God requires and demands a perfect renunciation of the world and its works of darkness. We are to have no fellowship with the works of darkness, but rather reprove them, for as Paul saith, "What fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness, and what concord hath Christ with Belial, or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel, and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols, for ye are the temple of the living God? God hath said, "I will dwell in them and walk in them and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come ye out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you and be a father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. 2 Cor. 6: 14—18.

No Person is Without Influence.

Some persons fall discouraged on the highway of life, because they can not be this or that great or eminent person. Why not be willing to be themselves? No person who ever lived, or ever will live, is without influence. Why not make the most of that? Since you cannot grasp that which you wish, why let what you have slip through your fingers? No person in the world is exactly like you. You have your own faults, but you have also your own excellencies individual to yourself. Give them air. Because you are not a Poet, should you not be a good merchant? Because you cannot go to college, should you therefore forswear the alphabet? Because you cannot build a palace, should you not rejoice in your own humble roof, and that because it is your own? Will not the sun also shine into your window if you do not obstinately persist in shutting it out? Some persons having wealth—they want more—enter into some new business they do not understand, or some wild speculation, and become poor indeed. Many who are surrounded by all the substantial comforts of life, become discontented, because some wealthier neighbor makes more show in the world than they. They attempt to imitate all they see that is deemed fashionable; make a dash at greater contentments, dash out their comfortable store of wealth, and sometimes determined on quiet at last, close the farce with a tragedy. Discontented persons live in open rebellion against their great Benefactor, and virtually claim wisdom, more than infinite. One imaginary want brings flocks of others, and the mind becomes so overwhelmed that it loses sight of all the real comforts in possession. Let all remember that a contented mind is a continual feast; most of the upper ten thousands are strangers to its enjoyments, but confidence in God, and a sweet submission to His will, are the sweet sources of happiness. SALLIE BOSSERMAN.

—Patience keeps all the gains of grace, and wastes nothing. Passion and speculation lose as often as they gain. Hence, your passionate, fitful Christians are at extremes; sometimes on the heights of feeling and glory, sometimes in the depths of woe. But you conscientious, patient, diligent Christians are passing onward in a steady progression, that, though it has its depths of height, and sometimes at great distances between, is, nevertheless, as the path of the just, as the shining light, shining more and more unto the perfect day.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—The Church in Philadelphia had nine accessions lately and a general interest seems to have been awakened.

—Wm. B. Sell of Martinsville says: "I expect to be with the brethren of Decatur Co. Iowa, on the 18th of October, to assist in dedicating a house for worship, to the Lord."

On Sunday, Oct. 17th, the brethren of Clover Creek congregation, Blair Co., Pa., intend opening their new house, recently built at the N. Eastern part of the congregation, for the worship of God.

—From the Companion we learn that eight souls were recently added to the Saulsburg Church and that about one hundred have been added to the Church in the Co.—Somerset, Pa.—during the year.

—This week we received a pop visit from our blind brother —— Swigart and his wife, of Spring Run congregation. They were afoot visiting their friends by the way and were aiming for Bro. Arc y VanDyke's —The Board of Home Missions of Western District of Pa. met at Myersdale for the purpose of attending to the business incumbent upon it. Finding the funds scarce they concluded to send out the evangelists separately instead of two and two as was done heretofore. This District seems to mean business and we wish them success.

—Next week we expect to present to our readers a long and interesting letter from sister Julia A. Wood. She has now cast her lot with us and we hope she may not only enjoy great peace of mind but realize that it is no vain thing to labor for the Lord and His cause. She evidently has a literary taste and talent, and we gladly welcome her into our circle of contributors. The pen is becoming an acknowledged power in promulgating the "Good Tidings" and affords a medium through which many will be enabled to preach that could not otherwise.

—Our brethren and sisters will please notice that our Lovefeast at James Creek will be held on the 24th inst., commencing 2 o'clock P. M. We have made arrangements with the Broad Top road to stop at the Church on Saturday morning, both trains up and down, also on Saturday evening and on Monday morning, both trains. Those coming from the East on Saturday morning will take the Pacific Express which arrives at Huntingdon 7.37 A M. Broad Top leaves 8.45. Those intending to call at the PILGRIM Office will come on Friday eve, take the "buss" at the depot, pay 10 cents and call for the PILGRIM Office.

—Eld. J. S. Flory of Buffalo, Col. says: "Your 'Item' department is an interesting feature, and we hope it will be continued. 'Tis the first part we read. Urge it upon your readers to drop items by postal cards or when writing on business. We are all in usual health. We almost entirely escaped the grasshopper plague which was so destructive in a great part of the west this past season. Colorado has raised plenty for home use and to spare. One man, near Denver city, has a crop of potatoes estimated at 25,000 to 30,000 bushels, and it was a poor season generally for potatoes. Buffalo are gathering into this region in great numbers; many persons are preparing for an active hunting campaign—more so than ever.

—H. M. Sherfy of Jonesboro Tenn. says: At this time we have a favorable season. Our Lovefeast at Limestone was held at the time appointed. The attendance was not as large as usual, but the order was good with a few exceptions. The Lovefeast at the Mountain Valley Church, Green Co. Tenn. was on the 3rd and 4th of Oct. There was a large congregation present. The funeral of sister Susan Brubaker was preached on the 4th by Eld. Samuel Molesbee. She was the wife of Eld. Henry Brubaker. She was 71 years old and had been a member of the church of the Brethren for 49 years. She raised a large family of children, all members of the church but one. Three of her sons are ministers, and one son and two son-in-laws deacons. She was truly a mother in Israel.

Let Us Have One Purse.

"Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse."—Prov. 1 : 14.

That the ideal of true Christianity is very different from the practical, is much to be regretted as it greatly retards the promotion of brotherly love and Christian sympathy. Our ideal of Christ's Church here on earth, of necessity, must be very endearing. It is known, if known at all, as Christ's Kingdom, having only for its subjects his people. His people are those who have come out from the world, have been regenerated, born again—new creatures in Christ Jesus. All the old elements of sin have passed away, behold all things have become new. They are those who have withdrawn their citizenship from the world, and have become heirs to God and fellow citizens with Christ Jesus. Not only have we received a citizenship in this new Kingdom, but we have received a much nearer and more endearing relationship, that of brethren and sisters. This relationship brings about a oneness that is experienced by only such as have given their all for Christ Jesus, and generates within us the principle of having all things as a common stock or of having but one purse.

By this, we do not understand a community of goods, but a disposition to dedicate our all for the use of the Lord and the promotion of his cause, either in having the word preached, distributing to the wants of the saints, or feeding and clothing God's poor. Perhaps we cannot express this union more understandingly than by using the divine precept, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." When we enter the family of God we become his children, and all we find in his family are our brothers and sisters by a far closer tie than that of flesh and blood, as natural ties and relationships, in death will be severed, but those that are spiritual, never. Seeing then our near relationship, how can we be unmindful of our brother's interests? The tie of kinship so unites our sympathies that one brother cannot suffer without every member bearing a part, not on account of the divine precept, "bear ye one another's burdens," so much as our union as one body. The hand, the foot, or even the smallest member of the body cannot suffer alone. Every member of that body bears a part of that pain. The only possible way of freedom is a dismemberment and that is death. Just so it is with the spiritual body, the Church. It is utterly impossible for any one member of the body of Christ to suffer without the whole body suffering with it as a whole. If there are any professing to be members of the body of Christ that are not touched with a brother's woe, it is because of dismemberment from Christ as the head, and from the body as a member of that body. The lot that has been cast in with the people of God, through an unwillingness of having "one purse," has been cast out again.

We heard a brother remark, not long since that we, as true Christians, stand in a much nearer relation to Christ than we think we do, the fact is, we do not appreciate the happy relation that exists between us and our Divine Head. It is because of this, we desire too much to keep our own purse, and use it for our own gratification. The man overtaken and abused by the thief lies in the middle of the road while we, priest and Levite-like, pass on either side. Each one carries his own purse, but the good Samaritan has cast his lot with the people of God and knows but one purse, and that belongs to the Lord. How forgetful we are of the true ideal of Christianity, and how seldom we feel willing to have but one purse among us. When the cause of Christ needs a little of that which the Lord has entrusted to us as stewards, how carefully we consult our purse forgetting that all we have belongeth to the Lord, and that his demands should always be met first. We should remember that all we have is by his good pleasure, and if we give liberally, when required of us, his hands are not shortened and will still give us the more abundantly. Let us not forget our relations and that we have cast our lot among the people of God. If we would all more fully manifest this spirit of oneness with how much more propriety could we take the sinner by the hand and urge him to cast his lot among us. The one purse is pregnant with thought, it speaks volumes. All the graces that characterize the children of God can be tied up in it, it is a large purse and it should be a full one. Brethren and sisters, how much have you deposited in this one purse? Let the question come home to you in all its fullness. This one purse is the bank of Christ's Kingdom, and in it we must all have deposits or our names will be taken off the record. We cannot meet the demands that will be made upon us, as members of the Kingdom, without it. The priest, no doubt, was an honorable man and administered in holy things, but he had no deposit in the "one purse," in other words he carried his own purse, and because it was his own, he kept it and passed by. The Levite also carried his own purse and passed by on the other side, but the good Samaritan had made his deposits in the "one purse" and when his Father showed him his brother he immediately administered to his wants, took him to the Inn and paid the bill, with the promise of more if needed. He was a faithful servant, but nothing more, as he only gave that which the Lord had entrusted to his care. He did not, like the man of one talent, tie it up in a napkin, but put it into the Lord's bank for usury. Brethren, a word to the wise. We still have thieves (spiritual) who are ever on the alert to rob the children of men, not of their gold and silver, but of their souls. The devil is a great thief and a liar too and is robbing thousands every day. How often we find them almost dead, so nearly gone that none but a good Samaritan can save them. Among these are found our friends, our neighbors, and even our children. Let us awaken to our duty towards them, not be ashamed of them because they are poor, naked and lying in the middle of the street, but approach them at once with the oil and wine, and after thus manifesting our love and esteem for them, we can with propriety say, "Cast in thy lot among us; let all us have one purse."

In looking over the Brotherhood and seeing what the Lord has done for us, how abundantly he has blessed us in houses and lands, in horses and oxen, it occurs to us that we should have a large purse, and so full that every demand made upon us, for charity, for building churches, and for the furtherance of the cause of Christ, should be met at once. Our cause is suffering in many places for want of church houses, and why is it? It is because the "one purse" is empty, not because it has been over drained, but because it has never been filled, because too many of us carry our own purse. Brethren, as sure as we claim to be the children of God, so sure will he hold us fearfully responsible for that which he has entrusted to our care. God has not given us abundance and wealth to make profligate sons and daughters, to adorn them in the foolish and sinful frippery of a fashionable world, and to buy for them fine buggies and fast horses. Such things are paving their way to hell, and we may be made to seek repentance for it when it may be forever too late—in the regions of despair when our ears may be greeted with, father, it's all your fault, it was your gold and silver that led me to this place of torment. We just now think of a brother, and minister too, who has paid large sums of money to save a profligate son from filling a felon's cell. He was profligate because his father foolishly gave him the Lord's money instead of depositing it in the one purse. How many tears and heart aches might that brother saved himself, if he had shown that son while he was yet a boy, that he cared more for the Kingdom of Christ than he did for the world, by putting the Lord's money where it rightfully belonged. We accidentally dropped upon this subject and as we pursue it, it grows in importance so rapidly that there seems to be no end to it, but we trust we have sufficiently opened it to set our readers to thinking, and if, as a result, the "one purse" gets enlarged and filled, we will feel abundantly rewarded. And to those who are still out of Christ we would yet say, "Cast your lot among us, let us all have one purse."

Enduring Tribulation.

"We must through much tribulation enter the Kingdom of God." Acts 14 · 22.

On that memorable occasion when Christ was about to take his final leave from the disciples, he told them that in the world they shall have tribulation. At that time they did not, perhaps, fully understand how this should be, but as they went forth on their mission, preaching his word from place to place, they learned from actual experience the veracity of Christ's declaration. At the city of Lystra we have a striking example of their sad experience. Paul done a good work there when he healed that crippled man, but it brought about the most severe affliction. The people of this city, although idolatrous, were favorably impressed with Paul, considering him a God, and even the priest of Jupiter whose office it was to conduct the worship of Jupiter by offering sacrifice, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates of the city, "and would have done sacrifice with the people." But while Paul and Barnabas were trying to convince them that they were only men, and of the impropriety of such a course, there came certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, and their influence was such as to change the mind of this heathen people, and then came the day of tribulation. They stoned Paul and drew him from the city, supposing that he was dead. This was tribulation such as but few of God's harbingers at the present day realize. Imagine the feelings of Paul as the stones were being hurled at his person, and as he was dragged like a dead beast from the city. Then too, there were his companions in trial, the disciples, "who stood round about him." What must have been their feelings with such an example of resentment to the great work which they designed accomplishing before them. Did they become despondent and cease to work? No. After awhile Paul, although supposed to be dead, rose up and joined by his companion, Barnabas, departed to Derbe, and after preaching the Gospel in that city, they go to the very cities where these certain Jews came from, and confirm the souls of the disciples, and exhort them to continue in the faith. Here Paul and Barnabas had a little band of believers, and by the power of imagination we can draw them very close to us. There is a little company of them somewhere, perhaps in a secluded spot away from the element that surrounded them. Paul is in their midst. He has just passed through a fiery ordeal. His body is yet bruised and sore. The disciples gather around him anxiously awaiting a narration of his past experience. This was, no doubt, a good little meeting. There was, perhaps, a reference made to the severe trial through which he had just passed, but this, my disciples, should only confirm us in the faith. And then too, remember "we must through much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.

There are several things implied in this language after having considered the circumstance that called it forth, that would perhaps be well for us to consider. We as the people of God at the present day are, perhaps, too fearful of tribulation, and if we were more faithful to duty and more active in his service, we would experience greater trials in the Christian life. Paul says we must through much tribulation enter the Kingdom. He does not mean that it is really in itself a fixed necessity, but in view of the nature of religion, and the wickedness of the world, it must certainly happen. In view of this it is apparent to us that the true disciples of Christ will in all ages of the world experience much tribulation. We suppose that most all professors of religion claim to have trials, and no doubt have, but they are not of that kind and nature that Paul had in view. They are more of an internal nature and not such as subject us to public odium, and imperil our lives. We believe the tribulation that Paul had in view is brought about by external circumstances, that is, in our efforts to promote Christianity we become offensive to the world, so much so as to cause them to persecute us. Christ tells his disciples about the relation his people will at times sustain to the world. He says men will deliver them to councils and scourge them, and finally ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake. Throughout the Scriptures the inference is that the true followers will not be appreciated by the world, that they will be a separate people, and that their course of action will be adverse to the world. To illustrate: it is the Christian's duty to return good for evil, to do good to our enemies, and not contest with our fellow men. This is directly opposed to the world's course of action, and because we are separate from them in this respect, we, especially in times of war, become the subjects of their displeasure. In this respect, as well as in all others, we should, Christian friends, be different from the world, and if this apparent difference makes us the subjects of mockery, derision and persecution, we should only rejoice. I sometimes feel that we as the professed followers of Christ are moving along too smoothly, that it is an evidence that we are commingling too much with the world, and this reminds me of a remark made in reference to the church in Philadelphia, by a writer in a recent number of the PILGRIM. He says the church there does not have fresh meat and soup on their Lovefeast occasions, and the object he says is, doubtless, to avoid all occasion for levity and loose talk about "soup." If this is the object we would consider it a very poor one indeed. If this were a valid excuse we might do away with the supper entirely, and other of the ordinances, as we have heard fully as much loose talk about baptism and feet-washing as we have about the Supper. How fearful we are about a little talk! Oh! I would to God, brethren that we had more zeal. If we were more devoted to Christ, a thing of this kind would be no consideration. As to of what that supper consisted, it is not our purpose at present to consider. The object of the change is what struck us as being extremely preposterous. If Christians are not able to endure a little light talk from a few light inconsiderate persons, they must be very weak indeed! It does not look as though there was a willingness to endure much tribulation, and would not likely endure much stone-pelting. The writer also says, "If I were to indulge in predictions, I would perhaps say the time will come when the other churches will conform more nearly to the present practices of the church of Philadelphia." We are not well versed in the practices of the church of Philadelphia, but, from our limited knowledge of it we should feel very sorry to indulge in any such predictions. The writer notices about as much difference in the apparel of our brethren and sisters there, and that of others, as in the rural churches. We are sorry that all our brethren have not been able to see them in this way, and further the practice of holding church festivals &c does not seem to us to be "on a purely Scriptural basis." We are fearful that there is a rapid compromising with the world, and that the separate people are known no more in that city. Oh! God forbid that the rural churches will ever conform to such practices. We earnestly hope better things. We entertain the hope that there are those who will cleave to the ancient landmarks as set by Christ and his apostles, even though it does bring them into tribulation. Christian friends, if we desire to wear the crown, and participate in the joys of Heaven, we must be willing to bear the cross; and not be ashamed of Christ and his word, even though our lot be cast among a proud and haughty people. The finger of scorn may be pointed at us, and we may be rejected from the society of a pleasure loving world, but this is but slight tribulation in comparison to what the people of God have had to endure, and what they will most likely yet have to endure.

In addition to tribulation being a necessity from the nature of religion, we remark further that it keeps us in the path of duty. David realized this fact. He says, "Before I was afflicted I went astray: but now have I kept thy word" "It is good for me that I have been afflicted; that I might learn thy statutes.—Psalm 119:67, 71. When we are afflicted we become weaned from the world, its allurements are not so great, and the great truth that we have no continuing city here is ever before the mind. Then too, in the midst of trial, our minds are directed to the land of rest, "where the wicked cease from troubling," and where there is unending peace.

There is another thought connected with the enduring of tribulation that is pleasing. The best Christians that ever lived were persecuted and afflicted, and when we endure tribulation we tread a path that has been rendered sacred by the shedding of the blood of our early Christian fathers. Then too, our Savior trod the path, and should we not rejoice that we can follow him in the way. "It is enough," saith Jesus, "for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord." We should be thankful for the privilege that we as disciples can be as our Master, but how can this be if we seek the applause of the world instead of the approbation of God? Remember, Christian friends, "We must through MUCH tribulation enter the Kingdom of God."

Correspondence.

Reporter is wanted from every Church in the brotherhood to send us Church news Obituaries, Announcements, or anything that will be of general interest. To insure insertion, the writers name must accompany each communication. Our Invitation is not personal but general—please respond to our call.

H. B. Brumbaugh:—

As you have not had any news from our church this summer, I will give some to the readers of the PILGRIM if you see proper to insert it. We are still trying in our weakness to hold forth the word of life in simplicity every Sabbath, in two different places, except one out of four, when there is only one meeting. We are also trying to avoid excellency of speech, or high sounding words mingled with worldly wisdom in the declaration of God's truths, not forgetting brother Paul's declaration that "it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that are lost." Brethren, the idea that some hold forth that we must meet the enemy with the same weapons, and upon the same platform that he meets us in order to conquer will not hold good according to the word and spirit of God. For instance, in the case of David and Goliah we see the contrary. When the giant Goliah so boldly defied the armies of the living God, all Israel were afraid. But when the stripling boy, the youngest son of the powerful family of Jesse, who was not trained to carnal warfare, heard the bold defiance of the mighty giant, his spirit was aroused within him and said, "Who is this uncircumcised Philistine that he should defy the armies of the living God?" "Let no man's heart fail because of him; thy servant will go and fight with him." King Saul armed David with the popular armor of warfare, but he could not go, for God had designed another method contrary to popular usage, hence David took his own simple way: "he took his staff, choose five smooth stones and with his sling in his hand he went forth to meet the giant. His opponent cursed him by his gods. What a mighty display! How defiant! Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with stones? Come to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field. Hear David, "Thou comest to me with a sword and with a spear and with a shield; but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel whom thou hast defied." The result is known in the conflict, hence we will not pursue the subject any further. Let us draw from this circumstance a proper conclusion, and learn a wholesome lesson therefrom. Brethren we have our opponent to meet, mighty Goliah's to overcome with their high learning, boasting speech, defiant language and in baseful denunciation hold forth in flowing words against the meek and unassuming preachers of the Gospel who are holding forth the truth of God in its pure simplicity, stigmatizing them as deluded fanatics, ignorant and unlearned, not knowing the Scripture nor understanding what they read. Now let us meet such like David did Goliah, in the name of the Lord and with the spirit of God. Let us ever rely upon the strength of the Lord, fervently praying to him for a large portion of his holy spirit in order to enable us to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified more effectually. This we have endeavored to do, though in much weakness and in fear, and sometimes in trembling, not with enticing words of man's wisdom but in demonstration of the spirit and of power. Although the result of our labors are not crowned with success as we pray and desire to see, yet we are happy to inform the readers of this paper that some are counting the cost and enlist under the banner of King Emmanoel, and that the work of the Lord is progressing in this arm of the church. Notwithstanding the troubles and fiery ordeal this church is passing through; God does still manifest his goodness, love and grace in smiling with approved countenance on his children and blessed them with an addition of seventeen new converts and one restored since the first of June. To God alone belongs the honor and praise. The Sabbath-school seems likewise to be in a prosperous condition, though closed for this season. Our Lovefeast at Claar meeting-house passed off pleasantly with good order. We, no doubt, all felt refreshed, and experienced a pleasant waiting on the Lord. The Communion here in the Snowberger meeting-house is drawing nigh. Six days yet and then we expect, by permission of God and the bestowment of his blessing, a pleasant waiting on Him who is the sole object of our worship. For whom we pray and earnestly desire to meet with us in his holy temple, in order to grant us the outpouring of his holy spirit, that much good may be done in the name of his holy child Jesus. Brethren pray for us, sisters pray for us, that God's grace might abound, and that love, union, and harmony might pervade our hearts to draw closer and closer together as one united family to withstand the cunning allurements and flattering enticing baits of the enemy against the camp of Israel.

Interlinear Translation of the Bible.

The above is the title of a work lately published, and is decidedly the best and most scholarly translation of any ever given of the kind. To enable men to see the Divine Truth as it is, for themselves, has been the great aim of the work. Its faculties for studying the Scriptures more critically are invaluable. One who has any inclination to study this work cannot help but become thoroughly acquainted with the Bible in its original tongue. We therefore recommend this work to all lovers and students of the Holy Scriptures, believing the benefits to be derived therefrom will be invaluable, especially to ministers of the Gospel. The following is the flow of the work:

First. Above each word of the Hebrew, and Greek texts is placed an English equivalent

Second. Words not found in the original Greek or Hebrew, but necessary to complete the sense, are enclosed in brackets, while the translation of each word of the original, as would be omitted in translating into good English is given in parenthesis.

Third. There are appended to each number a body of notes, explanatory of the many difficulties that arise from some words in the original. These notes are paged separately, so that they may be found by themselves.

Fourth. In order to enable beginners to pronounce the foreign idioms correctly, there is given in the first part of the Greek and Hebrew. the pronunciation and accent; Webster's key of pronunciation being adopted as far as applicable. In the subsequent parts the pronunciation is omitted, in order to prevent too great a bulk.

Fifth. The text and translation of the Old Testament will be issued in nineteen or twenty parts, that of the New Testament in seven or eight. Each part will contain about 160 octavo pages, and 15 or 20 pages of the notes.

From what has been said above it will be seen that this work differs entirely from any other of the kind. The Hebrew and Greek parts are published alternately, beginning with the Hebrew.

Price for each of the Single Parts of the Old Testament, Two Dollars; for the Single Parts of the New Testament, One dollar and fifty cents.

Persons wishing to have either the Old or New Testament can have it by sending their names and addresses to the undersigned. Those wishing to examine the work can have any of the parts on Genesis and on Matthew by sending to me two dollars for the Hebrew part on Genesis and one dollar and fifty cents for the Greek part on Matthew. A Flying Visit.

Immediately after our own Communion meeting, in the Buffalo Valley Church, brother D. F. Wagoner and wife proposed a visit to the Lewistown congregation on the occasion of their Lovefeast season in the Dry Valley meeting-house, which is situated, say, 5 miles east of Lewistown, Mifflin Co., Pa., and fully 45 miles from our own places of abode, on the east side of the West Branch of the Susquehannah, in Northumberland County.

After a little hesitation and seesawing on the part of the wife, and some bantering on the part of self, my companion announced her willingness to 'go,' so we fixed upon Sunday morning to start. Having provided ourselves with a suitable and comfortable two-seated covered wagon, our quartette party pulled out, all in excellent kelter by way of Lewisburg, Lochiel, Mifflinburg, to the Brethren's Pike meeting house, two miles west of the latter place, where we met with the brethren, sisters, and friends in worship at 10 o'clock. Here we found that all but two of our ministering brethren had gone to Juniata and Mifflin counties to assist the brethren there, and the remaining two embassadors had four meetings on hand for the day, and that brother Geo. W. Myers was the only speaker here to serve this and the afternoon meeting at the Cedar Run school house. Bro. Myers admonished to us all on some important every-day duties, pertaining to our growth in grace and knowledge in the christian warfare, assisted by a little "blowing and striking" from deacons present. When the service was over, a not very flat-footed hint, procured us an invitation from sister Sally, wife of deacon Jacob S. Shively, to dine and otherwise materially amplify our temporal means of locomotion. So we at once repaired to the hospital home of brother and sister Shively, about two miles south of the place of meeting. Until here, we had contemplated to attend the afternoon service, which was quite near this place; and put about half the distance to Lewistown behind us, but found that too much of our time would be spent too near home and too much distance to overcome next day. So then we set out at two o'clock 3 miles east to Centerville, around the nose of Jack's mountain, thence 10 miles west to Troxelsville. Say 6 miles to Bennersille and 13 miles to Lillysville and 2 miles beyond, with 13 miles in the morning to place of meeting, making in all 49 miles, out of which take say 6 miles "round about" distance.

We arrived within two miles of the Dry Valley meeting-house just as brother Brindle had come home from preaching at the meeting-house, where, as he informed us, brother C. Long and I. Myers had been preaching on Sunday evening. Here we were very kindly taken in and entertained by our brother and his loving family. Soon after we were all comfortably housed, a drizzling rain set in. Not one of our party had ever visited the brethren in this church, all but one were entire strangers as to the country, so we stopped to make inquiry after the homes of brethren, and were providentially led to inquire at the very first, of all the brethren's houses in this direction from the meeting-house. Here we notice a gap, between these two churches, of twenty-five to thirty miles, in which there lives not a single living member of the church; how strange! After a comfortable nights rest, morning ablutions at a living sparkling hill-side fountain, morning devotion, a hearty breakfast, and a "leetle" Frishmuth, we parted with our kind host for the time being, and drove two miles west to the meeting-house'

From the time we "turned in," the previous night, we were no longer strangers in a strange place, no indeed, everything was clear now, everything was plain, just as plain as a "turnpike" or a "barn door" we were among the Brethren! That accounts for the milk in the cocoanut, we were at home, and we felt it instantaneously. We said everything was clear, we mean all but the four cardinal points; these had shifted one quarter round, to some one of us, between Lillyville and meeting-house, and from here to the post office they had shifted out of all reason, there the needle pointed to the south pole. The weather was too cloudy to take accurate bearings. It was all owing to the sun, of course.

The meeting-house is high enough to be dry, has plenty of light and hight in the basement, and is nicely painted inside and out. The seats are a little narrow and stiff, otherwise it is well finished cozy and comfortable.

One o'clock, and the time appointed for meeting finally come together, and the service begins There were ministering brethren present from Iowa, Christian Long and Isaac Barger; and from the neighboring churches of Juniata, Mifflin, Union, Blair and Huntingdon counties. The word held forth was well suited to the occasion, and we trust, that it will not return void, but will accomplish that for which it was sent. The evening being rainy, the turnout of outside visitors was slim, and the celebration of the ordinances was begun rather earlier than usual, so that the meeting broke up at nine o'clock. In consequence of many brethren living conveniently near the meeting-house, all the visitors from a distance were provided with lodging at the members houses, so that none were necessitated to remain over night in the meeting-house. Our party was invited to lodge with brother Samuel Reichard, say a fourth mile from the sanctuary, at Maitland Station. Bro. Sammy keeps the post office, where we find that about an equal number of Companions and PILGRIMS are delivered to subscribers. In the morning, we brethren, repaired to the meeting-house for breakfast, and the sisters remained at the place of lodging. If a mouse could report the proceedings then and there, perhaps it would run a little thuswise: Yets ist freiheit zum speis dank: swester Glaup, bet du? I, ich glaub net, bet du? I, ich glaub auch net. One however was at hand to come to the rescue, happy relief! Passing strange! that our dear sisters are so timid of utterance, yet so much more forward in stepping forward, out of the world, through the ordinance of baptism and all the other self-denying ordinances of the Church, than the brethren usually are. Meeting as usual in the forenoon from nine till eleven o'clock.

The Brethren maintain a prosperous Sabbath school in this church. This institution appears to be the nursery and supply head of the numerical strength of this church, the majority of the pupils are not brethren's children, I understand. The labor bestowed upon these "little ones" is certainly not bestowed in vain, such a notion, one which some of the brethren maintain, is simply absurd, if not stupid.

We had the pleasure of greeting many brethren whose acquaintance we had casually made before, and many more, whose acquaintance we made at this meeting. At last the time of our departure was at hand.

ON THE HOME STRETCH.

Brother Samuel Yeater and family extended us such a hearty welcome to their hospitable home that refusal would have seemed rude, so all hands agreed to go there over night, to start from there the next day. The afternoon proving stormy with dashing showers of rain, we were glad to be so soon, comfortably housed for the night.

Brother Yeater's family from the oldest to the youngest, being so thoroughly and withal so unpretentiously companionable, that the interest and zest of conversation never flagged from the time of our arrival until late bed time. This brother gave us a history of his "going out" from another orginization, and his advent into the Brotherhood, which was quite entertaining. He assures us that he feels very much at home where he is now. Every member of this family, as well as that of the other families, in which we were entertained, are in full communion with the Brotherhood. Many thanks to all those kind brethren, sisters and friends, for all their kindness shown to us. The Father of mercies, the God of all grace be and abide with them all, to the end of their journey below the skies. At 7 o'clock precisely, our team was in readiness at the front door, in good gear and trim, and we bade farewell to our host and family, and away we sped homeward bound. The morning was beautiful and bright, with excellent roads beneath our wheels, and a fresh and bracing atmosphere all about us. Under these circumstances we were able, quite easily, to drive the first stretch of 32 miles in time for a late dinner and feed at the house of our dear brother Samuel Stees, very near Mifflinburg. Here we were most sumptously entertained, our kind sister Nancy just more than helped us to the good things of the season with which she had her table stored. Such living every day would soon spoil us, sister. Brother Samuel showed us his apples, grapes, and bearing orange and lemon trees, as well as his abundant stock of bees in multifarious hives. The honey we tasted. Here we lingered until 4 o'clock and at six we were safely at home again, and found everything straight and correct, for which we return unto the Lord our thanks, for we have tasted of his goodness.

In Memoriam.

Written on the death of our father, Abraham Stouffer.

BROTHER BRUMBAUGH: — Will you please insert in the columns of your paper, thoughts that have forced themselves into the mind, under the following circumstances:

On Friday evening the 25th, a messenger came to my house with the sad intelligence of the sudden death of my father, who had been, up to the hour in which he closed life's career, in his usual health. In the afternoon of Friday, he went into the field and while there engaged in cutting off corn, but a short time after he went to the field, he felt death grasp him for his victim. He asked his son Joseph if he was not very pale. Continuing to get worse, he went to the house, and told mother he was feeling sick. He went into the room, and laid down on the sofa, and in less than thirty minutes he breathed his last, and there closed his eyes to earth

To open them, we trust in Heaven.

Thus, in the 66th year of his age, died the father of eleven children, two of which have, for several years, been the representatives of the family in Heaven. They both went home before sin polluted their spotless souls. The widowed mother, in her 63rd year, is left behind with nine children, all grown up to man and womanhood. Seven of the nine are married and have families. Scattered far and near over the country, the death of the father gathered them all together only to mingle their tears of sorrow, while gazing upon the lifeless form enclosed within the coffin.

The deceased was a consistent member of the Church of the Brethren, and we can truly say, through his whole course of mental suffering, which was of an extraordinary character, his whole aim was to live with a conscience void of offence, both toward his God and to his fellow men. One great enjoyment to him was the circumstance that all his children are gathered into the church, and his earnest prayer was that they might be able to live consistent lives, so as not to bring reproach upon the holy cause of religion. He enjoyed the company of his children accordingly. Oh, how glad he was to see them come home that he might enjoy their company for a short season! He would walk in the yard and earnestly look; he would stand in the door and at the window, and gaze and wonder why it was that some of the children did no come. And now we cast the mind's eye beyond the vale, and we imagine we behold him earnestly looking from the windows of Heaven to behold some one of the family coming home to meet him, not as they once did, but as a sanctified spirit, enjoying the blessings of Heaven.

On Sunday morning at 9 o'clock, we started with the corpse for burial, and while moving slowly in solemn procession, and beholding the hearse containing the father, while the widowed mother, and her nine children, followed closely behind, it was truly a season for the mind to be exercised in the most profound thoughts. He was buried in Fahrney's church-yard. Funeral services conducted by Elders Andrew Cost and Daniel Wolf, from words selected out of the Book of Job, where our lives are compared to a shadow. They labored earnestly with the spirit's power, to convince the living of the uncertainty of life, and the necessity of at once laying hold of the means of grace, that they may at all times be prepared to meet their God. MARTINSVILLE, Mo., Oct. 6 '74.

Dear Brethren:—

As church news seem to be interesting, I will try to write a little in relation to our new organization in this part of God's moral vineyard. We moved here last spring and in my weakness tried to preach the Gospel which is apparently received with gladness. There has been two received by baptism. On the 23rd and 24th of September we had a Lovefeast and Communion meeting, which I learn since gave good satisfaction. There was quite a large congregation there at right and much interest manifested. We had excellent order. Many remarks were made in relation to our quiet and interesting meeting. On the morning of the 24th we were formed into an organization by Eld. S. A. Garber, of Iowa. This organization of brethren will be known as the Long Branch congregation. We number 17 in all, and scattered over considerable territory. I visited these parts over two years before I moved here, and found some 6 members who desired very much that I should move here among them. I have done so now and am trying to labor for the good and welfare of Zion, and as I have a large territory I do hope some other brethren will move among us. I learn that I have about fifty miles to my nearest ministerial aid. Brethren why is it that these large openings are so much neglected, where much good might be done in the name of Jesus. It is true that when we go into these new places we have many hardships to undergo, often to travel through cold and heat, and that on foot—especially when we are poor—and when we want to obey the Lord in celebrating the ordinance, we must gather forks, poles, and boards to erect a shed for the purpose, as our houses are mostly small. All this is accompanied with considerable labor, especially where there are only a few to labor brethren to do the labor. Yet when the kind Lord blesses us with good weather, we enjoy the meetings very well. I do wish that some of our ministering brethren would visit this part and locate here and help in this good work, and perhaps ere long we can build a bethel to worship in which is still more convenient. I see in correspondence by Eld. Correll of Holt Co., Mo., that they have not sufficient to undergo the building of a house of worship. I see that the calls for aid to build houses of worship are not heeded like those for schools. Which will tend to do the most good? Brethren I have written more than I thought I would when I first commenced. May the love of God the Father, and the grace of our Lord and Savior, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with us all and enable us us to so live that when we have once answered the design of our being here on earth, we may all be gathered to praise Him eternally in the heavens. Notes of Travel.

On Friday afternoon, September 25th, wife and I took a seat in Bro. Joseph S. Burkhart's spring wagon, and bidding the family good-bye, started for Dunning's Creek church, Bedford Co., Pa. Staid all night with brother Burkhart and family, next morning resumed our journey in company with brother Burkhart and some of the Holsinger family, landed safely at brother Joseph Holsinger's about noon, found all well. After a good rest, in company with brother Holsinger and family, went to place of meeting. Here we met brother Leonard Furry of Yellow Creek. Sunday at 10 a. m. met again for public preaching. Here we met with brother G. W. Brumbaugh of Clover Creek. Sunday evening, meeting at same place and also at Pleasant Hill. Monday evening meeting at the big meeting-house, and at New Paris. Tuesday, 4 p. m. was the time appointed for the Communion meeting to commence. The ministers present were Elders Jacob Blough of Berlin and Hiram Musselman of Shade, Somerset Co., and Elders Jacob Steel of Hopewell, Leonard Furry of Yellow Creek, G. W. Brumbaugh of Clover Creek, and John M. Harshbarger of Conemaugh. We had a very good meeting. Next day at 10 a. m. and 7 p. m. at New Paris. Thursday evening meeting at Pleasantville. Here we took our leave of this arm of the church. Friday morning brother Christian Holsinger conveyed us to Shade district, Somerset Co. Meeting at Scalplevel at 7 p. m., full house of attentive hearers. Next morning started for home, went by way of Johnstown, and arrived home just about noon. Found our family all well, thank the Lord, and for your kindness, brethren sisters, and friends, you have our warmest thanks.

BUFFALO, WELD Co., COL. }
Oct. 4, 1874. }

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

I will, by your permission, give a few lines to my friends in the East in this way, that they may know our state of mind since we came to this country. I do this because there has been false reports concerning us, by which it is said that we are, or have been disappointed and dissatisfied here, and have sent back to Iowa for money to go back. I can assure all that there is not a word of truth in these reports. From the time we got here until now we are well pleased with the country, and have had a comfortable living. Being a soldier in a worldly warfare before I became a soldier of the cross, I sent to brother Flory here before I came, to select a "soldier's homestead" for me. He done so, and with the quarter section he selected I have been as well satisfied as any one could be. I would not exchange it for any 80 acre lot I know of in Iowa. It lies near the R. R. line and is all over as level as a floor, and rich and excellent water on it. As to the country I am as well pleased as I expected to be. I have this season raised a better crop of potatoes than I ever raised anywhere before. We have had good health, with few exceptions. In the East one great drawback with me was much sickness. I came here as a poor man but the prospects for getting a home of my own, and a part in the world with my family is better than they ever was anywhere I have ever lived before. Have had the opportunity of hearing preaching regularly during the summer by brother Flory, so that I don't see any reasons under the blessings of God, to be discouraged. It is more important how we live than where, and I thank God we have the love and blessings of Him surrounding us all.

The prospects of this county selling up soon is getting better every day. Good claims can be had here yet but they are being taken up tolerably fast. Our love to all. Truly yours in the bonds of christian fellowship. C. M. ARMBRUST.

Dear Pilgrim:—Through the love and long-suffering of an all-wise and benevolent Creator, our lives are still spared, and why it is I can't say for I am sure it is not through anything we merited. For some time we had been arranging for a Lovefeast, which passed off very pleasantly on the 3rd and 4th of Oct. Truly we had a feast of love, yet I was made to feel the sorrow and sadness very sensibly that only one can that has lost his best earthly friend.

Preaching commenced on Saturday at 2 p. m. Ministers present, D. B. Sell, D. B. Gibson and Hobbs from Smith Fork, also P. B. Shoemaker, and I. Shoemaker, deacons from same place; C. C. Root from Logcreek, and D. Hendricks and D. Hardman, deacons from same place; Bro. Metz and Lenrow from Carl Co.

Evening exercises were pleasant, good attention to the word spoken. Lord's day morning choice held for one speaker and one deacon. The lot fell on brother S. A. Honberger for speaker, and Isaac Sell deacon. Good attention to the word preached in forenoon, after which dinner was at once prepared and the members from a distance started for their home. Here we meet to part, and brethren and sisters if we meet no more as we have on this occasion, let us think back of the pleasant meeting we had, and also think forward to the time when we shall meet to part no more.

DESTRUCTION BY FIRE.

Yesterday morning at 5 o'clock we were aroused by the cry of fire, and to our consternation, saw the barn of friend Charles Buck almost wholly enwrapt in flames. By the proper effort of Eli Replogle, who drives the Roaring Spring hack, and on that account was up early, and A. Rice the horses were saved which were in the stable at the time. Some gears and saddles were saved. A wagon shed attached to the barn in which the wagons and farming tools were, was also consumed, but the wagon and things that were in it all saved. Hay, straw, 225 bushels thrashed wheat, over 100 bushels oats, and many other things was consumed, though some of the wheat was gotten out of the burning mass much damaged. Fortunately very little wind, and that drawing away from the town, or the whole town of New Enterprise might have been enveloped in flames. A corn crib and several buggy sheds, standing not twenty feet from the barn, by the strong help and abundance of water, were saved. No clue is found out how the fire originated, as it appears it started somewhere in the barn floor. Mr. Buck is a man of very harmless character, would not suppose him to have an enemy in the world, so that I cannot think it to be the work of incendiary, unless of the most malicious kind. There is an insurance on the barn for $700 or $800 dollars. L. FURRY.

I. J. ROSENBERGER.

SNOWBERGER—DOOLY.—By the undersigned at the house of the brides' father, near Waterside, Pa., Oct. 8th '74, Mr Jacob B. Snowberger to sister Mary Dooly.

SHUSS—SNIVELY.—By the undersigned at his house, near New Enterprise, Pa., Daniel H. Shuss, of Snake Spring to Miss Maria Snively, of Clearville, both of Bedford Co., Pa. L. FURRY.

DIED.

YOUTZY.—In the Spring Run Congregation, Mifflin Co., Pa., sister Elizabeth Utzy, aged 30 years, 5 months and 11 ds. Disease, cancer, having been sick about six months. She became alarmed in reference to her soul as she approached the dark Jordan of death, and three weeks and two days before she died, she was baptized. Funeral services by the brethren.

S. W. BOLLINGER.

VANSCOIK.—In the Yellow Creek church Elkhart Co., Ind., Sarah Vanscoik, daughter of friend Harvy and sister Catharine Vanscoik.

The father is not a member of the church, neither was the daughter. The father is a good moral man, and is ready to help the church and poor as much as any of the members, but for some cause he still stands without. We hope he will soon come, as he has now buried his last daughter of five.

She died Sept. 27th, aged 24 years, 9 mos. and 3 days. She was a very fine young woman, and liked by everybody. I knew her. Her funeral was on Sunday, was the largest ever attended. Discourse by the writer and others, from Luke 13: 24, "For many I say unto you will seek to enter in and shall not be able."

GENERAL INTLLIGENCE.

—Details have been received concerning the murder of two French explorers in Africa, MM. Dupere and Joubert by deserters of the Chamba tribe, when about seven days journey from Ghadame's they were met by seven persons, who declared they were perishing with hunger, and asked their hospitality. Their account seemed to be satisfactory that after being furnished with food, they were admitted into the caravan, when, suddenly taking advantage of an unguarded moment, the new comers threw themselves upon MM. Dupere and Joubert, and their servant Ahmed-ben, Zerma, and murdered them. The Chambas then stripped them of their clothes and carried off all of their property, with the exception of a few printed European books which they left upon the grounds. The account was brought back to Ghadames by the camel driver, witnesses of the murder, who were spared by the assassins as neutrals.

—The statistics of the Poor Children's Free Excursions in New York show the following interesting figures: On the twelve excursions this year there were 6,761 girls and 17,086 boys taken away from the city for a day's fun and pleasure. The total cost of these excursions was $8,834.89, or the insignificant sum of thirty-seven cents for each of the 23,847 children. To feed so great an army of little ones Mr. George F. Williams, the successful manager of this most successful undertaking, purchased 5,510 loaves of bread, 1,941 pounds of ham, 672 pounds of tongue, 1,121 pounds of beef, 861 pounds of butter, 40,000 French roll, 24,600 pounds of ice, 12 boxes of lemons, 6 barrels of sugar, 3,060 quarts of ice cream, and 4,200 quarts of milk. On Saturday Mr. Williams closed his third summer's work, having superintended in that time no less than forty-four excursions, while the aggregate number of children that left the streets of New York under his care was nearly 64,000.

The yearly meeting of the Friends in Richmond, Ind., is generally the occasion of considerable revival power. It is one of the largest of the kind in the country and is always attended by vast audiences. On Sunday great crowds were in attendance on the camp ground. E. Osborn, of Iowa, preached a powerful sermon on the Deity and offices of Christ. A number of speakers, male and female, addressed the thousands outside the church. On Saturday a meeting was held by the Friend's Subbath school Association. They report 110 schools with 8,000 pupils, and forty-three mission schools. An appropriation was made for the erection of new buildings at Earlam College. This meeting or conference has 16,338 members of all ages, 147 congregations and 169 ministers.

The Union Pacific Railroad Company have finished six artesian wells this season in the heart of the great plains, and generally at an elevation of more than 4,000 feet above the sea. The particular region is in what is known as Red Desert, which is from 700 to 800 miles west of the Missouri. At Rock Springs the well is 1,145 feet deep. They passed through various veins of coal, from two to eleven feet thick, and the aggregate of veins is 90 feet. Water flows from the surface steadily to the amount of 960 gallons, or 24 barrels, an hour. At Point of Rocks, 28 miles east, the well is 1,000 feet deep, and water is abundant, but it does not rise nearer to the surface than 15 feet, whence it is pumped into a tank; and such a well is a great advantage, for hitherto water trains have been run to supply different water stations on this route. No coal of value was found. At Bitter Creek, 21 miles east, the well is 696 feet deep, and 1,000 gallons per hour flow to the surface. At 96 feet is a small vein of coal. At Creston the well is 300 feet deep. At Separation the well is 1,180 feet deep, and water rises to within ten feet of the surface. A vein of coal is 45 feet deep and several feet thick. All the water in these wells is hard, but it is of fine quality.

Now this whole country is in the Rocky Mountains, but a traveler would hardly suspect it, for no lofty elevations appear. Gentle hills are everywhere, not covered with timber, but excellent grass, well suited for stock. The soil is rich, but as there is no rainfall to speak of, no crops can be grown. We can see now the value of a flowing artesian well in this vast solitude of grass. A well flowing 24 barrels an hour will irrigate 20 acres of grain in a day, or 160 acres in two weeks, which is as often as grain needs water; but by having a reservoir a far larger tract can be watered. A well 1,000 feet deep will cost at present about $1,500. We can see, therefore, that the great interior can be occupied by civilized people. —N. Y. Tribune.

—The Seventh Day Adventists have a General Conference, including 15 State Conferences, 300 churches, 75 ordained ministers, 60 licentiates, and 15,000 members. To keep up in the round numbers we are told that the amount pledged to the systematic benevolent fund is $50,000. The headquarters of the Adventists are in Battle Creek, Mich.

Historical Charts of Baptism.

A complete key to the history of Trine, and the Origin of Single Immersion. The most interesting reliable and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22x28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting at a single glance the impossibility of single immersion ever having been, the Apostolic method. POETRY.

An Evening Prayer.

I come to thee to-night,
In my lone closet where no eye can see,
And dare to crave an interview with Thee,
Father of love and light.

Softly the moonbeams shine
On the still branches of the shadowy trees,
While all sweet sounds of evening on the breeze
Steal through the slumb'ring vine.

Thou gav'st the calm repose
That rests on all—the air, the bird, the flower,
The human spirit in its weary hour—
Now at the bright day's close.

'Tis Nature's time for prayer;
The silent praises of the glorious sky,
And the earth's orisons profound and high,
To heaven their breathing bear.

With them my soul would bend
In humble reverence at Thy holy throne,
Trusting the merits of Thy Son alone,
Thy sceptre to extend.

If I this day have striven
With thy blest Spirit, or have bowed the knee
To aught of earth, in weak idolatry,
I pray to be forgiven.

If in my heart has been
An unforgiving thought, or word, or look
Though deep the malice which I scarce could brook,
Wash me from this dark sin.

If I have turned away
From grief or suffering which I might relieve,
Careless the "cup of water" e'en to give,
Forgive me, Lord, I pray.—

And teach me how to feel
My sinful wanderings with a deeper smart,
And more of mercy and of grace impart,
My sinfulness to heal.

Father, my soul would be
Pure as the drops of eve's unsullied dew,
And as the stars, whose nightly course is true,
So would I be to Thee.

Nor for myself alone
Would I these blessings of thy love implore
But for each penitent, the wide earth o'er,
Whom thou hast called thine own.

And for my heart's best friends,
Whose steadfast kindness o'er my painful years
Has watched to soothe affliction's grief and tears,
My warmest prayer ascends.

Should o'er their path decline
The light of gladness, or of hope, or health,
Be thou their solace, and their joy and wealth,
As they have long been mine.

And one—O Father, guide
The youthful traveller in the dangerous hour;
Save him from evil and temptation's power
And keep him near Thy side.

Watch o'er his couch to-night,
And draw him sweetly by the cords of love
To the blest communion with Thee, far above
Earth's withering cares and blight.

And now, O Father, take
The heart I cast with humble faith on Thee
And cleanse its depths from each impurity,
For my Redeemer's sake.

An Extract —A Few Pertinent or Impertinent Questions Asked.

The following we extract from a paper of the day:

"The truth is, there must take place pretty soon a reformation in Christianity. We are in dire need to-day of another Luther or Whitefield, to inaugurate a great Christian movement in the interests of old-fashioned morality. What are our gorgeous and extravagant houses of worship in this city, but so many religious club-houses? What are the churches themselves but social cliques, loathsome nests of gossip, scandal, angry passions, numberless divisions, and endless feuds? And they are in greater danger of speedy extinction than they dream of. If real churches do not take their places, in twenty years Christianity will be a thing of the past. Oh! for a latter day cleansing of the temple! not now with a whip of small cords, but with the besom of destruction. Let the reformation begin at once, say I. Let the crucible be brought frought forth, and the fire kindled, and the churches and all the ministers be thrown into it; and if any are saved, let it be so as by fire."

An honest acknowledgment indeed! Here are set forth the fruits of a ministry that worships the "dollar," and a religion that goes clad in purple and fine linen and fares sumptuously (at the world's feasts) every day. A reform is called for, "old-fashioned morality" is demanded. Brethren, can we not offer a basis to the world for a reformation such as is called for, such and "old-fashioned morality" as is demanded? Yes we can, and every day events are transpiring that makes it important that we be examples after the pattern of our Lord. This sugar-coated, surface-gilded religion is spoiling for the want of salt. Thousands are getting tired of it—sick at heart, and are pining for wholesome food. Give it freely—deal out the unadulterated bread—bread from heaven. Free to rich and poor, free as the air they breathe. No, not free, says one we want value received in money for our labor in handling God's free grace. We can't afford to preach longer on God's credit! We must adopt the cash system! A servant of the Lord we claim we are, called by Him thro' the church,—the Lord's agent—we want the agent to pay us, and if the church can afford to wait for its pay, all right, we can't! We will get our pay here, then in eternity we will have no account in wages to settle. How is that? no wages, no pay, well that is not so pleasant to meditate upon.

Why is it that Paul's words in the 9th chapter of 1 Corinthians is so often quoted on either side of the 12th verse and it omitted? Not wholesome doctrine for the advocates of a paid ministry, is that the reason? "Nevertheless we have not used this power," says Paul. Why do you rather suffer all things, Paul? "Lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ." A good reason indeed. That is a reason why the advocates spoken of should not use the power they find in the Bible. "Hinder the gospel." Oh, no, say they, we will make it more effectual. Will that be the case from the fact that they are better men than Paul was?

This is an age for "strikes" for higher wages. And it looks as if, from the tenor of the advocates aforesaid, a "strike" will soon be made by some for a cash system in the ministry business. They seem to "mean business." Bro. C. G. Lint in a late number of the Companion makes a timely suggestion how they should proceed, giving a form, and I would suggest a number of blanks be struck at once to accommodate, (especially) those of us who have no diplomas from a high-school.

When a strike is made for higher wager it is usually the case that those that hold on at old wages are severely penanted. How shall it be in this contemplated move? Will the free preachers be compelled to quit or only lovingly plead on the "side track" to be used in cases of emergency, and put down in the catalogue as "locals?"

We might ask more questions but let the above suffice with one more, and that is, If to live by the gospel means to make a support with it, does not living "off" the gospel mean we are to live of the free grace and favor of God and not off the church? The gospel is the "power of God unto salvation. To live "of" the gospel is to live of the "power of God." "Muzzle not the ox that treadeth out the corn" let him have to eat while at work, but it don't say to give a sack full to carry home. However if the 'good man' chooseth to give of his abundance the ox should not refuse the generous gift, provided he needed it.

We hope it will not be inferred from what has been said in connection with Eld. C. G. Lint's name that he is in favor of a paid ministry; we don't so understand him; we were so well pleased with his remarks that they came to our mind, hence the allusion J. S. FLORY.

A Few Reflections.

In reading over the sacred pages of the holy Bible from beginning to end, it seems strange to me that persons will stray so far away from their best friend; viz., God. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I have commanded you." Here he plainly tells us that we can become his friends, and in this life what is more gratifying to the lonely pilgrim than good, honest, true, and sympathizing friends, and much more soul-cheering will it be to have a friend in this life and the one to come. "His burden is easy and his yoke is light." Then why not come to him and ask him to make his abode with us. Let us not suffer the enemy to draw us after the foolish and sinful fashions of this world, for they are as dust before the wind. Soon it must all vanish away and never be seen again. It seems to me that any candid reader, after reading his or her Bible and seeing all the glorious promises that God is holding forth for his people, and the invitations that are given, they cannot refrain from coming unto Him. He gives them life, health, strength, and everything they enjoy in this world. He sends them gifts in every way. He sends them here both night and day. He gives us seed-time, harvest, summer and winter, rain and snow, heat and cold, all come in their appointed time. God never forgets us for one moment. But how often do we forget him, not thinking that every breath we draw is his. Without him we can do nothing. I fear we are not as careful as we should be, and often give the world a chance to say that we are not the people we pretend to be. I fear this is too often a stumbling block. The world watches us very closely sometimes, brethren, I think closer than we do ourselves. Well might the Savior say, "The children of this world are wiser in their generation that the children of light."

If we look around us and see how zealous the worldly men and women are in all their undertakings in this life, we must think of the Savior's words, for they are far more in earnest than many of our Christian professors. And now in conclusion I would say to those who have never made their peace with God, seek him now for ye know not when your Lord doth come, or how soon you may be called from time to eternity. And if you seek him not in this life, he will not own you in the life to come. And to those who have made their peace with God, try and hold out faithful unto the end, so that you can obtain the crown that is awaiting you in the mansions of eternal rest.

B. W. NEFF.

Be real men, and the kingdom of truth will honor you. Mighty powers will not only express themselves in your silence. Be real men, and even your solitude will be waited upon with scenes greater than all the theatres of Europe ever represented, or can represent. The eye of the world hath not see, nor hath the ear heard, nor the world's heart conceived, what "the spirit of truth" will reveal to you.

Answer to Query.

By request I will offer a few tho'ts upon the 44th and 45th verses of Acts 2, contained in the query of Bro. C. M. Armbrust as published some weeks since in the PILGRIM. The verses named read as follows: "And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." The query may arise if believers in that day did so, then why not now? We answer circumstances alter cases where order or custom is not established by law. From Peter's remarks to Ananias we infer this having things "common" was a volunteer matter, and not the result of divine law. And it seems too when this distribution was made, it was to those who had actual need. In those days the followers of Jesus were a much persecuted people, their rights to property were in all probability but little respected, therefore the best they could do was to sell their possessions and bring the proceeds to the apostles that they might do with it as they saw fit. Their confidence in the apostles, their love to one another, and especially to the needy, brought about such a way of disposing of their earthly goods at that time. Not being, as we can find, a matter of commandment, only in cases of actual necessity, we don't think the practice long continued. We find even in the days of the apostles of one Peter who had a house by the sea side, of Priscilla and Aquilla who had a house of their own,—of a Lydia who dealt in costly goods at the time of her conversion, and from all we can learn kept her house and continued her pursuit. From what we learn of the Corinthians some had houses and plenty, others were not so blessed. Rom. 15: 26, we read of "poor saints" at Jerusalem. Now had the custom of "having all things common" continued, whence those "poor saints," or if all were poor from whence cometh the contributions? From these and other quotations that might be made, it is evident the custom that prevailed just after the day of Pentecost did not continue long, not through the purer ages of the Church. In their first great love the disciples thought it good to distribute equally, but experience doubtless taught them to distribute according to need was a better way to dispose of that that the Lord had made them stewards over. In this age of the world, and circumstances being such that property with the believer is as strongly secured by the law as of any other person, it is not thought best to have all "things common." All that now is in the possession of believers in Christ should be held as one common stock belonging to the Lord, for all we have and all we are are his. Some stewards are entrusted with more than others as the Lord may have blessed them, and according to the teachings of the Savior, when his followers or the Lord in any way legally needs or legally calls for a part, it should be given as a part of the "common stock." And I believe so the Church regards the matter now, some not being qualified to be stewards over much have but little. It is written "he that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack." So we see there is not to be any difference in the end. Those that have an abundance have many temptations and snares to encounter that they abuse not anothers,—they being the Lord's,—or that they fall not into the sin of covetousness and idolatry. They that have little have need to be likewise careful that they use it aright and learn to economize and endure adversity as a means to fit the soul for Heaven in a way that to other's affliction answers the end. Whatever we have, much or little, we should be content. If much, thank God for the same, as a means whereby we may do much good, if little, thank God we are delivered from the temptations of the rich, and be content like the poor widow who sat down to a crust of bread and cup of water, and with uplifted hands in praise to God exclaimed in the fullness of her soul, "What! all this, and Jesus Christ too!"

Be not Ashamed of the Gospel.

For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.—Rom. 1: 16.

Well might the apostle say that he was not ashamed of the gospel, for he felt its power, but I fear that we are more or less ashamed of that word which will be our judge. The Savior said, I judge no man but the word that I have spoken shall judge men. Now brethren and sisters, let us look at ourselves. Perhaps we are not willing to take up our cross and follow the Lord in humility. I think we ought to love the Lord above all things, for he died for us, and he said follow me and keep my commandments. And what do we learn from his commandments? Why we learn that we should be a separate people from the world; we should become humble. Well, perhaps a young brother or sister will say, we are young yet, and you cannot expect us to dress plain. Dear brethren and sisters, did Christ make any difference in young or old? I think not. Then let us not be ashamed of the gospel and let our light shine, for at this time the world is full of false doctrine. Let us be on our guard, that we be not deceived and get ashamed to follow the Lord. O well, says one, God is merciful. Yes, dear brother and sister, God is merciful. If he was not, you and I would not be here now. Let us look at the mercies of God, what he has done for us. Let us honor God by keeping his word, and if we are faithful he will not be ashamed of us when he comes, and I think it will not belong, when we look at the people that profess to be Christians, and still are ashamed of the Lord. Dear brethren and sisters, beware of false prophets.

What Caused the Devil to Dread Immersion?

BY W. B. BAILY.

Ans. A long time ago, the children of Israel left Egypt on their way to Canaan. They came to the Red Sea, and the Lord said unto Moses, Speak unto the children of Israel to go forward, and they went as the Lord commanded, and they were all baptized unto Moses, being immersed in the cloud and in the sea and they rejoiced, being delivered from their enemies.

The devil was on pursuit of the Israel of God, and when he saw what was done he gave the same command, and sure enough they went forward and were immersed, but instead of it proving their salvation it proved their destruction, and the devil has dreaded immersion ever since, and he was still more confirmed in his opinion that immersion would not do when the Savior passed by the tombs. The evil spirit said, suffer us to go into the swine, and he suffered him, and the whole herd ran down a steep into the deep and perished. This confirmed him in his belief that immersion would not do. He says don't go forward into the deep, you will be choked, strangled. Take a little water and go on dry land and baptize or in the meeting-house, the word into means, at, nearly. This is what I said you would find in another place, sometime ago.

The Queen at The Paper Mill.

The Queen was riding out in her grand carriage, the horses tossing their plumes as if they felt themselves a little better than common horses, and the footman all decked out in red, feeling that they had something royal about them. The Queen had always had everything she wanted, and so was quite miserable because she could not think of a want to supply, or a new place to visit.

At last she bethought her that they had just been building a new paper mill, a few miles out of the city. Now she had never seen a paper mill, and so she determined to stop a little way off, there leave her carriage, and walk in—not as a Queen, but as an unknown, common lady. She went in alone, and told the owner she would like to see his mill. He was in a great hurry, and did not know that she was the Queen. But he said to himself: "I can gratify the curiosity of this lady, and add to her knowledge; and, though I am terribly hurried, yet I will do his kindness." He then showed her all the machinery, how they bleach the rags and make them white; how they grind them into pulp; how they make sheets and smooth them, and dry them, and make them beautiful. The Queen was astonished and delighted. She would now have something new to think about and talk about.

Just as she was about leaving the mill, she came to a room filled with old worn-out, dirty rags. At the door of this room was a great multitude of poor, dirty men and women and children, bringing old bags on their backs, filled with bits of rags, and paper, parts of old newspapers, and the like, all exceedingly filthy. These were rag-pickers, who had picked these old rags out of the streets and gutters of the great city.

"What do you do with all these vile things?" said the Queen.

"Why, madam, I make paper out of them. To be sure they are not very profitable stock, but I can use them, and it keeps those poor creatures in bread."

"But these rags! Why sir, they are of all colors, and how do you make them white?"

"O! I have the power of taking out all the dirt and old colors. You see that 'scarlet' and 'crimson,' yet I can make even scarlet and crimson, the hardest colors to remove, become white as snow."

"Wonderful! wonderful!" said the Queen. She took her leave, but the polite owner of the mill insisted on walking and seeing her safe in her carriage. When she got in and bowed to him with a smile, and he saw all the grand establishment, he knew it was the Queen.

"Well, well!" said he, "she has learned something at any rate. I wish it may be a lesson in true religion."

A few weeks after, the Queen found lying upon her writing desk a pile of the most beautiful polished paper she had ever seen. On each sheet were the letters of her own name, and her own likeness. How she did admire it! She found also, a note within, which she read. It ran thus:

"Will my Queen be pleased to accept a specimen of my paper, with the assurance that every sheet was manufactured out of the contents of those dirty bags which she saw on the backs of the poor rag-pickers? All the filth and colors are washed out, and I trust the result is such as even a Queen may admire. Will the Queen also allow me to say, that I have had many a good sermon preached to me in my mill? I can understand how our Lord Jesus Christ can take the poor heathen, the low, sinful creatures everywhere, viler than the rags, and wash them and make them clean; and how, 'though their sins be as scarlet, he can make them whiter than snow; and though they be red, like crimson, he can make them as wool.' And I can see that he can write his own name upon their foreheads, as the Queen will find her name upon each sheet of paper; and I can see how, as these filthy rags may go into the palace and ever be admired, some poor, vile sinners may be washed in the blood of the Lamb, and be received into the palace of the Great King in heaven."—Rev. John Todd, in Sunday School Times.

Good Advice to Christians.

1. See that your religion makes you a better son or daughter, a better clerk, a better friend, a better workman. "By their fruits ye know them."

2. Do not set yourself up as a standard. Shun all censoriousness, especially toward old Christians, who may not look at things just as you do. Remember that each one "to his own Master standeth or falleth," and not to you.

3. Let nothing keep you from the Savior. Never be tempted to stray away from him by unbelieving doubts, by past neglects, by present fear, by anything. Remember the faithful saying, "Christ came into the world to save sinners." Be more intimate with him than any earthly friend.

4. Never rejoice in your own strength. Resolutions are of no avail simply as such. A child looking to Christ is stronger than a strong man armed. Be resolute in looking to him alone for strength. This is all the resolution you need to make—for "Without me ye can do nothing."

5. Let this be the settled conviction of your soul, for without this all else is unavailing, all efforts to grow in grace will be as useless as to build a house upon the shifting sands.

Finally. Do not be discouraged if you fail in everything. If you were perfect, what need would you have of a Savior? "Ask and it shall be given unto you; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth," and so forth. "If ye then being evil, know how to give gifts to your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?"

—Humility is a preparation for every fruit of the Spirit.

Let those be thy choicest companions who have made Christ their chief companion.

There is nothing that makes a man so able to preach Christ to the people as getting Christ within him.

—Generosity is catching; and if so many men escape it, it is in a great degree from the same reason that countrymen escape the small-pox, because they meet with no one to give it to them.

The one was studiously inclined,
The other boy was gay.

The pocket money each received,
Was just the same amount;
And how they both expended it,
I briefly shall account.

While George was smoking his cigars,
And sauntering about,
With youths as idle as himself,
Shutting all knowledge out;

At the Mechanics' Institute,
And with his books at home,
Tom wisely spent his leisure hours'
Nor cared the streets to roam.

One eve, when their apprenticeship
Had nearly passed away,
George at his friend Tom's lodging called,
An hour or two to stay.

He entered smoking his cigar
Ill-mannerly enough,
And starting round the room, he blew
A most portentious puff.

"Why Tom!" he cried, with much surprise,
"Is your old uncle dead?
And left you cash to buy those books
That round the walls are spread?"

"O, no" said Tom, "I bought these books
With what my friends allowed;
Had you not smoked away your cash,
You might the same have showed!"

"Why, my Havanas only cost Me threepence every day!"
"Just so," said Tom, "you've only amoked
A library away!

Now reckon up threepence a day
For seven long years to come!
And you will find it will count
A very handsome sum!"

"Why, that," said George, with humbled look,
"Full THIRTY POUNDS would be,
How foolishly I've smoked away
A handsome library."

Thoughts Suggested.

Not long since, I attended a funeral and the victim was a mother, who had been permitted, by the blessing of God, to raise her children to full grown men and women. After the funeral was preached, privilege was then given for the last time, to see the corpse. I think I never witnessed such demonstrations of weeping and mourning as on this occasion. Children who had grown to men and women in stature with full developed minds, seemed entirely overcome with the idea of parting with a mother so near and dear. I was somewhat impressed myself on this occasion, remembering that I also had a father and mother who have not yet departed this life. I was thus led to meditate, and while reflecting upon what I had seen and heard, this portion of Scripture came to my mind: "Children obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right." This is a gospel injunction and there are promises connected with it, such as long life, which is much desired by many. Children remember that the way of the transgresser is hard. "Parents, provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." I think there is no one better qualified for this than the parents, and they certainly have an influence over their children in preference to a stranger. They should then make it their duty to teach and inculcate this principle into their children at as early a day as possible, as soon at least as they will be able to understand. Teach them that there is a God, that He knows what we say or think, that he has made us, that this body must die. Teach them also that there is a living principle or spirit, that when this body dies it will still live, and that too forever. Then teach them to love God above all things, give them your reasons for so doing; teach them to love the Bible and prefer it to all other books; teach them to be kind courteous and affectionate, to do unto others as they would wish to be done by. And while you are thus engaged in teaching by word, let your light so shine that your every day life may give tone and confidence to the same.

Now dear children under whose notice this may fall, obey your parents in the Lord for this is right. What a sweet consolation it will be to those children when they come to part with dear parents if they have obeyed them in all things! But how must the disobedient child feel, and especially when its parents have been good, and tried to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, when it has unheeded all their instructions. It seems to me this must be among the things that would make us miserable when our parents teach us right, but in return we gave them much grief by pouting, grumbling, fault-finding, and a continual warfare of disobedience. What a poor consolation for the parents in their dying hour to think of their children's lost condition if they persist as in this course. Children, work, learn, live to do better while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work. Choose that better part.

Hints to Young Men.

How many young men ignorantly deny themselves a fortune. There is scarcely a young man of good sense who cannot save $100 easily from his annual earnings, and if he will forego cigars, billiards, and many other useless habits he can save double that amount. Thus if a young man upon his twentieth birthday will invest $100 in any stock paying ten per cent, and annually thereafter will invest the same amount, and the accumulation of interest, he will be worth, when he is thirty years old, $1,753, when forty years old $18,150 when sixty years old, $48,700. How simple then is the plan by which a youth of the present day can pass his old age in comfort and luxury. He has only to regulate his expenses so as to save one hundred dollars each year from his income. If the amount saved be larger then the sum total will be increased in the same proportion. Only think of it. That $500 saved annually and invested in ten per cent stock, in forty years will amount to $243,500, and if it would only gather half the amount we would not have so many poor, but able bodied men running around begging.

Dear reader, I do think if we were too dilatory to prepare for our natural body, we are very apt to neglect our soul. But first the soul should be provided for, and then the rest will be added.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—In the second sentence of next to the last paragraph of Bro. Rosenbergers "Review," we have it, "this is not what we term the drug," where it should be, "this is what we term the drug effect."

—On yesterday we had a short visit from brother John Rupert and wife of the Spring Run congregation. They were on their return from the Warriorsmark Lovefeast. They report a large and interesting meeting. Their ministerial assistance was Eld. J. G. Gluck and Archy VanDyke.

—The Yellow Creek Lovefeast, as usual, was largely attended and well supplied with ministerial aid. We do not remember the names of more than H. R. and John S. Holsinger.

—We are informed that the Brethren of Philadelphia have introduced a Baptistry into their Church and on last Sabbath the three first candidates were immersed in it. This new order, among us, caused some excitement, among the curious, and a full house. What next?

—Twin sisters, living at South Bethlehem, Pa., each gave birth to twins several nights ago, within a few hours of each other. These sisters were married on the same day; their first children were born in the same month, their second in the same week and their third in the same hour.

—On the hills near Piedmont, W. Va., millions of pigeons roost nightly. Hunters have little use for shot guns, as after nightfall they can catch and kill them without mutilating them with shot. One gentleman, says the Piedmont Independent, killed 883 of the birds one morning, many of which were taken without the aid of a gun.

—Some of our readers are wondering way the sample copy of the PILGRIM for 1875 does not come. Have a little more patience, a few more weeks and you will see what can be done in the way of improvement. We intend to do the very best for our readers that we possibly can and in return we hope that our friends will see that we do not suffer by it.

—Bro. Jesse Calvert says: Our Communion meeting was held on the 25th of September and it was very pleasant. 22 laboring brethren were present. Elders R. H. Miller from Ind. and John Metzker from a distance labored the most, and we kindly thank them, and their labors we think will never be forgoten. One was added to the fold by baptism, making about 70 in a year in our arm of the church.

—In Companion No. 42, a brother pitches into our far western brethren with a relish for overdrawing their advantages, thereby deceiving the unwary. We have examined the character of our brethren's writings rather closely and cannot see that they have went beyond their privileges. That some are disappointed in their expectations is probable, but it can not be because they have to subsist on "Scrofula seeds" especially in Colorado where they have such an abundance of Buffalo steak, &c.

—We have lately received a beautiful Poem written and published by S. P. Yoder entitled "Christianity Requires Peace." It is nicely gotten up and printed in two colors with a beautiful border around it. The writer is an invalid and is compelled to write while lying. He offers his poem for sale at 10 cents per copy or $1.00 per dozen, and the proceeds are to be given to the Russian aid fund. Any of our readers wishing to drop a mite for this worthy cause can do so by sending it to S. P. Yoder, Vistula, Elkhart Co., Ind.

—On Wednesday evening Oct. 21st we had the pleasure of receiving a call from Bro. Quinter of the Companion. He had been cast, in the Perry District, Pa., to assist in opening a new Church for the worship of God. He reports a large and interesting meeting. Brethren Edmond and Isaac Book and Isaac Strong were advanced in the ministry. Our old and esteemed brother Peter Long is the elder, assisted by C. Myers and the above named.

—A veteran revivalist of western Massachusetts pines for some old-time preaching. He remembered when Parson Taggart had a sermon which he was determined the people should hear. Having preached one hour and a half on it during the forenoon, he told his audience that he concluded to give them the other half in the afternoon, but, as he was afraid half of his audience would not be there in the afternoon, he would then preach the other half, which he accordingly did, giving his people a sermon over three hours long.

—M. M. Eshleman of Lanark, Ill. says of his book, that in addition to what we noticed sometime ago, it contains a number of chapters treating on "The Unfruitful Work of Darkness, Pic-nic Religion, Decisions of A. M., Diversions, Luxuries, Superfluities, &c., &c. The work has been delayed somewhat beyond my expectation and the calculations of the publishers; but have the assurance that all orders will be filled shortly. Through the advice and suggestions of many brethren I ordered an edition of 2000 copies; and I hope all those who are deeply concerned for the welfare of Zion will assist in their dissemination."

—The October returns of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, indicates an average condition of the corn crop of 86 per cent, against 83 per cent in September. All the New-England States show an improved condition except Maine and Connecticut. The Middle States show a decline during the month. The South Atlantic Coast States and the Gulf States, as a whole, about hold their own except Louisiana, where the average sinks from 76 to 69. Of the Southren Inland States, Tennessee and West Virginia shows considerable improvement. Arkansas and Kentucky are almost stationary. North of the Ohio, the crop conditions were more favorable in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois, which show rising averages. Wisconsin declined four per cent. West of the Mississippi, and on the Pacific coast, all the States show an improved condition except Oregon, which remains the same. In those States afflicted with the grasshopper plague, a considerable improvement upon the low averages of last month is manifest.—N. Y. Tribune.

Our Visit to Clover Creek

Having a desire to be with our brethren of the Clover Creek Congregation at the time of opening their new house for worship, we took the Broad Top on Saturday morning with the intention of going as far as Marklesburg and from there, strike across the Tussey's mountain, some four miles On getting aboard the train Bro. P. S. Myers and his daughter also took passage with us for the same meeting. At Marklesburg we were met by Bro. J. Snowberger with a spring [wagon and taken to his home where our wants were cheerfully attended to. After dinner, as we were called to be fishers of men, it was suggested by Peter that we go a fishing which move was readily approbated, but of the tackling for our mode of fishing there were none on hands. However this obstacle was soon removed by splitting a scrub brush from which we obtained the necessary wire of which to make our loops or snares. These we attached to a small pole and to the stream we joyfully resorted, when operation commenced with a commendable zeal, so much so that we were made to wonder whether we did not manifest a little more, perhaps, than when trying to fish in our true element at least, we thought we were more succes ful, as we done right well considering our practice, this being our first attempt in this mode of fishing. We were not at it long until our company was increased by several more disciples, Bros. Stephen Hildebrand, and G. W. Brumbaugh. The latter had no small degree of confidence in his ability as an expert in these things, and entered the work with considerable ardor, however, he was not so sanguine after witnessing our expertness, assisted by Peter, in this secondary apostolic occupation (?)

By evening, we had a nice string of spotted and speckled fish, and returned home better pleased with our pastime than with our booty. In the evening there was an appointment for preaching, or fishing for souls, in the school house near by, but for this work there was not nearly so many willing hands, however, the word was faithfully preached and we had a pleasant waiting before the Lord. After meeting, we again returned to brother Snowberger's for the night. Next morning being the appointed time for opening the new church for public worship, we resorted there, where we found a large assemblage already collected, and they continued to come until the house was uncomfortably full and a number outside. The services were opened by singing the 326th hymn read by S. Hildebraud. Prayer by H. R. Holsinger. Bro. P. S. Myers led in preaching followed by brother Holsinger, Text Kings 8-12-30. The preaching was interesting and impressive and received a respectful audience, and we fondly hope that the earnest labors then and there put forth may not be in vain but bring forth its fruit in due season. After services, the strangers present were kindly cared for by the brethren and friends in the neighborhood. Every man's table was that of his brother's and all were made to feel at home while among them.

In the evening we again repaired to the church for worship when it fell to our lot to lead in preaching, followed by Geo. Brumbaugh of James Creek. The congregation was again large and attentive to the word preached, and we enjoyed another pleasant waiting before the Lord in his Bethel.

After preaching we with a number of others, were taken to the house of Bros. A. S. and J. S. Bechtal's. In these families we felt especially at home, and though our stay was quite short it will occupy a sacred spot in our tablet of remembrance. All present received every care that kind hearts could suggest and willing hands perform. Some of our company were taken to the home of our esteemed brother George Smith, father-in-law to the above, where we feel assured they enjoyed similar tokens of Christian love and esteem. Next morning we and brother Myers took the mountain and steered our way for Grafton Station, where we arrived in time, plus ten minutes, and in a short time were in Huntingdon, our present place of abode. Thus ended our short but pleasant visit. Such short vacations from office duty afford us much enjoyment in various ways. Not only is our bodily organization invigorated and recuperated but the inner man is greatly strengthened in the divine life.

The Church our Clover Creek brethren built is a good one, being well finished in all its parts and sufficiently commodious for all ordinary purposes. The meetings will be continued at that place for some three or four days and brethren Hildebraod and Holsinger will remain to do the labor. We hope that it may be abundantly blessed and that many who were lately laboring under the yoke of sin may decide for Christ and the glorious liberties of the gospel.

OUR ALMANAC FOR 1875.

A number of our readers are enquiring about the Almanac and how soon they will be ready for sale, the terms &c. To all such as are interested we now say, the copy is in the hands of the publishers and the Almanac will be completed at the earliest possible date. In order to destroy the idea of competion and make a better Almanac, we and Bro. Quinter of the Companion have concluded to publish but one Almanac between us so that we have united our resources and believe we will be able to present the Brotherhood an Almanac worthy of universal patronage. Those who will be so kind as to help us sell them can send in their orders at once and they will be booked and filled as soon as published. We have agreed on the following terms: Single copy 10 cents, 12 copies 75 cents, 18 copies $1.00, 100 copies $5.75. Address H. B. Brumbaugh, Box 50, Huntingdon Pa.

Correspondence.

Reporter is wanted from every Church in the brotherhood to send us Church news Obituaries, Announcements, or anything that will be of general interest. To insure insertion, the writers name must accompany each communication. Our Invitation is not personal but general—please respond to our call.

My Experience and Conversion.

In the Pilgrim, No. 40, current volume, I read with interest, a piece headed, "A Few Thoughts," about me, from sister Ellie J. VanDyke. In reply, I shall announce that on the evening of the 3rd of Oct., brother Jos. M. Cline and Daniel Yount of Augusta Co., Va., came agreeable to my request and a previous promise. Here they met with a hearty welcome. The next day, between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock, at my father's residence, brother Cline preached a plain, faithful, and pure gospel sermon to a very large, intelligent, attentive, also very fashionable congregation. It is said that between five hundred and a thousand persons were here, and many more desired to come. Besides a very large circle of acquaintances and a goodly number of relatives, there were representatives here from six counties, two distant towns, and another State.

The Brethren's doctrine was entirely new in this section, and a fine opportunity was presented for giving it publicity. I do heartily desire that "God's word may have free course and be glorified." "Paul may plant, Apollas may water, but God alone must give the increase." It was the first sermon I ever heard from the Brethren. I was entirely satisfied with it. Its gospel crumbs fell upon my heart as a feast of good things. I would be highly pleased to hear such preaching often. I do wish they could live amongst us, near me, that I might hear them often. I am a resident of Fluvanna Co., lying on James River, in East Va., sixty-six miles above its capital, Richmond. Who will move to this section? The lands along the river are excellent. Much of it can be purchased or rented.

Again to the exercises of the 4th of October. The sermon being ended, (Bro. Yount also added some closing and worthy remarks,) an old member of the Methodist Church was heard to loudly say, "That is sound doctrine." Another pious and aged Baptist, when bidding the preacher farewell, asked a blessing upon him. Next the ministers, crowd and I (the candidate for baptism) proceeded to a suitable place about one and a half miles below here, where in the canal, brother Cline performed the sacred and solemn ordinance of Trine Immersion. This being finished, a voice from the bank said, "That is baptism sure." Everything passed off remarkably well. All the expressions which have yet reached my ears concerning the public and private opinion of the brethren upon this occasion, were quite kind and favorable. In Cumberland Co., about thirteen miles from here, there lives some of this order. One of the ministers had notified them of this approaching meeting. Four of the sisters and three of the brethren came up. It was the first time I had met them. Of course their plain dressing made them odd looking in this community. My acquaintances say it is remarkable for a person with my surroundings and our manner of living, to have been willing to do as I have done. Without my unbiased judgment, great comfort and strength from my dear Redeemer, I too would think so. God has performed this miracle upon me, by His wise, gradual and transforming power; and all the wealth, honors and fame of this uncertain world, have no charms to allure me from trying to daily follow the "good old ways" of the "chief among ten thousand, and the One altogether lovely." He is my Father, Friend, Guide, Counsellor, Physician, Health, Help, Light, Life, Prophet, Priest, Refuge, Anchor, All and in All. "Without Him I can do nothing." "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men." "Who can utter the mighty acts of the Lord? Who can show forth all his praise?" "How great are his signs, and how mighty are his wonders? His Kingdom is an everlasting Kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation." "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced (and does rejoice) in God my Savior."

For a long time I have been giving expressions to my friends of the greatness, goodness, "power and might" of the Lord Jesus Christ. Often I thought they might possibly consider me "full of new wine." A spiritual wine, or understanding was all I had drunk. "Open your mouth wide and I will fill it." "The diligent soul shall be made fat." "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." "For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy, I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones." "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies; who satisfieth thy mouth with good things, so that thy youth is renewed like the eagles." "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary, and they shall walk and not faint." "Wait on the Lord, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land." "Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty; they shall behold the land that is very far off." "Thus saith the Lord, keep ye judgment, and do justice; for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed." "And let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." "The Lord is a God of judgment: blessed are all they that wait for him." "For they shall not be ashamed that wait for me." "He that goeth forth and reapeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

During the past when I would converse so much upon this delightful theme, it would sometimes occur to me that worldly persons might consider me as having an impaired mind. This has never, at any time, been a mental exercise; and all who know me closely and intimately have not, nor cannot truthfully call it thus. Agreeable to Scripture description, I was placed in a strict and long continued spiritual "captivity" and was "shut up" that I could not come orth till I, by promise, was quickned in spirit. "I have ever from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I shewed it thee: lest thou shouldest say, Mine idol hath done them; and my graven image, and my molten image hath commanded them. Thou hast heard, see all this, and will not ye declare it? I have shewed thee new things, from this time, even hidden things, and thou didst not know them." In describing the goodness, greatness, mercy, judgment and truth of God's promises, words are but cold and vain symbols. I often try to make it plain, but sensibly feel my weak failure. My peace flows as a river. Not in a vain-glorious spirit, but with a deep sense of my nothingness, I do from duty to the cause of Christ, announce as a "witness," that I have long discerned Jesus Christ, as being manifested in my flesh I have long been walking by faith, and not by sight, or according to my mind. "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart, and lean not unto thine own understanding." The Shepherd of Israel did not lead me wrong. That my spiritual man might grow and strengthen, I was tried in every shape and form, till I was trained to "glory in tribulation." While I was daily and hourly walking according to the revealed will and way of my Wonderful Counsellor, my friends often spoke as if I might be wrong, and suggested other things. I always asked them to "let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." Before I was brought into "captivity" and became as the "valley of dry bones," the Holy Bible and "Pilgrim's Progress" were as "sealed" books to me. Since my afflictions, the day-star arose in my heart, and Oh! what has been since revealed to my heart! Oh! how greatly I once doubted the possibility of these great works and ways. Ever since my earliest recollection, at times, I became serious upon the subject of religion. Many ministers conversed with me, and pronounced me a convert, still as I did not realize what I saw described as Christianity in the Bible, I would not connect myself with any church. Time wore on, and as I did not know my Savior, I began to doubt the truth of revealed religion; later, special providences bound me, and I next became "holden in cords of affliction;" then I became sensibly alive to the fact that God's hand was upon me. I then knew him in this straitened state. I acknowledged him. This was in October, 1869. God is a spirit; but I can truly say that I do understand his will with me as if I conversed with him before my natural eye. My knowledge of "hidden things" was given me gradually. Persons who once thought strangely of my course, express it that they "envy" my peace and spiritual understanding. While so long in spiritual suffering, I often silently feared my case had the appearance of great wickedness; but I took comfort from "perfect" Job and asked where was "mine adversary." "That which I see not teach thou me: if I have done iniquity I will do no more." I have never considered myself equal to the "perfect" Job, nor do I expect to do it. My suffering was not for sins between me and human beings, but for "original sin"—a sin common to all hearts, and those who have not felt its convicting power have not yet been led into the deep and dark recesses of their hearts—that "chamber of imagery." "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." The Psalmes' says, 'He fashioneth their hearts alike." While all hearts contain the same kind of sins, yet I am well aware that what besets one does not always beset another. "Know thyself" is truly a painful knowledge, but Oh! what rich blessings spring from this thing To know much of Christ, we must take up our cross daily.—"For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ. "Blessed is the man whom thou chasteneth, O Lord, and teacheth him out of thy law; that thou mayest give him rest from the days of adversity, until the pit be digged for the wicked." "Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causeth to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple. By terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O God of our salvation; who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea: which by his strength setteth fast the mountains; being girded with power: Which stilleth the wise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the tumult of the people."

A spiritual "captivity" does not seem to happen to all, because all will not nor cannot endure the "furnace" heated "seven times." "In a great house" there are different kinds of "vessels:" some would be consumed by "fire," others become hardened, and the residue refined and purified" unto honor sanctified, and meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work." Spiritual "captivity" causes a person to suffer as a martyr, tied to an invisible stake—they become as a sacrifice. While in these suffering states, the heart, the temple of Christ, is "prepared," and becomes his abode. I understand from the tone of Scripture that Job, David, and Nebuchadnezzar (the latter having lost his reason) were in a long continued and strict spiritual "captivity." The prophet Ezekiel was carried in a vision down into the temple, his heart to see, what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery; for they say, the Lord seeth us not; the Lord hath forsaken the earth. He said (the Spirit) also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do; turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these." This is to show us that the deeper into our hearts the Spirit of truth leads us, the greater the knowledge of our own sins as well as to enable us to have a "spiritual discernment" of what is around and about us. To make us useful, faithful, "burning and shining lights," truly this is a wise and blessed thing in the plan of salvation. "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer."

Again to this spiritual "captivity." As soon as Paul became spiritually awakened, he retired into a desolate place called Arabia Petra, where he "conferred not with flesh and blood," and remained three years, then he went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days; afterwards came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia," where the churches of India which were in Christ had only heard of him, and glorified God in him. Here is a striking example and proof that God does place (for wise purposes) some persons in a strict and long continued "captivity." And when a person is in this state, such a falling off of the "scales" from the eyes! To a person thus taught, there is a very great responsibility resting; for if we do not walk as we know and are taught, by the "Spirit of truth," greater the light, greater the condemnation. While in this "captivity," we are commanded to "be afflicted," (and that in God's appointed way) and "be still and know that I am God," then the promises keep life in us till the Sun of Righteousness arise with healing in his wings. Oh! the precious promises!—"I rejoice at thy word, as one that findeth great spoil." "How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth." "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path," "Thy testimonies are wonderful; therefore doth my soul keep them. The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple."

"Before I became much enlightened, to me, be promises were, as so many bright stars upon a dark sky, and as the rounds of a ladder leading my heart up to Jesus Christ. While in deep affliction and straits, the promises are especially useful—as the encouraging, strengthening and loving tones of God's voice. Indeed the whole Bible is a "precious treasure," the Old containing types, shadows, figures and symbols of the New. The last Will and Testament is a precious legacy to blind and sinful human beings. The plan of salvation is so perfect, wise and merciful that words are too faint to describe it. "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men." "I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Thus far the Lord has led me on; and for some time he has shown me the "green pastures," and now he maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's' sake. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over." "Keep me as the apple of thine eye," "Keep me as the apple of thine eye," is my heart's earnest and continual breathing. "Take heed when ye think ye stand, lest ye fall." "Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him." "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee. Trust ye in the Lord forever; for in the Lord JEHOVAH is everlasting strength. For he bringeth down them that dwell on high; the lofty city, he layeth it low; he layeth it low, even to the ground; he bringeth it even to the dust." During my intense spiritual suffering, and I was also physically infirm with chronic dyspepsia, the most trying of all ills of the flesh, it did seem that the world, the flesh and the devil had set themselves in battle-array against me; and then I could not "discern" the justice of it. While these billows were rolling round and above me, I cried in my heart that God would show me a token for good: that they which hate me may see it, and be ashamed: because thou, Lord, hast helped me, and comforted me." "The Lord God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back, I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting. For the Lord God will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded: therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed. He is near that justifieth me; who will contend with me? let us stand together: who is mine adversary? let him come near to me. Behold the Lord God will help me; who is he that shall condemn me? Lo, they all shall wax old as a garment; the moth shall eat them up." He is faithful that promised—not one good thing he hath failed to perform. "Pour out your heart to God;" for he is a refuge. "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and find rest for your soul; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light;" and "though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool. If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land. But if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. Wash ye, make you clean; put away the evils of your doings before mine eyes, cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow." "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid? When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, come upon me to eat up my flesh, they stumbled and fell. Though a host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear; though a war should rise against me, in this will I be confident. One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his temple. For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavillion; in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock. And now shall mine head be lifted up above mine enemies round about me; therefore will I offer in his tabernacle sacrifice of joy; I will sing, yea I will sing praises unto the Lord." "Oh taste and see that the Lord is God; blessed is the man that trust in him." "Praise ye the Lord. Praise the Lord, O my soul." I suppose I must think of concluding this praiseworthy and delightful theme. Now about some of my heartfelt and abiding convictions. Before my "captivity," I was a fashionable person; afterwards, I put all such things aside as being wicked, and I could no longer bear the burden of them; it even pained me to see others following them. These feelings brought the thoughts and scenes of "Vanity Fair" vividly and daily before my distressed eyes. I next concluded to seek out some plain and "modest apparel" for myself, in harmony with Scripture and in answer to my convictions. So I continued to dress, until I saw the uniform of the church of the Brethren. For a long time, I felt the importance of connecting myself with a church, and upon searching the Scripture," I discovered that different commands were given which were not practiced in the church of my acquaintance, and the church of my choice according to silfish motives. I had long given myself up to the leading and teaching of the Spirit of truth. "If any man will do my will, he shall know of my doctrine." I became importunate to the ruler of the universe, that he would open a way for me to join a church in which I could do his will. During last January, I remarked to a friend that I was waiting upon God for a church to join. In reply she expressed her belief in special providences. I did not wait in vain, for various special providences arose from unexpected sources, which opened an unmistakable way to join a church which entirely answered to such as I had long seen described in God's holy Word. And although this church was the church opened up for me, I must confess, that under many circumstances, it cost me a great struggle to do it. That struggle being bravely overcome by yielding to the true Spirit, I became happy, happier, happiest! Yes indeed; for all can testify to it, and say I deserve great credit for my firmness, and are so often asking me questions about this doctrine, and many things concerning the Bible. "God is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind." "For he doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men." To all who have not experienced a spiritual "captivity," I would say that there is a work for all to do; and 'whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," and "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violet take it by force." For many reasons and proofs, I do believe the "Brethren" are closely following the Apostolic doctrine. With this thing I am delighted; for Scripture says "seek for the good old ways:" and "remove not the ancient landmarks which our fathers have set." The present age is filled with the "doctrines of men," and "set at nought the commandments of Christ." Let us all, with unbiased minds and contrite hearts, seek the foot-steps of the meek and lowly Jesus, letting the multitude do as it will. I do insist upon the daily and serious searching of the scriptures. In speaking of Paul's preaching at Berea, it is thus; "They received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so." Many people in this enlightened country, even members of different churches, are scarcely acquainted with the rules for daily use, and as to doctrine many pin their faith to the opinions of men. As I have before written, "may God's word have free course and be glorified." A few words about the fashion. They are not only wicked, but many are disgusting. "Let all things be done decently and in good order." I do love plainness, neatness and cleanliness. Although I am so much pleased with the church of the "Brethren," I would not be surprised, (but would be pained) to find some "shabby sheep" in the flock. These things should not be so, nevertheless it happens in religious matters as well as in worldly matters. Let others do as they will, let us hourly strive to "do justly; love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God;" and let holiness unto The Lord" be written upon all we do. I am delighted with the writings and conduct of the "Pilgrim." Thus for the Editor seems to discharge a thorough christian duty to all. This paper is an exception to the religious papers generally; for here they render unto Christ, the things which are Christ's, excluding Cesar's kingdom, while other religious papers contain a mixture. I read some excellent piece in different religious papers, but object to this lack of a line of demarkation. The members of other churches are so fashionable, that I cannot refrain from questioning this thing, when I recollect that Christians are called a "peculiar people, zealous of good works;" it also says, "Love not the world, neither the things of the world;" and they should be kept "unspotted from the world." I look around for that "modest apparel," but find it not often. I love true Christians in all churches; but it is so distressing to see how many are regardless of the plain teachings of Scripture. Some excuse themselves by saying this and that were done in "old times." Yes, so I read it; but since no command was left to forsake those "old times," and to look up new times, I do heartily fear to fall in with the new times. The way to Heaven is said to be "strait and narrow," and few there be which enter therein; and the road to destruction is "broad" and many enter therein. Having the Bible for my guide, I am heartily satisfied that the "old way" is "narrow" and the new way is "broad." With humbleness of heart and of purpose, let us press on into the "narrow way;" and pray God to recover these from the "broad" way. I cannot conscientiously place confidence in any Discipline save that of the teachings of the Holy Bible. The 22nd chapter of Revelation contains great and mighty words upon this solemn and sacred matter. "And, behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates of the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie. I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star. And the Spirit and the bride say, come. And let him that heareth say, come, and let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely. For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book. If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in his book. And if any man shall take away from the word of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book. He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly: Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen." Since God does not lie, let us take good heed to these powerful words while closing his last will and Testament to fallen men. In the language of the Psalmist, let our hearts thus "cry mightily" unto God, to "open thou mine eyes that I may behold wonderous things out of thy law;" "order my steps in thy word, and let no iniquity have dominion over me;" "that which I see not, teach thou me;" "make thy ways straight and plain before me;" "show me thy ways, O Lord, teach me thy paths." Regarding commandments, in other Scriptures, it says, "If ye love me keep my commandments;" "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: a good understanding have all they that do his commandments: his praise endureth forever. The works of his hands are verity and judgement; all his commandments are sure. They stand fast forever and ever, and are done in truth and uprightness. He sent redemption unto his people: he hath commanded his covenant forever: holy and reverend is his name." With an entirely honest heart, and a deep sense of humility, and a pure love for the cause of Jesus Christ. I yielded to my well known duty to God and to man to write all as I have done; and if I have erred in one jot or one tittle, I do crave pardon, and beg to be shown my error. So now with all honor and glory to God, I submit it to public notice and serious reflection. Upon this great subject, I do feel more than I can express; and in this sum and substance of the whole, I can but exclaim, "Great and marvelous are thy works and ways!" "Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth. Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her, and she shall keep thee. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding. Exalt her and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honor, when thou dost embrace her. She shall give to thine head an ornament of grace: a crown of glory shall she deliver thee." "My son, if thou wilt receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee; so that thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding; yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures; then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. For the Lord giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous: he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly. He keepeth the path of judgement, and preserveth the way of his saints. Then shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgement, and equity; yea, every good path. When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul; discretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee. To deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh froward things; who leave the paths of uprightness, to walk in the ways of darkness; who rejoice to do evil, and delight in the frowardness of the wicked." "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding: For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold. She is more precious than rubies; and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her. Length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand riches and honor. Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her; and happy is every one that retaineth her." "For with Thee is the fountain of life; in thee shall we see light." Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me. And ye will not come to me that ye might have life. I receive not honor from men." God's revealed will bring my standard for judging, I do much fear many members of the different churches are saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace:" I fear "the hurt of the daughter of my people" is but "slightly healed;" I fear many are daubing themselves with untempered mortar." Oh! that Christ will give them that "eye salve," that they may know him, and know themselves. In conclusion, dear brothers and sisters, let me call your prayerful attention to my new situation: According to social and family relations, I had many near and dear friends, but thus far upon religious relations, and practices, "I am alone in the midst of a crowd." But there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother; he is my comforter: in him I have great strength; however, remember me and these things fervently in your daily prayers. "None persuaded," nor could persuade me to do this thing; but the great head and teacher did long since convict and convince me that I could do his holy will to join the church of the "Brethren." He used special providences to lead, guide and direct me into his will and truth; and to him I ascribe glory and honor; and as to any new crosses, trials and temptations which may arise in my pathway, I commit them into his hands, for "as thy days are, so shall thy strength be." Should vain and proud people ever look scornfully upon me for my plainliness, I shall take comfort in remembering how our lowly Savior was treated by this class. Your sister in Christ.

Church News.

OCTOBER 6th, 1874.

Dear Pilgrim:—

I have a little church news for your paper:

On the fourth Saturday and Sunday in August, brother Ball and myself went to Marion county, West Virginia. Brother Ball is a citizen of Barbour county, and I am a citizen of Taylor county, a distance of fifteen or twenty miles. We preached three sermons, and it seems the people were starving for the want of spiritual food. So we went to our homes, but there was a request for me to come back and preach the funerals of three little children of John Sanders. So I gave them an appointment on the first Saturday and Sunday in October, and brother Chambers E. Glenn and myself went down and preached four sermons during our meeting. We, indeed, had a glorious time, and some good was accomplished, from the fact that there were five persons came out for baptism. Four of them were baptized in the babbling waters of the Tiger Valley river, in the presence of about three hundred people, who looked on with interest.

This baptism occurred in a part of the country where the Brethren hitherto never preached, and where they never had seen any of our ministers administer the ordinance of baptism. After I baptized the first applicant, he thanked God for what had been done to-day. A member of the M. E. Church says: "There is a conversion, and it is nothing but Methodistism, but it is done in a closer form." But I think there was something more than Methodistism—too much water for dry land Baptist.

Now, brethren, I think if the church would send her ministers out in the field more than she does, there is no doubt but a great deal of good could be accomplished, and many poor souls would be brought to light. Paul says: "How can they hear without a preacher, and how can they preach except they be sent?" Perhaps some of the brethren would like to know where this place is? It is at Nuzum Mills, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Brethren, this is a new place, and those brethren who travel this road, try and stop off and preach for those few lambs of the flock.

Yours, in Christian love,

Z. ANNON.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

I read your paper and notice a great deal of interesting news and also that there is still an invitation for more, especially church news. I will now try and give a few items for publication. I left my home with my husband and my little son and traveled eastward to Indiana. We first stopped at Buck creek, where we met with dear friends, relatives, and members. We were at two meetings in Pyrmount, had a season of pleasure there, then went to Henpeck and met my brother in the flesh in his lonely condition, had buried his wife, and at present had a very sick child. There was weeping instead of rejoicing. We then went on to Young America, stopped with my brothers and my sister that is a lonely widow with three children. Then we went to the upper Deer Creek Church where there was a committee sent to settle difficulty. I saw so many friendly faces there. Here I want to say a few words. I wished that the whole world could have been there to see and hear what I did. The brethren prayed and admonished so earnestly that the will of God be done, and I think their prayers were heard, so what was done there was well done. I left that place and went to Young America to night meeting, where I was much interested. Then returned to the Fairview Church and after service went to Eld. John Shivly's where my heart was made glad. I, with other brethren and sisters, spent the afternoon in singing. In the evening returned to night meeting, then went home with a dear sister. The next day, finding that I was very tired, stayed with a sister, my old mother-in-law with me. The next day went to the Middle Fork Church to a lovefeast. It was a feast of love for me. The next day went to the house of brother David Tootses and followed their little son to his last resting place. He was a promising youth and little did they think that he would be called away so soon. From here we went to Pyrmont to council meeting, where there was an election held for a speaker and deacon. The lot fell on brother David Hufford for a speaker and brother Daniel Wagoner for deacon. Meeting closed on the next day. The next day went to meeting again where I bid farewell, and then in the morning took our leave for home again, and when I arrived there found all well.

ANNA M. TROXELL.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

In PILGRIM No. 39 volume 5, page 307 there is a question asked by Eld. A. J. Correll, what the difference was between the "Far Western and Eastern brethren when Wolf and Hendricks were known as the far western brethren?" Answer. Not half as much difference as here was between the Jewish and Gentile Churches in the apostolic age, but as this may not be satisfactory, I will try to explain in Doctrine or the Law of Jesus Christ. Feet-washing, the double mode Eastern, the single, Western. The supper, the Eastern to have no supper or very little on the table at the time of feet washing. The Western, a full supper on the table at the time of feet-washing. The kiss, whether it could be consistently used twice at the Communion table, one time between the eating of the supper and the breaking of bread. In theory, we were accused of holding out too full a salvation or using those promises improperly. On the subject of the wicked one, the accusation was that we did not in preaching, define his full powers. In uniform in dress we were not of a one-ness.. This being the differences existed in 1859, or at least all that was talked over, first by a committee and then by A. M. The charges, when examined, was found to be an exaggeration, and a one-ness effected in doctrine and practice of the ordinances of the house of God. The agreement was, that if the Brethren from the East came to the Brethren of the West they should accept the order in the West, and in like manner if the Brethren in the West went to the Brethren in the East, they should accept the Eastern order, the spirit of brotherly love and forbearance one with the other was to be cultivated, and the names "Far Western and Eastern brethren" was not to be used. The conclusion of this answer is, the asking of another question. What is the difference in the practices of the Church of California and the Churches in the Atlantic States that hold with them, from the compromise of 1856? Who can tell?

GEO. WOLF. JUN.

Lathrop, Cal.

Editor of Pilgrim:—By request, and according to promise, I will, by your permission, make a little note of my trip to Iowa. According to arrangements, I, in company with brothers and sisters by the ties of nature, started on the 1st. day of Sept. for Marshall Co., Iowa. Arrived at Biscomb on the 3rd, walked seven miles to a brother of ours whom we had not seen for several years; stayed with him several days and visited friends and neighbors. Sunday the 6th went to Friend's meeting, heard an excellent discourse preached on the subject, The duties Christians owe to God, which brought the words of the Savior very forcibly to my mind, where he says, "Whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do, but do not after their works; for they say and do not."

Sept. 11, took the train at Marshalltown for Jefferson Co., arrived at Batavia same evening. Next day Saturday 12th, went to the Brethren's meeting-house where the brethren were in council making arrangements for their Communion which was to take place the 3rd of October. Here we met with dear brethren and sisters that we once knew. Formerly this was our home. We of course knew a little something of a great many of them, however seventeen years rolled round since I was permitted to see and be with them. This was a happy meeting on my part. Next day, 13th, which was Sunday, the brethren had meeting again at same place. Bro. P. Lutz spoke very instructively to the congregation, laboring hard to induce backslidden souls to return and come to the fold of God. 16th visited the city of the dead. Here we had an opportunity of seeing the names of a great many we once knew, but their bodies were out of sight. It only remained for us to think over the past, and hope for the future.

In conclusion I will say that the brethren, sisters and kind friends have our best thanks for their kindness shown us while we were permitted to be with them. No doubt, in my mind, but what it was the last time that we shall ever be permitted to see each other. Oh, then how necessary it is that we live as we will wish we had lived when we cease living, for we are sensible of the fact that die we must, and afterwards the "judgment." Let us then live the life of the righteous that our end may be as his, that we may meet with those that we loved, those who have gone through great "tribulation and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

JOSEPH HOLDER.

Hagerstown, Ind.

Dear brethren and sisters:—I have been reading the dear PILGRIM and how encouraging its pages are! I have just read a letter from Julia A. Wood, hope now a sister in the true Church of God which she so long has sought. Oh, that we all dear sisters, would search the word for ourselves and be determined, and resist every besetment and have the zeal this dear sister has. Think of her many crosses. Dear sister, continue to put your trust in God, and though Satan and all his host should try to conquer you will win the crown. I was raised among the Brethren and know nothing of the cross it is to leave dear relatives and associates to join the plain church of the Brethren, but I have conversed with those who have left their former faith, their many relations and friends who opposed them, who now are conquerors and all their great crosses have passed away. Sister you will find that in obeying the commandments and being at the communion partaking of the blessed emblems of our dear Savior is far above all the pleasures you had in the world, and if faithful you will draw many more to the church, where they can serve God in all his appointed ways. Oh, brethren and sisters, let us attend these heavenly places, and the most important of all is to be prepared to partake of them aright. Soon the time will come that our Lovefeast here will be attended with the faith and hope of the glorious time to come, when Christ himself will be present. Let us not only a few times meditate on this important season, but often examine ourselves and see whether we be in the right faith to receive these emblems acceptably in the sight of God. Let us attend the places of council more frequently for there is where we have the admonitions of which we so deeply stand in need. How very painful and discouraging it is to see so many members neglect the assembling of themselves together as commanded in God's word. It may appear our reasons are good, and more especially we sisters with little children and many cares and afflictions to battle with. We feel we can hardly go, but then when we suffer thus to attend to our duties which are temporal, why not overcome these crosses and attend the house of God? Often have I felt that I was not able to reach the church and was tempted to not go, when I would think that I bear afflictions and cares which are for the body, and why not for the more important part? Dear sisters, if we are more earnest and true, our excuse that seems good will be cast aside. We must watch and consider our duty often, or we will become careless and lukewarm.

Dear young sisters, you who have strayed from the order of the church, I entreat you come back to the vows you made before God. I know your temptations, and if you are not very watchful the tempter will make you believe there is no harm in these things. Sisters, believe me you are causing much harm; the world talks very much, your brethren and sisters' feelings are wounded, you are causing others to remain out of the church, and you have not that peace of conscience that you will have if you come to the dear old ancient order. Dear brethren and sisters, may we all live more watchful and prayerful is the desire of your sister.

SUSANNAH M. HUTCHISON.

A Letter to Sister Crouse.

Dear Sister:—With a feeble hand I will try to write you a few lines through the PILGRIM and return you my grateful thanks for sending me the PILGRIM to read in my day of sickness and sorrow. Dear sister, your visit to Boteourt has been a great pleasure to me. When I am able to read, what comfort it is to me to think and know you were mindful of me.

Dear sister, how long must we give? Till the gospel is preached in all nations, and every soul under heaven has heard the glad tidings of salvation; till every important field has its evangelical minister; till every community of tolerable magnitude has its church and stated worship, its Sabbath and its sanctuary privileges; till the fires of sin are everywhere extinguished and the light of holiness is everywhere kindled; till every idol is abolished and every dweller on earth is made a worshipper of the living God; till every father becomes a high priest in his household offering, the daily sacrifice of prayer and praise, and every mother teaches her infant charge to lisp with their earliest prattle the name of Jesus; till human selfishness gives place to divine benevolence, and crime, war, and rumors of war cease and all men dwell together in love, and the Lord sits enthroned as a king of all the earth and every knee shall bow to his sway. This, dear sister, is the period of our enlistment.

ELIZABETH SIMMONS.

DIED.

GILBERT.—In the Solomon's Creek church, Ind., Sept. 13, '74, Joseph Gilbert, aged 61 years, 7 months and 10 ds. Also in Rock Run, Sept. 24, sister Rush, aged 70 years.

MURMURT.—In the Upper Deer Creek Church, Cass Co., Ind., Sept 12, brother John Murmurt, aged 57 years, 5 months and 17 days.

He was a member of the church over 33 years and served as deacon for about twenty years. He was the father of eight children, two of whom are gone before, and 6 are still living. Seven of them are members of the church, one of which is a deacon. He was anointed a few days before his death, and seemed fully prepared to go and receive his reward. Funeral discourse by Elder Hiel Hamilton and the writer, at the Brethren's meeting-house, to a large and attentive congregation, from Thess. 4: 13-18.

A. RINEHART.

MILLER.—In the Libertyville Church, Davis Co., Iowa, August 4, 1874, sister Hannah Miller, aged 91 years, 5 months and 22 days. She was a consistent member for many years. Her husband preceded her some years.

KINSEY.—In the same church, Aug. 6, 1874, sister Elizabeth Kinsey, aged 91 years, 6 months and 21 days. She emigrated to this State from Montgomery Co., Ohio 9 years ago last May, formerly from Maryland. Funeral occasion was improved by brother Peter Lutz.

LITERATURE.

THE MEDICAL REGISTER AND DIRECTORY, Systematically arranged by States: comprising names, post-office address, educational and professional status of more than fifty thousand physicians; with list of medical societies, colleges, hospitals and other medical institutions, with abstracts of medical laws of each State, notices of mineral springs, etc. By Samuel W. Butler, M. D Office Medical and Surgical Reporter, 115 S. 7th St., Philadelphia, Pa. Royal 8 vo. nearly 900 pages. Subscription price $6.00.

For many years the want of such a work has been seriously felt, and its value to the physicians, of our great country, of whom there are between 70,000 and 80,000, as well as to the general public, can scarcely be over estimated. Here the standing, address, and particular school of practice, of any physician may be learned in a few moments. The compiler, the late lamented Dr. Butler of Philadelphia, was engaged in the work at the time of his death, Jan. 6th 1874, and so was not permitted to see his task completed. No physician can afford to do without this work; no professional man or man of business should be without it, and it should be on the shelves of every public library in the country.

Every Saturday, that favorite eclectic weekly, finally closes its career with this week's part, and will be merged in Littell's Living Age, which will leave that periodical without a rival in its special sphere, being the only weekly of our country which places before American readers, in a cheap and convenient form, with freshness and completeness, the productions of the ablest foreign authors as contained in the periodical literature of Europe. It will complete the unexpired subscriptions of Every Saturday and its serials. The Living Age will still be published by Littell & Gay, Boston, Mass., while H. O Houghton & Co. will give their time and attention to Atlantic Monthly and their numerous valuable books.

Scribner & Co., the publishers of Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas and H. O. Houghton & Co. the publishers of Atlantic Monthly announce that after January 1st, 1875 the postage on their respective magazines will be prepaid by them.

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

—Rev. JOSEPH NEE SIMA, a converted Japanese, was recently, in Mt. Vernon Church Boston, ordained as a missionary to his native land. When about nineteen years of age Mr. Nee Sima left his home in Japan, being determined to find the land of the Bible. Meeting with a christian he was introduced to steadfast friends, who has given him a liberal education, and, having received the pardon of his emperor for leaving his country without permission, he now returns as a missionary.

New Religious Teacher in India.

The Rev. John Buckley, of Cuttack, says the Friend of India, gives an account of a new religious teacher who is at the head of a very extensive religious movement in the Goorjats. His disciples already number many thousands, and are composed of nearly every caste. He is called the Dhulee Babajee, literally the Father of Dust; probably for the reason that he always sleeps on the bare ground. He never sleeps two nights in one place, and is constantly on the move amongst his followers. Babajee is very abstemious, has but one meal a day, drinks only water or milk, and never indulges in narcotics. He denounces idolatry, caste, the Brahmins and the use of spirituous liquors. He inculcates the worship of the Creator and Preserver of the world, and the practice of devotion and prayer to God, truth, charity and chastity. Whole villages have adopted him as their teacher, and have given up idolatry as far as worshipping the village idols is concerned. Mr. Buckley found him to be a man of perhaps sixty years of age, tall and thin, with an intelligent and benevolent countenance. His dress was of the most primitive character, composed of a strip of a tree called Kumbee. "He was very shy when he first saw us, but when invited sat down and listened very patiently to what I had to say. He admitted that he was a sinner and needed a Savior." His disciples have a number of hymns, composed by themselves, which they sung with great earnestness. The hymns are in praise of the indescribable God, and contain ideas which must have been derived from Christian books, with others that savor of Hindooism. On the return journey the same man came on board the missionaries' boat, and said that his teacher had expressed his approval of their tracts, and his desire that all should read them, hence he had come for a supply. A number of the teacher's followers have forsaken their homes and lead a vagrant life. On the other hand, there are thousands who retain their position as before, save that in some villages the Brahmins are exciting persecution against them, and denouncing them as outcasts.

Historical Charts of Baptism.

A complete key to the history of Trine, and the Origin of Single Immersion. The most interesting reliable and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the Birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22x28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting at a single glance the impossibility of single immersion ever having been the Apostolic method. Single copy, $0.50. Four copies, $1 00. Sent post-paid. Address

Remington Sewing Machine.

AWARDED

THE "MEDAL FOR PROGRESS,"

AT VIENNA, 1873.

THE HIGHEST ORDER OF "MEDAL" AWARDED AT THE EXPOSITION.

NO SEWING MACHINE RECEIVED A HIGHER PRIZE.

A FEW GOOD REASONS:

1. A new invention thoroughly tested and secured by Letters Patent.
2. Makes a perfect LOCK STITCH alike on both sides, on all kinds of goods.
3. Runs Light, Smooth, Noiseless and rapid—the best combination of qualities.
4. Durable—Runs for years without repairs
Will do all varieties of work and fancy stitching in a superior manner.
6. It is the most easily managed by the operator. Length of stitch may be altered while running, and machine can be threaded without passing thread through holes.
7. Design simple, ingenious, elegant, forming the stitch without the use of Cog Wheel Gears, Rotary Cams or Lever arms. Has the Automatic Drop feed, which insures uniform length of stitch at any speed. Has our new thread controller, which allows easy movement of needle-bar and prevents injury to thread.
8. CONSTRUCTION most careful and finished. It is manufactured by the most skillful and experienced mechanics, at the celebrated REMINGTON ARMORY, ILION, N. Y. Philadelphia office, 816 Chestnut Street.

POETRY.

The Happy Life.

How happy is he born and taught
That serveth not another's will,
Whose armor is his honest thought,
And simple truth his utmost skill!

Whose passions not his masters are,
Whose soul is still prepared for death,
Untied unto the worldly care,
Of public fame or private breath.

Who envies none that chance doth raise,
Or vice who never understood
How deepest wounds are given by praise,
Nor rules of state, but rules of good.

Who hath his life from rumors freed,
Whose conscience is his strong retreat;
Whose state can neither flatters feed
Nor ruin make oppression great.

Who God doth late and early pray
More of his grace and gifts to lend;
And entertains the harmless day
With a religious book or friend.

This man is freed from servile bands
Of hope to rise or fear to fall;
Lord of himself, though not of lands;
And having nothing, yet hath all.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

To-day Thou Shalt be With Me in Paradise.

In reading Bro. J. B. Lair's article in PILGRIM, No. 38 my attention was called to the above quotation, which nine times out of ten, by public speakers especially, is quoted wrong. Bro. Lair's article contains the same error,—an oversight no doubt. It is almost invariably quoted thus: "To-day thou shalt be with me in paradise." I have heard ministers—especially pedo-baptists—earnestly contend that it reads so and nothing short of the book itself would convince them of their error. But says one what is the difference? There is so much difference that when taken in a certain way—and there is some ground to so take it—there is no promise there to the thief! What! no promise? If that is shown then down comes the strong pillar of no-baptism-salvationists. Jesus says, "I say unto thee, this day shalt thou be with me in paradise." That looks like a promise. Now read it thus, "I say unto thee this day, shalt thou be with me in paradise.' Denoting a question asked. In surprise the Savior would ask by way of answering the thiefs' request "Shalt thou be with me in paradise?" And to-day I ask this. The intelligent reader will see the only difference is, the punctuation mark is placed in the first instance after "thee," in the next after "day," and the last part of the sentence emphasized. We remark here that the placing of those marks was done according to the understanding of the translators to suit the English language. Is there not as much ground to look at that sentence of the Savior's language in the sense of a reproof or question as to understand Paul to be reproving the Corinthians when he says: "If then ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge who are least esteemed in the Church. I speak to your shame." &c. Some look upon the words of Paul as being a command, many as reproving them. Judge ye what is meant. So likewise in this other. If it read "To-day thou shalt be with me in paradise," it would admit of no other inference but a positive promise. But take it as it stands, and it admits of an agreement against a promise given. When the strong champions of salvation without baptism turn to the strong hold as they invariably will, I turn their own weapons upon them and they will say, "I never thought that passage would admit of such a construction." And I say the construction is more plausible than that water sprinkled upon a person means "buried in baptism!"

Some may object to the above rendering as being fatal to at least one argument to prove an "intermediate state," and the "soul-sleeper" be elated with the argument as suitable to his doctrine. Let that be as it may it is enough for me to know, they that have done good shall come forth unto eternal life, and the wicked unto damnation. If this takes place at death or ten thousand years after, it will detract nothing from the glory of the saints, and to the wicked it will be soon enough in any event.

The Abuse of Prayer.

When we heard for the first time of a fourth of July dance being opened by prayer, we thought, what abuse of prayer!

We do not know who the divine was, nor what society he belonged to, but it is evident that he was a representative of popular modern religion, one of those that stands praying at a revival for "Christ to come down in their midst," or "to send an angel in their midst," or no doubt he would say that he is ready to die to-day, or to-night and go to Jesus, for he knows that he will go there, "he feels it in his heart."

Such assertions may all do to excite, but we will see whether they are strictly in accordance with the given rules of prayer. The apostles says "ask not amiss," "ask in faith believing that ye will recieve that for which ye ask.

What! does any man believe that Christ will descend in person to be in their midst? They have no reason to believe so? Then they are asking amiss, and who would think that God would hear a petition put up in behalf of such nefarious proceedings as a public dance. What folly! What mockery!

Let us now see whether they really desire what they ask for, when they ask for Jesus to come in their presence.

God says "no man shall see my face and live." Ex. 33: 20.

These were the words that God spake to Moses when he desired to see all the glory of God. The Lord further said, "Behold there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock, and it shall come to pass while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock; and will cover thee with my hand while I pass by.

And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts; but my face shall not be seen." Ex. 33: 21—23. Here Moses only saw the back parts of the Lord. Note what effect that had on the skin of his face: "behold the skin of his face shown and they were afraid to come nigh to him." (verse 30.) The sight of the back parts of the Lord so affected the face of Moses that it shown and the people feared him, and he had to vail his face while he talked with them, but now people want to talk with God face to face. John says "no man hath seen God at any time." John 1: 18. But people want to see him now, so they pray, but that only shows their vanity, shows that they know not what they do, for if Peter John and James could not behold the glory of Moses and Elias on the mount, and the Revelator fell as dead when he saw the "first and the last," how could poor sinful mortals stand before him, from before whose face the heavens and earth will flee away.

What folly! what mockery! Is it not blaspheming to ask God to assist in that, that he hates, for he says "he cannot endure sin with the least degree of allowance." Oh! wretched man that thou art, to so heedlessly abuse the very means whereby you should be saved. I fear greatly that your prayer will be changed, and you will cry for the rocks and hills to fall on you to hide you from the face of him that sits upon the throne for who can withstand him.

J. B. LAIR.

Brotherly Love.

In reflecting upon the subject of brotherly love we were made to think what a strong command is given to his followers that they should love one another with the love that was in our dear Savior while here in the flesh. Oh, to see the coldness that is shown sometimes by one brother toward the other, or one sister toward the other. I think sometimes, is it possible that we who covenanted with the dear Savior when we joined the church that we would forsake all worldly lusts and our sinful ways and live a life devoted to God, that we would live soberly, righteously, henceforth, and then come so far short as we do, sometimes, in showing that love toward each other by our actions. 1st John 2: 4. "He that saith I know him and keepeth not his commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him." (verse 5.) But whose keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected, hereby know we that we are in him. In the next verse we have, "He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is more occasion of stumbling in him." (verse 11.) But he that hateth his brother or sister, we understand, is in darkness and walketh in darkness and knoweth not whither he goeth because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.

Now dear brethren and sisters we may say that we love our brother or sister, and by our actions we may shamefully deny it before God and and man, for actions speaks louder than words in many cases. And why is it that we see so much of this coldness, the spirit of envy, jealousy and partiality manifesting itself as it does? We have come into those last perilous times when we will be lovers of ourselves more than we ought. Are we letting our light shine as we are commanded? We have not love enough to God and toward one another, for by this shall we know that we are his disciples. Oh, that we would be more careful and prayerful and so spend our short time in this world that it may be acceptable to our Heavenly Father. Let us then show that true love one toward the other. Oh, what a glorious and happy time we would then have here together and cheer each other on our way. Not so much strife and contention will be amongst us. But we will seek one another's good here and much more in eternity.

LEVI B. REPLOGLE.

—See the great billows assailing the 'small ship" with Jesus in it. Would that the disciples had faith to rebuke the winds and seas without awaking him. Would that we could always do that which it seems so desirable for them to have done.

—How we anticipate an engagement with an important personage. We prepare ourselves. We are soon to meet God. "Prepare to meet thy God."

DOES A DIVORCE ANNUL THE MARRIAGE CONTRACT, OR DOES IT NOT?

This is a question frequently asked and sometimes not answered. I feel like making a few remarks on the subject. I will notice what divorce is, and who gave the authority, and how far that authority goes, and lastly consider our duty at present, and close with a few general remarks.

Divorce, Webster says, means, legal dissolution of marriage; to separate as a husband and wife. I believe this is a correct definition of the word and we see that it annuls the marriage contract. I will notice the children of Israel. As they were led out from under bondage, they became hard-hearted insomuch that it was necessary for Moses, their leader, to give them a different law, of which we read in Deuteronomy 24th chapter. There we find that a man was commanded by Moses to give a bill of divorcement in case of uncleanness. Now there were different kinds of uncleanness, one lasted until eve, one for seven days, and perhaps in the case of leprosy often lasted for life. But of the uncleanness that Moses referred to, we leave the reader to judge. But while the Lord permitted this to go on, I believe he looked forward to the time when this would take an end. Moses being a prophet of the Lord, pointed to another period or age of the world, or to another character, knowing that he was not perfect neither was his law perfect; hence it could not make the comers there unto perfect. In one sense of the word, Moses was perfect as far as his mission went, but there is nothing entirely perfect while there is room for improvement. So Moses looks forward and says, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken." Deut. 18: 15. When that prophet came into the world the law of Moses ended, yet it is still our school-master to bring us to Christ, but it is not our present guide. To prove our position I will only refer to Paul to the Romans 10: 4. "For Christ in the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." One more evidence. John was the forerunner of Christ. Then he was the beginning of the Gospel, and in the 16th chapter of Luke, 16 h verse we have these words: "The law and the prophets were until John," &c. Now we have noticed what divorce means, and also that Moses gave the authority for it, and that authority has taken its end. Next we will hear the prophet that Moses said we should hearken unto. I will first notice him in the first sermon that he preached. Matt. 5. He commences by pronouncing a blessing on certain classes and so on to the 21st verse, "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time," pointing to the law which had or was about to take its end, but only to certain things in that law that was to be brought over, but changed to a great extent, then in the 31st verse he says, It hath been said whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement: but I say unto you, I the Lord of Lords and King of Kings, I have more power and authority than Moses had, and I say unto you that whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery, and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery. Here it appears that the innocent party commits adultery. In the 19th chapter of the same book it is said the Pharisees also came unto him tempting him and saying unto him, "Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause." I believe the Pharisees understood the law; and as Christ's sermon on the Mount differed from that, they could not understand it; but Christ did not answer them directly but points them to the beginning, when there was no opportunity, no desire for a man to put away his wife and marry another. But the Pharisees not being satisfied yet, they say why did Moses command to give a writing of divorcement and to put her away? He saith unto them, Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives, but from the beginning it was not so, pointing them again to the beginning when they were made male and female. In the 9th verse it reads thus, "And I say unto you, whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery, and whoso marrieth her that is put away doth commit adultery." From this quotation it would appear that a man was permitted for one cause to put away his wife and marry another, but I cannot understand the Gospel in that way. My view of the subject is, if a man puts away his wife for any other cause than fornication he commits adultery, and if he marries another he commits adultery, and I think I can sustain my position. Mark records the same circumstance in the 19th chapter and 2d verse. When the Pharisees came to him, he first pointed them to Moses, then to the beginning, next he instructs them of the oneness that should exist between a man and his wife, and in the 10 h verse it is said, "and in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter." They were not satisfied with the answer he had given. Then he answers them in short, but very explicitly: "Whosoever shall put away his wife and marry another, committeth adultery against her, and if a woman shall put away her husband and be married to another, committeth adultery. Here we see no latitude for fornication or anything else. Luke records about the same as Mark does, 16: 18. Now says one, Mark and Luke differ a little from Matthew. How shall we reconcile this? One is ready to say we will hear some learned man and see what he says. As a general thing I am opposed to that, but in this case I shall not object, providing I am allowed to choose the man and I will choose one that understood the language that Christ spake and all the customs of that day, and it is said he had much learning. We find that in the days of the apostles there was difficulties arising among the brethren, as they understood the scripture differently. Some tried to blend both law and Gospel together, but we find one Paul laboring very much in setting aside those difficulties, and he obtained his authority from the Gospel, but he makes it so plain that a boy ten years old cannot help but understand it, and he is the man we have made choice of. Now brother Paul, what do you say about this matter? If brother Paul was here in person I think he would say as he did in former times, I have given orders to the church of Galatia even so do ye. I Cor. 16. He has given orders to the church at Rome and Corinth for a woman which hath a husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth, &c. Rom. 7: 23. We find nothing in this to annul the marriage contract but death itself. Paul is not done yet. "And unto the married I command yet not I but the Lord, let not the wife depart from her husband: but if she depart let her remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife." 1 Cor. 7: 10, 11. I have failed to find any authority in the New Testament for a divorce, yet a man may put away his wife or a woman her husband for the cause of fornication, but if living under the Gospel they are not permitted in any case to marry another until the former one is dead. If living under the law, Paul would say as he did to his Roman brethren, 7 chapter, that we must become dead to the law before we can be married to Christ, making a beautiful figure, showing that we must become dead to one thing before we can be married to another.

Now we have noticed that a divorce annuls the marriage contract, but as we have no authority in the New Testament for divorce, nothing remains to annul the marriage contract but death. If we find anything else I would say, brethren change the marriage ceremony, instead of saying hold unto each other and no other until death shall separate you, say, as long as they can agree. If that will not do use the old ceremony and live it out in practice. What I have written, I have written, prove all by the word of God. S. N. WINE.

The School of Tyrannus.

And he went into the sinagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the Kingdom of God.

But when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.

And this continued by the space of two years, so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul:

So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth.

And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye?

And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus, and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

And many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds.

Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver.

So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed?—Acts xix.

From the above record of a portion of the life and experience of Paul, it is very clear that the apostles to the Gentiles was not half so fearful of schools, even of "High Schools" as many of our brethren appear to be; For it is evident that this school was an "individual enterprise" of this man Tyrannus, in which Paul taught daily during the space of some two years. This was not a primary, an elementary neither a children's school from the fact that Paul disputed with the pupils. He would not so spend two years of his precious time, disputing with children. This school, in the providence of God, formed the nucleus, around which a very numerous and powerful Church was built up. The knowledge and wisdom radiating from this school of Paul and Tyrannus among the [illegible] exerted a very marked and important reformation upon the populace in general, from the fact that it served to break down the ignorant, superstitious occult practices, designated in verse 19 as "curious arts" which will probably be understood to be "Hexares," "Braucherei," "Kinst erei," "Powwow," "Faith Doctoring," &c., &c. are still held in respect by some. —The tyrany of ignorance, is the most unrelenting of all tyrannies whatsoever. It makes ignorance blessedness, as well as the mother of piety, neither of which are true.

The discussion of the school subject appears to have one good effect, it is bringing the issue to a

A HEAD

In the last Companion—No. 41—brother Silas Thomas, in an examination of the several kinds of schools, strongly suspects that the Berlin School enterprise is intended to be a Theological Seminary, and hopes that it may not be so intended, while he is otherwise favorable to schools among the Brethren. Bro. C. H. Balsbaugh in a letter to H. R. Holsinger, writes in a way that must confirm those fears of brother Thomas.

My own notion of the matter has always been different. Taking it for granted, that the Brethren's School, "High School" if you please, was simply intended to be a school in which youthful boys and girls could acquire an education in the higher branches of learning, that the religious exercises about the school should be conducted under the order of the Brethren and generally by the Brethren, and as soon as the students have graduated they receive their diploma as graduates only; and that here the connection of school and student ceases. That graduates may be members of the church or not, as they themselves elect, and that whenever any church in which such graduates hold membership, are in want of additional ministerial aid, and they discover the other requisite qualifications, in any of those graduates to a greater degree than in those who are not such graduates, the graduate would, most likely, be called to the ministry. Where those other qualifications would be wanting, then other, and not graduates would be most likely called to the ministry, the same as heretofore. This was my own notion in regard to the school so far. Another favorable feature of this work might be the production and dissemination of a much more extensive and important Church literature.

I believe that this is as far as this school enterprise can ever be carried into practical effect and force. I do not believe that the Church will ever surrender the elective ministry. It might, some day adopt the majority, instead of the plurality rule of choosing. Indeed, the truth of the matter is, that the plurality rule is not Scriptural, if the example in the choice of Matthias is to be our guide.

Antidote to the Gloom of Old Age.

The sentiments that control an age, like those that influence individuals, usually tend to the extreme, hence it is wise to weigh them that we be not led into error.

Parents of the present age have not erred, as those may have done in the past by sternness. To the contrary, we fear they have been guilty of excessive indulgence which has engendered selfishness. They have ignored [illegible] heart—indifference to the goodness and love of a parent, except there be mingled with these a who esome discipline. We who have been many years attentive pupils in the school of Christ, and have learned the excellence of his law, the value of obedience, and the preciousness of his love, often need the rod of chastisement which, though grevious at the time, afterwards yields the peaceable fruits of righteousness. So we must not presume that kindness alone will lead our children to honor the law of their parents; a wise restraint is necessary to produce that reverence which God requires them to render unto us.

Then the literature of the day, while it very properly shows the evil of irritability, and the exacting spirit of the invalid or aged mother, yet it is so much in sympatay with the young and happy as to fail to impress upon them the claims these have upon the patient love and service of those in the vigor and joy of life.

I would arouse in the bosom of youth that nobleness which shall render grateful reverence to those whose day of usefulness has passed. The selfish heart requires no inducement to respect those from whom they are now receiving, or may hope to receive benefits.

If, as we look at the aged mother, we reflect upon the joys that have passed from her, we shall have patience with her foibles, and for her the tenderest sympathy. She has reigned queen over the hearts of husband and children, swaying a sceptre of love over loving subjects, mutually dependent for comfort and happiness. She fears no invasion upon her dominions, no rival to her throne; her head rests quietly upon her pillow, her sleep is sweet and peaceful. Hers is the higest happiness earth can bestow. Mother, rejoice in this your day of sunshine, nor permit petty annoyances to rob you of its gladness. But the time too soon comes when he who is the bond of this kingdom—the sun of her hemisphere—is torn away, goes out into the darkness of the grave. Her children, one after another, leave her to establish their own kingdoms. She is dethroned and left desolate, no longer necessary to the happiness of any. And the consciousness that she can no longer be of service, is the most insufferable ingredient in this bitter cup. We read this in the old bright ray that passes over her countenance if even a little child appeals to her for love or comfort.

Mother, would you learn the secret that will preserve you from this sad old age? You see that earth's most coveted honors pass away, its brightest and purest joys fade. Magnify your office as priestess in your household; while other influences may die, your pious example and holy instructions will live forever.

As your children increase in wisdom, by the experience and discipline of life, they will increasingly appreciate you. Your countenance will be so mingled with the pure and beautiful truths that you have instilled, that they will carry you, as an angel of light, in their memories. The more they learn of the sinfulness and unreasonableness of the world, the more sacred you will become and your prayers more necessary unto them. You will never cease to be of service so long as you can intercede at a throne of grace in their behalf.

We have recently seen this illustrated. A mother had always endeavored to impress her children with a sense of the Divine presence—conversing with them of Jesus, and elevating their youthful minds by frequently leading them in prayer unto him. Herson, the eldest, thus formed the habit of seeking the aid of his mother's prayers in all of his undertakings.; he sought them for success in his studies; when he left home to attend college, the last act was to kneel with her in prayer, while she commended him to the watch care of her Heavenly Father. While there, when approaching an examination, he would write, "It is to the blessing of God that I am indebted for my success thus far, and not to any superior talents; remember me in your prayers," (specifying the day). After engaging in his profession, his faith continued in the efficacy of his mother's prayers. In a few years he married, and she began to feel I may soon be no longer necessary to the happiness of my loved children. But, in the midst of pressing and pleasant duties, he returns to his home and seeks his mother, to whom he whispers, "Remember me to-morrow morning, an important work will then demand my best efforts." Ah! she felt, my son still desires my prayers, I can be of service to him! Her heart was cheered, and she said, "While all else decreases, this increases.

Church News.

Dear Pilgrim: —I have read a few copies of your valuable Journal handed me by one of the brethren, and I have come to the conclusion to take it at once for I like it very much on account of its good sound principles, and of the many pleasant letters that it contains from the brethren throughout the country. This kind of news seems to bring the church into closer communion, and therefore every family throughout the Brotherhood should take and read it.

I belong to the congregation known as the Beech Grove. Our meetings are very largely attended. Several were added to our number during the summer and we are expecting more before long. We had a very able discourse delivered by brother E. L. Yoder last Sabbath. He took his text from Luke 15: 9, "Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail they may receive you into everlasting habitations. This was very ably discussed by the Bro. He spoke very much in favor of the foreign mission, and he gave us to understand that we should so use the mammon of unrighteousness or the unsatisfying riches of this world that we may secure friends in God and Christ, and in sinners saved and blessed by our instrumentality.

Query.

Will some brother give an explanation of the following scripture:

Thes. 4: 23. "I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." From this I infer that the man is composed of three distinct parts, spirit, soul, and body. We also read, Heb. 4: 12, "The word of God is sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of soul, and spirit and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." What is the difference between the soul and spirit? J. R. MILLER.

—Eld. Samuel Murray's address will hereafter be Wabash, Wabash Co., Ind., until otherwise informed.

—Our Almanac is now being published and will soon be ready for distribution. Orders can be sent in at any time—will sell them by single copy, dozen or hundred. See terms on another page. Those desiring to sell for us can pay for them when sold if done in a reasonable length of time, but should not order more than can be disposed of.

—G. W. Moter of Donáldson, Ind. says: We, the brethren and sisters of the Union district, held a choice for one minister and two deacons. Jacob Appleman was chosen for speaker and David Miller and Aaron Kreghbaum for deacons. Our Communion was held on the 16th of Oct.—had preaching twice a day until Sunday evening. The ministry was well represented and five precious souls were added to the church. We had an interesting meeting and feel that it was good to be there.

—Sister Nancy Crouse says, one of our respectable citizens of Fayetteville namely, Mr. James Phillips, a well knuwa merchant of said place, met with a very serious loss on last Monday evening caused by the burning of his new dwelling house which was just completed, and well furnished with house-hold and kitchen furniture, which was nearly all consumed. He says his loss is $2000. I can truly sympathize with Mr. Philips, as he has been a very hard working man and is getting old and frail and not able to work much, and has a large family.

—Bro. J. H. Moore of Urbana, Ill., says: "Our little church is in peace and harmony. I baptized one young sister the second Lord's day of this month. I have just arrived at home from our District Meeting, which was held in Bond Co., Ill. I believe it to have been the most interesting meeting I ever attended. I heard one brother say that he would not take $50 dollars for what he heard on one subject at this meeting. Southern Ills is wide-awake in the good cause, steadily laboring to get closer, and closer to the New Testament doctrine. I learned that there were three baptized at this meeting."

—Eld. A. J. Correll says: Why is it that we hear so much about the "old order" in speaking about the government of the church? Have the brethren more than one order? Some 35 years ago I heard quite old brethren say that the church was governed by the word of God, according to his commands. Has the church any other order now? If not why all this cry about, "old order," "old brethren," "young brethren" and "fast brethren?" Now brethren, let us all govern ourselves by the gospel and we will get along much better and have less to say about others.

—J. R. Ulery of Boulder Co., Col. says: I received two Nos. of the PILGRIM and read them with much pleasure. They were the first I had read and was much pleased with them. I will give you some idea of our prosperity here in Boulder Co. Two years ago I came into this neighborhood and there was but one of the faith and that was myself. Since then I have been corresponding and we occasionly add one to our number. One year ago brother A. Hutchison of W. Va. was with us for a short time and make many warm friends for the brotherhood, and this summer, last of August, we had brother J. S. Flory with us, from South Platte Col. We had four sermons and four additions to the church. We now number 14 or 15. We expect to have brother Flory to preach for us for the coming year. We still have room for more brethren that desire cheap homes and a healthy country. Any person wishing information, address me at Pella, Boulder Co., Col.,

Earthquakes aad Famine in Turkey.

The Rev. Herman N. Barnum, D. D., of Harpoot, Eastern Turkey, in acknowledgeing the receipt of money forwarded to him through the N. Y. Observer for the relief of sufferers by the earthquake last spring, gives a sad account of the great suffering caused by these and other calamities in Eastern and Western Turkey.

HARPOOT, TURKEY, September, 11 1884.

Messrs. Editors: The thirty-eight dollars reported in the Observer for the sofferers by the earthquake in this region have been received. There have been sent to us from Constantinople and other missionary stations and from America, something over $300. Mr. Allen and I went last Friday to the village of Haboosi, which was the severest sufferer. We had previously procured a list of the most needy persons, both Protestant and American, prepared by the pastor and some of the more intelligent people, with some approximate estimates of their comparative needs. This we verified as well as we could on the evening of our arrival. The next morning to avoid a crowd, without any notice of our errand, we went from house to house, giving with our own hands the sum which we had decided upon, varying in amount from fifty cents to ten dollars. We went to eighty-five houses, of which fifty-five were American, and the rest Protestant. The whole amount thus distributed in this village was a little over $200.

I doubt whether you ever saw such wretchedness and desolation equal to what we saw. The houses still lie mostly in ruins. Here and there the earth from the old mud walls has been reconverted into sun dried bricks, and the debris has been cleared off to give space to build one or two rooms for the winter. Twenty were killed by the falling houses, and twenty have since died from the effects of the exposure of being out of doors day and night. A good many are still sick. Mr. Allen went on about fifteen miles further, to the village of Larukamush, which was destroyed in the winter, where he distributed $60 in the same way as at Haboosi. To another village we have given $20. Other pressing calls for aid are reaching us. We shall perhaps, give something to a Turkish village which was almost destroyed at the same time as Haboosi. —N. Y. Observer.

THE END.

This week we give what we hope to be our two last articles on the subject of education and schools for a while at least. There are other papers on the subject but as no new arguments have been produced that would have any considerable bearing on either side, we hope the writers will agree with us that there has been enough said for the present on the subject. Those who have the kindness to assist us by writing for our columns will please turn their minds in another direction and give us something that will tend more directly to the spiritual good of our readers. What has been written or published on the subject has been before our readers and if the arguments are fairly weighed we fear not the result. Truth is mighty and must prevail.

A Visit.

On Friday evening previous to our Communion Meeting we had the pleasure of entertaining our brethren Grabill Myers, Wm. Howe, S. J. Swigart, John M. Mohler, and B. Crownover. The evening was pleasantly, and we hope, profitably spent in conversing on the various religious topics that most interest us as followers of Christ and heirs of the Kingdom. For us to know that we have the good wishes of the brethren and that they are interested in our work is no small satisfaction. Our duties are onerous and to perform them acceptably we not only need the good wishes but the aid and prayers of the church. Although we have set our compass to the star of God's word and are laboring with zeal to run the ship in the right direction, yet we are beset with many adverse winds and not unfrequently found windward. A friendly visit or letter greatly assists us in regaining the course and withstanding the pressure brought to bear against us.

Jesus the Physician.

Some souls in coming to Christ become disheartened because they do not find immediate peace or joy. This should not be. It is really not peace or joy that you should seek after. You are sick. Your soul is dangerously affected with the dread malady of sin, and your desire should therefore be to be cured. When your soul is cured by Christ, then it is that peace and joy will follow as a result. Your soul is affected with a painful tumor and I tell you, friend, that you need not expect much comfort until it is out out. While the remedy is effecting the cure, the sore may be the more painful, and you should not therefore become discouraged. Let Christ apply the remedy, just where he pleases, until your soul is cured and then all will be well. Some persons are too impatient. Because they do not at once feel happy, or because they have a little heart-aching, they are disposed to become despondent. There is no real cause for a feeling of this kind. Be sure that you have left all to follow Jesus; be sure that you are in the position of a disciple, and that you are true and devoted to your Master, that you desire to do his will, and then in due time you will experience the fulfilment of the glorious promise, "My peace I give unto you." In view of this peace and the joy that will be realized, should it not serve as an incentive to go to the great Physician, apply his remedy and be healed? May every sin-sick soul feel that he is diseased, and speedily apply to the Physician of souls and be made whole. J. B. B.

The James Creek Meeting.

On Saturday morning, in order that we might all enjoy the benefits of our Communion season at the James Creek Church, we closed our office, and repaired to the place of meeting, ourself and family in the buggy, while the others took advantage of the Broad Top accommodation being dropped off, by special arrangement, at the church crossing.

Surrounding circumstances and the weather were all that could be desired, and at the appointed time the services were opened with the following ministers present: Grabill Myers, Wm. Howe, James R. Lane, S. J. Swigart, John M. Mohler and J. S. Snowberger. Not getting there in time we had not the pleasure of hearing the opening of the services but were told that Bro. Howe preached a very interesting sermon, followed by S. J. Swigart, the latter part of which we heard and that too, with profit, that being the burden of the subject. After the first services were over, two were added to the Church by holy baptism.

In the evening our ministerial force was increased by the arrival of H. R. Holsinger. The evening services were unusually largely attended and interesting, and we enjoyed one of our most happy seasons of participating in the ordinances of the Lord's house, and we have no doubt but what many others were similarly impressed.

On Sunday morning we had an interesting discourse by J. R. Lane on the necessity of setting before the people "all the words of this life." He was followed by some appropriate remarks from John M. Mohler and concluded by H. R. Holsinger. In the evening we again assembled for preaching and were profitably entertained by H. R. Holsinger who labored for profit and with acceptance.

Thus ended one of those special seasons of grace which are to the world-weary pilgrim as is the inviting oasis, in mid-desert, to the thirsty and hungry traveller as he traverses the burning sands, and many were our reflections while seated around the table of the Lord. Not only were we made to remember the sufferings and death of our blessed Redeemer, but there were also brought to our remembrance, a number who, on former occasions occupied seats among us. They are with us no more; the once familiar voices that added to our life-pleasures are now silenced in death and our only consolation is the hope of the resurrection. This hope is doubly revived as we surround the sacred boards and participate in the emblems of His broken body and shed blood.

Notwithstanding we are sometimes made to mourn the departure of loved ones, yet when we see their places occupied by those who a year ago were not of us, we still have great reason to be encouraged and thank God. Such seasons should have a happy effect upon the Church, and nerve us to a greater activity in the cause of Christ which we hope they have.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

How to be Happy.

How pleasant it is at the end of the day,
No follies to have to repent,
But reflect on the past and be able to say,
That my time has been properly spent.

When I've done all my business with patience and care,
Been good and obliging and kind,
I'll lie on my pillow and sleep away there,
With a happy and peaceable mind.

But, instead of all this, if it must be confessed
That I naughty and idle have been,
I'll lie down as usual and go to my rest,
But feel discontented within.

Then since I dislike all the trouble I've had,
In future I'll try to prevent it;
I never am naughty without being sad,
Or good without being contented.

What One Little Hand Can Do.

From the memoried stories of childhood, I recall one to-night, of a little girl who saved her lowland country from the overwhelming sea. It was in holland, where, all along the seaward boundaries, are dykes or levees, broad and strong, built as barriers against the ocean tides. Public watchmen are employed to pace to and fro by day and night for the purpose of guarding these embankments, and they will walk their responsible rounds with ceaseless vigilance, meeting each other at appointed posts and moments of duty, with the strictest promptness to detect and report in an instant, any breaks in the banks where the treacherous ocean might intrude.

The quiet home of the people for leagues across the wide inlands, all below the high tide level of the sea, are protected by the guardance of the soldierly sentinels, who march and watch along the stronghold that stands against the waves. Should a tiny stream at any point be found creeping across the levee, the alarm is given at once, and strong arms with ample material are there to repair the breach. For even a small stream of counted drops, if unseen and unhindered at first, is sufficiently self-magnifying to grow and sweep before it the solid ground and rock of the levee to its very foundation, and, in an hour to flood all Holland with the salt billows of the deep.

It happened one summer morning, while the tide was rising, that the little daughter of one of the sentinels who resided on the meadow near the dyke, was out alone gathering flowers along the inner slope of the bank. In her walk she detected a great sea wave flinging its spray across the dyke, and the drops setting and cutting a tiny channel across toward the meadows. No sentinel was near. The bellowing of the waves along the shore made it impossible for her child-voice to be heard, were she to call an alarm. If she ran to meet or overtake a plodding sentinel, the little stream would become a mighty river, and her dear homeland be all submerged. With the awful threateenings before her, she tossed aside her flowers, and sprang, child heroine that she was, to the spot, and with her own little dimpled hand that had gathered the daisies in the grass, she closed the breach, and resolutely held the mighty sea at bay, rising not from her place, nor lifting that hand until the regular beat of the sentinel brought him around to her aid. So the tender hand of a child, searching playfully for flowers, saved Holland from a deluge of death, while the strong men appointed for that specific work were absent in the machineried rounds of duty, unprepared to meet the insinuating dangers that creep in between the most exact methods of men.

How much a little hand can do! Dear young reader, how do you use your hand? Has it ever been raised in anger toward a brother, or sister, or playmate? What a wonderful thing is the hand—even the tender hand of a child! Now, from this hour, for all time to come, let your hand be always used to help, and never to hurt others. In school days, let your hand be ready to assist any one in need; let its pressure be warm and kind too all, as your words are loving and gentle to all.

Every one who reads these lines, however young or unknown, has a hand as beautifully made, as ready, as helping as the little Holland girl, who held the mighty ocean off from the fatherland.

Is there not a lesson about the power of little things—good and bad—here for our readers?—Sel.

Boasting.

Ann Strong was a sad little boaster. Though she meant to speak the truth, she was so vain and thoughtless that no one would believe her.

She always wanted a long lesson. She would say, "I can learn it all; it is not too hard for me;" though when her class was called out to be examined, she was often sent back to her seat to study.

If anything was to be done at home or at school, Ann would say, "I know how, please let me do it:" even if it was a thing she could not do at all.

Ann's teacher wished some one to point to the name of the cities on a large map, so that all the girls in the class might know where to find them.

"Oh, let me do it," said Ann; "I know how as well as can be."

"Yes you may do it," said Miss Eaton; but Ann could not point to a single name that her teacher called.

"You are like a silly little pigeon I used to hear about when I was a little girl," said her teacher.

A bright-eyed little girl, rising her right hand, said, "Oh, please tell us all about the pigeon."

"The story," replied Miss Eaton, "is that when the pigeon first came into the world, all the other birds came and offered to show her how to build a nest.

"The cat-bird showed her its nest, all made of sticks and bark; and the sparrows showed her theirs, which were woven with moss and hair. But the pigeon, walking about in a very vain way, and turning her head from side to side, said: 'I know how; I know how to build my nest as well as the best of you?'

"Then the black-bird showed his nest, which was fastened to some reeds, and swung over the water; and the turtle-dove said hers was the easier to build than ah, for it was quite flat, and made only of sticks laid together. But the pigeon turned her pretty head as before, and said 'I know how "

"At last the birds left her. Then the pigeon found that she did not know how at all; and she went without a nest until man took pity on her, and built a pigeon house and put some hay into it.

"Now, children, though the story of the pigeon is only a fable, and not true, yet you may learn a very useful lesson.

"Little boys and girls who are vain boasters, are laughed at by others, and deceive themselves. Like the silly pigeon, they say: 'I know how!' but they often find to their sorrow, when it is too late, that they do not."

Remember, my dear children, that when you once learn to do anything well you will not need to boast of it.

God Sees You.

Many children have read the fairy tales of the Danish writer, Hans Christian Andebsen. A pleasant story of his childhood, as told in a sketch of his life.

Little Hans was one day with his mother and some other poor neighbors, gleaning in the field of a man who was said to be very harsh and cruel. They saw him coming, and all started to run away. But Hans' clumsy wooden shoes came off; the stubbles, or short stumps of the grain stalks which had been left by the reapers, hurt his tender feet, so that he could not keep up with the others; and he found he must be caught. The rough owner of the field was very near, and he could now almost reach him with his heavy whip; when Hans, whose hopeless case now suddenly filled him with new courage, stopped and turned, and, looked into the man's face, and said: "How dare you strike me, when God sees you?"

The anger of his pursuer was subdued at once. Instead of striking the boy, he gently stroked his cheeks, asked his name, and gave him some money. The truth, of which little Hans had reminded him when about to do a mean and cruel act, seemed to make him ashamed of it at once, and to cause him to speak and act kindly.

How many wicked words and acts children as well as grown people might be kept from saying and doing, if they could at the right time be reminded so that man was, of the presence of God, When you rise in the morning; through all hours of the day, when you go to rest at night; in the darkness when you are fast asleep; when you are faithful in duty, when you are careless; when you are kind and loving, and when you are unkind and selfish and sinful,—always, everywhere, God sees you. When you are tempted to speak harshly to your little brother or sister, or undutifully to your parents; when you are tempted to lie, cheat, or steal, to speak a profane or naughty word—ask yourself, "How dare I do this wicked thing, when God can see me?"—Mother's Magazine.

How Mollie Helped Mamma.—There was once a bright, spirited little girl, whose hard-working father was taken suddenly away from his little family, leaving the whole burden of their support on the mother. A kind lady questioned this child, but six years old, as to how they got along.

"Oh," said little Mollie, mother and I do all the work now, and we do it firstrate."

"But what can you do to help, with such little hands as those?" asked the lady.

Mollie held up her plump little hands, and turning them over and over again, said,—

"Oh, I can do lots and lots! I set the table, and wash the dishes, and shake up the cradle pillow, and blow the whistle for the baby. Sometimes mamma gets tired washing, and she cries. Then I go and lift baby out of the cradle—he's awful heavy—and hold him right up before mamma. Then she always laughs and takes him, and that rests her, you see."

Our Trip to Anderson County.

Dear Pilgrim:—

Thinking a little church news would be interesting to some of your numerous readers, I proceed to give you an account of our visit to the Cedar Creek arm of the church. Myself and wife and two daughters left our home on Friday the 9th inst., and went as far as Bro. Miller's in Coffey county. Next morning, 10th, we started in company with brother Miller's family for brother Christopher Rodabaugh's, where arrangements had been made for a Communion, in Anderson county; arrived there in time for dinner, had preaching about three o'clock p. m., and in the evening attended to the ordinances of the house of the Lord, and such order on the part of spectators and members, I think it has never been my lot to witness on such occasions. The spectators appeared to be all eyes and ears and no mouths. To us it was a season of great refreshing, meeting and commingling with brethren and sisters that we had never seen before. We met with brethren there from eight counties besides our own. Six precious souls were added to the church by baptism. An election was held for one speaker and one deacon. The lot fell upon brother Emanuel Miller for speaker and brother Levi Lilly for deacon. On Sunday evening we returned back to brother Miller's and on Monday we arrived at home, finding all things well, for which we feel to give God our undivided praise. I will yet say that the Cedar Creek arm of the church was organized two years ago with nine members, and eight having moved away, it now numbers forty-five. W. M. Wise.

The Mexico Meeting.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

Pursuant to arrangment, on the 3rd inst. people began to gather at an early hour, so by time for meeting to commence the house was full to overflowing and in consequence thereof a part of the crowd retired to the grove, where they were addressed by a part of the speakers, there being quite a number on the ground, viz: Elders Daniel Miller of Ohio, Hiel Hamilton, Jacob Metzger, Isaac Billhimer, David Brechtelhimer, and many younger speakers. After some able discourses the meeting was adjourned for dinner after which the crowd retired to the river, when there were two persons added to the faith by being immersed in the liquid stream after the manner that Christ and the apostles practiced.

In due time in the evening the members assembled again in order to perform the sacred ordinances as we understand them. The crowd being very large and such a great number of members present that it rendered it very difficult to perform some of the ordinances expeditiously. The approximate number of members that communed was 500, and some we understand were crowded out from the tables entirely. Considering the crowd, the conduct was ordinarily good. Next morning after refreshment it was announced that there were still some others that were willing to come out on the Lord's side, when the crowd again resorted to the river bank when two more persons were buried in baptism, and there are still others, we have reason to believe are counting the cost. We were told by a blind man on the road home from the meeting that had he been better known he would have been baptized that day. We told him that we thought he was well enough known, that he could be received into the church if he would comply with the necessary requirements. He remained with us a few days and went his way. To-day we hear that he was baptized in an adjoining church. He had been raised a Catholic, and was a member of the Baptist Church at the time he came to our church.

But to return to the subject, after baptism the congregation was addressed at two different places by the brethren, from the last chapter of Revelation. The meeting was then closed by prayer offered by Elder D. Miller, in such heart-felt language that will not soon be forgotten, by some at least. The crowd then separated never to meet just as it had met, but notwithstanding many that met there will never meet again in this world, they felt that it was good to be there. May the impressions made then and there be long and lasting, and the cause of much good is our prayer.

Brother Brumbaugh:—

Sometimes I read in your good paper that there is some opposition to acquiring an education. Religion is good, and is often perverted in its use, so is education good and useful in its place, and that too, is often perverted in its application. But it does seem to me it is with that as many other useful things, "use, but not abuse," or misapply. In the parable of the talents, "And unto one he gave five talents, to another ten, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability," I think where a person is a true and faithful child of God, a good education may probably cultivate, extend and widen his several ability to such a degree that his "five talents may produce the rich and commendable "ten." I do verily believe where a person has a talent for education, and is then led by the true spirit, such a person enjoys multiplied happiness and duties, "for unto whom much is given, much will be required." Then as religion is perverted as well as education, let us have good education, as well as strive to obtain good religion I hope I shall not offend any one by my expressions against the opposition. Our different views have been requested upon this subject, and I accordingly write as I honestly feel. Please promptly inform me of anything wrong I may unwittingly say. "Let the righteous smite me it shall be a kindness: and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil which shall not break my head." 'Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble. Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." 'Wherefore comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do. And we beseech you brethren, to know them which labor among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you; and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake. And be at peace among yourselves. Now we exhort you, brethren, warn them that are unruly, comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak, be patient toward all men." I am so much pleased when I see that a brother or sister is thought to be in fault, that when corrected in love for the truth, that he or she with the spirit of love and forbearance, resisteth not the reproof. "For what glory is it, if when ye be buffetted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God"

I am so glad the Brethren are arranging to have a High School. It has been said that "there is nothing in a name, a rose will smell as sweet called by any other name." It is not pride which prompts me to be glad for the name "High" for the school, but that it is significant of a place to gain good, necessary and useful knowledge for cultivating the mind, which can act in blessed harmony with a properly prepared heart—the temple of Christ. We sin in all we do when relying upon our own understanding; but God is the fountain of life; in thy light shall we see light. While I feel the insignificance of my opinion in this momentous and agitated matter; yet it is my opinion much good will accrue from this thing (a high school) in a spiritual as well as an educational view. Just such schools are needed now, which will educate the heart, mind and body. From what I have read and know of the Brethren, it is my candid opinion that if they had a number of this kind of High Schools in different sections of the country, more domestic, social, physical, moral, mental and spiritual good would be infused and disseminated throughout our demoralized land. My faith in it is great; and in all things, my "eye is single to the glory of God" and not of man. Should Providence open a way for the location and building of these schools, I do wish them God speed. The spirit "divideth to every man severally as he will." As the spirit divideth severally, I am of the opinion that to some a spirit for education is given, directed and sustained that "the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places" may be freely and plainly communicated by him who teaches, and is taught in the Word. "Be apt to teach." "Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given us, whether prophesy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth on teaching; or he that exhorteth on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth with diligence, he that sheweth mercy with cheerfulness."

If you can do so conveniently, please read the book, "Dick's (I do not know his given name) Philosophy of a Future State." I would like to know from you if his views of education, connected with, and in view of a future state, are purely scriptural? I read it fifteen months ago, and then I considered his work to be logical, profound in thought, and scriptural in tone. If practicable, I wish you would read and express your views. His views do so strongly justify education, as preparing us for an advanced state of happiness in Heaven. Such are Dick's views: now let us examine Scripture upon the subject of education. In the first place, here is our Savior; although His knowledge was infinite, and his nature divine, nevertheless in the 16th and 17th verses of the 4th chapter of St. Luke, it reads, "And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up; and as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up to read," &c. As this divine being used a book, I cannot but conclude it is both lawful and expedient for his creatures to be educated that their minds may become enlarged and strengthened by cultivation. The proper kind of education is a great refiner of nature and must ennoble the being. Paul, a "chosen vessel" the "chief of apostles," was highly educated. Some of his letters are spoken of as being quite "long," and some as "terrifying;" and it seems that he wrote a number of letters. It requires educated minds to effectually communicate in writing, and often in speaking, our inmost feelings. By cultivating our minds by education, our channels and capacities for seeing, admiring and communicating the goodness greatness, "power and might" of God become wider and wider.

What I understand by the "several ability" in the "parable of the talents," is, as regards the capacity and will for receiving extensive knowledge, and its result in abundant good fruit. In Paul's charge to Timothy, he says, "The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments." These things signify his regard for that which arises from an education. Moses was the meekest man, and was a great man. He, too was "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds." Acts, 7th chapter 22nd verse. Read the 4th chapter of Exodus, from the 10th to the 17th verse. Here it shows that Moses was not "eloquent," but slow of speech, and of a slow tongue." God commanded him therefore, to take Aaron his brother for a "spokesman unto the people." And God said "I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do." Here, in this important case, God has chosen an educated man to speak; but because he is "slow of speech, and of a slow tongue," he is to communicate in his language, the words which God teaches him to say. Yes, get an education, and look to God for "mouth and wisdom" to communicate here and there far and near, written or oral, as He may direct and the case may require. Since I have spoken of the educated men in Scripture, let us see about the uneducated men: (4th chapter of Acts, 13th verse:) "Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marveled, and they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." I am well aware that it does not require education to reach the Kingdom of God, for in the 35th chapter of Isaiah, it reads thus: "But it shall be for these, the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein." Even the simple will not "err therein;" but when education can be made a medium of furthering God's cause in various ways, then let there be places for proper education, with a proper spirit, rule and conduct; for it is not always what we do and say that produces evil, but the way we do and say it. Then, in my humble opinion, those who have no talent or fancy for education can serve God in their allotted way, producing its kind of joy and duties, and those with an extensive educational knowledge can serve God in various multiplied ways. In one of my spiritual stages, I was afraid of education, and concluded it was wicked—full of vanity and pride; but after I became extensively quickened, and could see clearly, I saw that education was not only harmless, but was useful, necessary, and a real blessing, for even such as I have, I do heartily thank God.

It is a great thing, but like other things, even good things, it can be, and is often perverted. I do believe much depends upon the education of the mind as well as the heart—both should be properly cultivated, or both, or either one may go astray into crooked paths. Through the channel of an educated and cultivated mind, one can and does enjoy nature's works and look up to nature's God and from God down to nature. The influences, public and private of a good education, has its silent yet wholesome effect upon demoralized circles; while an impure education, oftener produces the opposite. An educated mind become strengthened—large in its views, and a properly prepared heart becomes wider and fuller in tender and merciful feelings; then with a strengthened mind and an enlarged heart, (God being the captain of our salvation) I must and do say and think that greater will be the usefulness, influence, and happiness of such persons. In conclusion to my subject, let me add that Pope says, "A little learning is a dangerous thing," and Scripture tones say, "A little religion is a dangerous thing to be at "ease" with. Let us get a good knowledge of both of these things, and I feel sure we can praise and glorify God in an acceptable and lawful manner.

I am much interested in the training and educating of children. When a child, I felt its importance. "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." There should be regular day schools for them, and Sabbath Schools. Although I strongly advocate a good education, still I have a reverence for all thorough Christians, even if they are unlearned. True religion in a person, educated, or uneducated, should entitle them "to stand before kings." We are commanded not to put our "lights under a bushel." My acquaintance with the Brethren, and judging them by a strict Scripture standard, impresses me with the full belief that their light is of the first quality. But here it is, these lights has been kept almost entirely as it were down in a valley from the notice of the wide world. A bright qualified light should be "set on a hill" that it may give light to all around. I commend humility under all considerations, but when it keeps us from publishing and proclaiming the Gospel, and pointing out the "ancient landmarks which our fathers have set," we should bestir ourselves for that medium which will take us with humble boldness before the world. Education will certainly prepare us for this thing! "All things are possible with God," but he often allows us means for more and extensive good, which circumstances obscure. In my case, I owe my acquaintance and satisfaction with the Brethren, (in the way of special providence,) through the unexpected means used by the educated ones of the Brotherhood. So you see God blesses a good education—it can publish and sound his name and praise abroad from shore to shore. With education or no education, let "Holiness unto the Lord" be written upon all we do. With this and foregoing views, do let us educate with diligence and speed.

I am painfully aware of the fact that many ministers of various denominations when preparing for and returned to preach, do show a mind puffed up with theological learning and high sounding words, while the heart shows no part in it; there is the form of godliness, denying the power. I am delighted with pure religion of the heart, but of the mind alone, I cannot endorse and enjoy it. "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart, and lean not unto thine own understanding." We must all beware, and watch and pray against this religion of the mind; for that is for the glory of man and not of God, the high and lofty One.

I do not profess to be a judge of what should be taught in the Brethren's High School. I shall simply suggest that of the Languages, Latin, Greek and Hebrew are the most important. The Modern Languages are edifying in their way, but I suppose they are not altogether important. Mathematics are useful and strengthening to the mind. Chemistry, Philosophy, Astronomy, Physiology, Botony, Histories and Geology are harmless and useful to the ennobling of the mind. These are for senior classes, and for junior classes, Reading, Writing, Spelling, Grammar, Geography and Arithmatic. All persons should strive to obtain a sufficient education to enable them to speak correctly at least. History tells us of the great cruelty and demoralization in those ages where the people were ignorant. "Ignorance is bliss, where 'tis folly to be wise." That is true, but where we can Christianize and civilize by dissipating this ignorance and showing our light we most heartily embrace it, "and work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work." "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," do all to the glory of God. History says "that four or five hundred years after Christ, the Roman Empire was dismembered, and that the northern tribes of Europe spread themselves over Spain, Italy and Greece. Thus the arts, learning and refinement, which had been cultivated in these countries, were for a time extinguished, and all Europe was reduced to a nearly barbarious state. This period is called the Dark Ages, because the nations were generally ignorant, fierce and barbarious. So things continued, till above five hundred years ago, when the light of learning began to return." Even History proves that education refines and softens our nature. Get religion, and get an education, and we will be in a road to happiness, as well as more usefulness.

While upon the subject of education, I feel it my duty to also say something about Music and musical instruments, as I have seen some writings about it. I am not in favor of musical instruments in churches, but in private circles, (where it is not for the sake of vanity or pride, and under all considerations we are pecuniarily able to have one) I consider it harmless to have either a Piano, Harp, Organ or Melodion. It makes home pleasant. I cannot see where some pleasant and innocent recreation will harm any one. To some, God gives a talent for music. As he gives it, is it a harm then if we use it in a "lawful and expedient" manner? I have had a great fondness for music all my life, and it is acknowledged by judges that I possess a natural talent for it. During my spiritual captivity, I became afraid it was wicked, and would not indulge it. After I was quickened in spirit and enlightened in mind, when I would hear solemn straines of music from the Piano, it forthwith touched the inner chords of my being, and filled my heart with a sacred element. Solemn instrumental music transports my soul—it gives me new life—it lifts me from worldliness. Where I once liked gay and worldly music—such as excites one to dance, now, and for a long time, I have no fancy for it. I do not enjoy it. I have given up all such pieces, and now enjoy with a benefit, such pieces as the "Variations of Home," "Auld Lang Syne," and such as that. I enjoy pieces according to the tone of them; inward feelings prove which are the solemn and innocent strains. Sacred music is beautiful—"Old Hundred" and "Balerma" are among my favorites. In secular songs, "Joys That We've Tasted" and "Out In The Stilly Night," are full of solemn sweetness, both in poetry and music. Such are specimens of my fancy in sacred and secular music; and had an enlightened conscience warned me against the love and practice of these things, I can with all seriousness and truthfulness affirm that nevermore would I have indulged them. To use music rightly, it has great power. "Music has charms to soothe the savage breast." David was chosen and anointed of the Lord, and played so well upon a harp for Saul that he became refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him. Read 16th chapter 1st Samuel, from the 12th to the 24th verse.

I did not expect to have written so lengthily, and do fear I may weary the reader. "In a multitude of words there wanteth not sin." God being my Guide, Counsellor and Helper in this and all things, I seriously offer it for examination. I mean no harm to any, and hope no one will find a harmful word in it. JULIA A. WOOD.

BROWNSVILLE, Md. }
October 27th 1874. }

Our Lovefeast was the last of some nine which had been arranged for brother Davy of Ohio, but unfortunately he could not be with us. We had however a number of other ministering brethren with us, whose services were appreciated, and we had a good meeting.

There was a large attendance of members, and others. This branch of the church has had a small increase the past summer, some five persons being added. The condition of the church is about as good as can be expected, we may say there is general harmony and good will among the members. I do not say there is universal harmony, and would ask where does that prevail? In this world of imperfections we need not look for such a heavenly state, or condition of things.

I had the pleasure of attending several other Lovefeasts, in what is called the Middletown Valley. The attendance and attention of these meetings was good. They had a large increase of members this summer, about thirty were added. At this meeting there was but four strange ministering brethren, who had the work properly divided among them, and it was there made manifest that a proper number of speakers can conduct a Lovefeast better than a large number. Those present being strangers, can perceive the amount of work at a glance that will devolve upon them. There will be no hesitancy to speak, as is too often the case when there are a large number present. I will here make a suggestion, at the risk of being considered officious is this: At our Lovefeasts there should never more than one person speak upon the same subject. Should, however, there be time for more speaking it ought to be employed by singing, thus permitting the whole congregation to unite with us. This will prevent them from occupying the time otherwise, improperly. If such a course would be pursued our meeting could be closed between 8 and 9 o'clock P. M. The most of us know when we were out of the church, and were expected to attend all the services in the afternoon and night during our Lovefeast occasions, that the time appeared long to us, indeed I have seen brethren sleep at the table.

Now such things need not be, if it is properly managed. Thirty years ago, when I joined the church, we rarely closed before half after 10 P. M. No wonder our young people could not be kept quiet upon such occasions. I will make another suggestion to our old brethren, though they be deacons, that they require young brethren to do the work, or the greater part of it, in setting the tables, they supervising for the reasson that they are more active, and the work could be more speedily performed.

Among the causes for congratulation at our Lovefeast was the circumstance of propitiousness of the weather. For all of which we are truly thankful to God the giver of every good and perfect gift."

The Warriorsmark Lovefeast.

Bro. H B. Brumbaugh:—

The brethren and sisters of the Warriorsmark congregation met on Oct. 17th, to celebrate the sufferings and death of Jesus. Services commenced at 2 o'clock P M. The congregation was small, and chiefly all members.

The meeting was opened by a few introductory remarks by Eld. J. G. Glock, after which a subject was taken by A. VanDyke, from the following words: "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sake he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." 2 Cor. 8: 9 The night meeting was attended by a large number of people, and very good order was manifested throughout the entire meeting.

Service next morning again at 10 A. M. Eld G. Myers then proposed that Eld G. Glock should sing a hymn in German, and make a few remarks in the German language in opening the meeting. This was done, and was very interesting to the congregation, because a great many of them never heard any preaching A subject was then taken by A. VanDyke from the following words: "But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your heavenly Father forgive your trespasses." (Matt. 6: 15.)

Bro. A. VanDyke preached an excellent sermon from this subject, and we hope it will be a lesson to all of us. The meeting was closed by G. Myers. After this meeting the ministers not belonging to this congregation left us. There was meeting at night again by our own ministers. The congregation was very large and good order.

Elder S. M Cox took a subject from the Scripture found in 2. Tim. 4: 1—18, followed by W. Quin. Meeting closed by C Imler.

Our meeting is now over, and though we saw no one come into the fold of Christ, yet we hope the victory has been won on the Lord's side, and at some future time we will realize that the battle which has been fought has resulted in a glorious victory on the Lord's side.

Church News.

Dear Pilgrim:—

By request I give the following: Left home Oct. 9th at 11 o'clock to attend a Lovefeast in German Settlement, Preston Co., W. Va. I had an appointment to fill in Rowlesburg in same county, on the same evening that I left home, a distance of about 18 miles It was dusk when I got there, but the news soon spread in town that I had landed. Held services in the M E. church. The bell was rung and a considerable congregation assembled. Went to brother Stewart's and stayed all night, had a pleasand conversation with brother Stewart and wife, a sister in the church. His mother is a member also living but a stone's cast from his door. Left next morning for German Settlement, and was to meet some company three miles distant; arrived at the point near 8 o'clock in the morning where my company was waiting for me. We were soon on the way to place of meeting, went to brother Peter S. Fike's for dinner, a son of Elder S. A. Fike's. After dinner started to place of meeting, a distance of about two miles. When we got there we found a considerable number of brethren and sisters, and a full representation of ministers. First sermon by brother J. Miller if I mistake not, from the Valley of Virginia, from the words "It is written man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." He preached an interesting discourse, and was followed by the writer, and brother Josiah Beachly who spoke in the German. After services we attended to the ordinance of baptism in brother Wymer's race. The subject was one of the number that accompanied me, brother Lewis Ford's daughter. Then we returned to the church, and the time soon arrived to commence our evening services. The 11th chapter of 1st Corinthians was read, and the subject of self examination was then treated and then after an intermission of fifteen minutes, the usual services took place. I think we had a good meeting, and the members seemed to enjoy themselves most gloriously. The order of the spectators was praise worthy.

After meeting I went home with brother James Liller. May the Lord bless him for his kindnes to me. Next morning at 10 o'clock preaching George, brother Beachly, and brother Abbot, from the words, "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves. It is the gift of God, not of works lest any man should boast. I for one, felt that it was good for me to be there. Brother Abbot spoke last, and very feelingly. After meeting closed, I started for home with my company, and come as far as brothr Ford's, and their remained all night. Next morning, being the 12th, I started for home a distance of ten miles. Got home at noon, and found all well. Thank the Lord for his kindness and blessings that he bestows upon his children.

Z. ANNON.

Brother Brumbaugh:

—As our Communion meeting is over I will give you and those of my dear brethren and sisters at a distance a little church news, and especially our much beloved brother J. S. and sister E. Flory of Col., who are so very anxious to hear from us here in Fayette Co., W. Va. Our meeting commenced at 2 o'clock on the 17th at our new meeting-house, and I can truly say we had a good meeting. Our ministering brethren from a distance were Andrew and James Hutchison from Monroe Co., Va., Wm. Baily from Raleigh Co, and Charles Masters of Fayette Co, W. Va. We had good preaching, good congregation, and good attention all the time. I believe we had the most attentive congregation at night and second day I ever witnessed at this place. Preaching on Sunday at 11 o'clock to a large and attentive crowd. Same evening on Sloop Creek, a distance of 9 miles, by our afflicted brother A. Hutchison, in company with my husband, Joseph Hutchison, S Riner and J. W Hutchison. One sister baptized at this place. Next day, Monday, at 10 a. m. at Meadow Fork. A very feeling discourse again by our dear afflicted brother A. Hutchison.

Here, my dear brethren and sisters, was the parting hour, here we had to take the parting hand and say farewell, not knowing when we shall meet again. My heart was made to rejoice seeing the love manifested among the dear brethren and sisters. Oh! we don't feel how near and dear we are to each other until the hour of separation comes.

One thing that caused our parting to be more serious was that of our dear old afflicted father S. Hutchison bidding farewell to his children, with a faint hope of ever seeing them again in this world of sorrow, but a strong one, if faithful, of meeting in that upper and better world, where parting will be no more and where God shall wipe all tears away.

Dear brother and sister Flory, I will say to you, your friends are all well as for us I know. This leaves us all well but myself, I have had neuralgia for some time, but feel better to-day.

Editor Pilgrim:—

Grace be with you to be a pilgrim and not a resident—in the world and not of it.

I have not seen your magazine for two years until last evening I received No. 39, current volume, containing my letter to brother Hertzler, written ten years ago. Your editorial prefix indicates reluctance as to its publication, and I am sorry your exclude it from your columns altogether. Private letters not intended for publication, should be given to the public with caution. All this is personal, and my reference to the proceedings of Annual Meeting of 1864, had better been subjected to no scissors. Ten years of meeting and refining in the crucible of suffering should change the quality of a man's being, and largely qualify his views in relation to many things. Even to more growth, or advance in the direction Godward, there is such changes that a decade may set us beyond the point of recognition. Would that it were so with us all—that we were so much more Godlike than ten years ago, that the old features could be but dimly traced in the overgrowo lineaments of the divine. When the old hard selfish, earth-loving, neath-tearing nature maintains its footing from year o year, and the man knows himself and it is known by others, as we was ten years past, we may well be startled by the apprehension that what is "born of blood" is nearly in the supremacy. Nothing grows faster, deeper and more compact, than an unhindered Divinely-tempered life.

October 22nd. 1874. }

Dear Brother.

I submit a few passing thoughts, as a report from this arm of "The Church." Our Lovefeast was held at the Antrim meeting house on the 20th of Oct. The day was very pleasant, and our usual good representation present. After the morning services there were two received into the body of Christ by baptism, in the presence of a large congregation Thus a few are still willing to serve the Lord their Maker, and if patient and persevering, to reap everlasting life. In the afternoon brother D. H. Bonebrake, and brother Frederick Bakener were advanced to the second degree in the ministry, Elder D. Bosserman officiating. We do earnestly hope that the Lord may bless them in the good work, whereunto they are called, and as their labors have been increased by the church, that they will be appreciated and adorn their position, by an increased activity in going forth to "stand in the temple and to speak unto the people all the words of this life." In the evening the ordinances of the Lord's house were observed amid an attentive and well behaved congregation of spectators. We believe that the word of the Lord was successfully held forth to the people, by our dear brethren who so kindly come to our assistance, and for which we return our hearty thanks; hoping that the Lord may bless them and their labors, to an increase of holiness and to the saving of precious souls.

OUR ALMANAC FOR 1875.

A number of our readers are enquiring about the Almanac and how soon they will be ready for sale, the terms &c. To all such as are interested we now say, the copy is in the hands of the publishers and the Almanac will be completed at the earliest possible date. In order to destroy the idea of competion and make a better Almanac, we and Bro Quinter of the Companion have concluded to publish but one Almanac between us so that we have united our resources and believe we will be able to present the Brotherhood an Almanac worthy of universal patronage. Those who will be so kind as to help us sell them can send in their orders at once and they will be booked and filled as soon as published. We have agreed on the following terms: Single copies 10 cents, 12 copies 7 cents, 18 copies $1.00, 100 copies $5.7. Address H. B. Brumbaugh, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

GENERAL INTLLIGENCE.

A FAMINE IN NEBRASKA.

Chicago, Oct. 22—Death from starvation for the actual want of food is a calamity that stares in the face 7,000 men, women and children, within 18 hours' travel of Chicago, and in the heart of the grain growing region of the country. Gen. Ord, commanding the department of the Platte, and who is personally cognizant of the facts, addressed the Board of Trade to-day, telling in plain direct terms the sad story of the destitution in Western Nebraska, caused by the ravages of the grasshoppers. From the reports of his officers on the ground and among these people, he has trustworthy information as to the actual condition of affairs. He states that several cases of actual death have already taken place. Fathers have been compelled to abandon their families and seek work and food. In one house the corpse of a child was found that had perished for want of food and near it the mother, prostrate and dying from the same cause. He states that in Boone, Greely, Sherman, Howard, Buffalo, and all the other counties 50 miles west of the Missouri River, two-thirds of the people are destitute of all the necessaries of life. They have neither clothing nor shoes, and food is impossible to get. A committee to take steps for the relief of these poor people was appointed.—N. Y. Tribune.

The experiment of transferring the blood of a live lamb into the veins of a consumptive patient was successfully performed upon the person of Hermon Dubois at Fall River, Mass., on Friday, by Drs. Julius Hoffman and Weyland of New York city. Every vein which is connected with the jugular vein of the animal was severed and securely tied by the physicians, so as to allow the blood free egress to the arm of the patient. Dr. Hoffman used a small glass tube about two inches and a half long, slightly curved for the operation, thus bringing the neck of the lamb in very close proximity to the patient's arm. The operation occupied one minute and thirty-three seconds, about six ounces of blood being transferred in that time. Mr. Dubois has been afflicted with consumption more than two years, and his friends thought it best to try the experiment as a last resort for relief. At last accounts the patient was doing well.

The Roman correspondent of the Catholic Standard sends the following telegram under date Rome, Thursday, Oct., 8, 8:50: "When the Holy Father heard of the abjuration of Protestanism by the Queen Mother of Bavaria he evidenced the greatest emotion. Bursting into tears and elevating his eyes to heaven, he exclaimed, "My God! Thy poor vicar is unworthy of such consolation." You have this information from one who was himself an eye-witness of this touching scene at the vatican."

The citizens of Winnipeg, in Manitoba are delighted by the settlement of a colony of 1,200 Mennonites in the immediate neighborhood of that town, and a correspondent of the Torronto Globe says that the first installment of 300 of these immigrants spent $10,000 in one day in the stores of Winnipeg. A hotel is building in the city for the accommodation of these people by one of themselves, and every day the road between the settlement and town is thronged with their ox-teams laden with lumber, stoves, groceries, and other supplies.

A pious elder of the Scottish kirk on his way to service of a Sabbath morning, saw a little boy and girl playing marbles. He wrathfully inquired, "Boy, do you know where children go to who play marbles on Sunday?" "Ay, ay" answered the boy, "they gang down to the field by the brig" (bridge). "No!" roared the elder, "they go to hell and are burned." The little fellow, looking shocked and frightened, called to his sister, "Come awa', Jeanie, come awa', here's a man swearing awfully."

The cave of Cacahuamilpa, in Mexico, is said to be the largest in the world. It is covered by a volcanic mountain with an extinct crater. Mr. Porter C. Bliss has twice examined and explored it, the last time in Feb. of the present year. Six hundred persons constituted the last exploring party, and they were provided with Bengal lights and scientific appliances. After reaching a level at perhaps fifty feet depth, they proceeded 3¾ miles into the interior. The roof was so high—a succession of halls—that rockets often exploded before striking it. Labyrinthine passages leave the main hall in every direction. Stalagmites and stalactites are abundant. Below this cave, at a great depth, are two other immense caves, from each of which issues a branch of a great river, uniting here. These two rivers enter some five miles distant at the other side of the mountain flow parallel, and issue at last together.

It is stated that an exceptionally large group of spots is now visible on the surface of the sun. They may be perceived with smoked glass without the aid of a telescope. According to Mr. W. F. Denning of Bristol, England, the spots cover an area of nearly 78,000 miles.

Historical Charts of Baptism.

A complete key to the history of Trine, and the Origin of Single Immersion. The most interesting reliable and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22x28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting at a single glance the impossibility of single immersion ever having been the Apostolic method. Single copy, $0.50. Four copies, $1.60. Sent post-paid. Address

AT VIENNA, 1873.
THE HIGHEST ORDER OF "MEDAL" AWARDED AT THE EXPOSITION.
NO SEWING MACHINE RECEIVED A HIGHER PRIZE.

A FEW GOOD REASONS:

1. A new invention thoroughly tested and secured by Letters Patent.
2. Makes a perfect LOCK STITCH alike on both sides, on all kinds of goods.
3. Runs Light, Smooth, Noiseless and rapid—the best combination of qualities.
4. Durable—Runs for years without repairs
Will do all varieties of work and fancy stitching in a superior manner.
6. It is the most easily managed by the operator. Length of stitch may be altered while running, and machine can be threaded without passing thread through holes.
7. Design simple, ingenious, elegant, forming the stitch without the use of Cog Wheel Gears, Rotary Cams or Lever arms. Has the Automatic Drop feed, which insures uniform length of stitch at any speed. Has our new thread controller, which allows easy movement of needle-bar and prevents injury to thread.
8. CONSTRUCTION most careful and finished. It is manufactured by the most skillful and experienced mechanics, at the celebrated REMINGTON ARMORY, ILION, N. Y. Philadelphia office, 810 Chestnut Street.

The Boatman.

SELECTED BY A. APPLEMAN.

We are waiting by the river,
Where the evening shadows fall,
Only waiting for the boatman,
Listening for his gentle call.
Cho.—When I cross the vale of Jordan,
With its dark and chilling tide;
In that bright celestial city,
I shall evermore abide.

Though the mist hangs o'er the river,
And the billows loudly roar;
Yet I hear the songs of angels,
Wafted from the other shore.

He has called for many a loved one
We have seen them leave our side,
With our Savior we shall greet them,
When we too, have crossed the tide.

Shall I waken in the morning,
In my Fathers home above?
Or will shadows still surround me,
Brightened only by his love?

Earth with all its lights and shadows
Seem receding from my sight,
Yet I almost hear the music
In that land supremely bright.

Hark, I hear the waters ripple,
Lights are gleaming on the shore—
Think 'tis the coming boatman!
Will my toils so soon be o'er?

I will wait in calm submission,
Meekly kneeling on the shore;
Till my Savior comes to call me;
Then he'll bear me gently o'er.

Waiting, waiting on the boatman,
With his shining angel band:
Waiting, waiting by the river,
Clinging close to Jesus' hand.

When I cross the vale of Jordan,
With its dark and chilling tide,
With my Savior and my kindred,
I shall evermore abide.

CAMPBELLISM
WEIGHED IN THE BALLANCE AND FOUND WANTING.

BY J. B. MOORE.

A Sermon in reply to Elder C———

Respected Friends:—The gentleman having granted me permission to speak, I feel as though I ought to make a few remarks—the nature of the case seems to demand it. I am, however, no lover of debating, although I am of the opininion that it may, when properly conducted, be promotive of much good.

I have no real desire to differ from my religious friends in regard to these important matters, but the love of truth rather constrains me to take some exceptions to a few statements that have been made here to-night. I will therefore intrude a little upon the time. and not detain you longer than seems necessary.

I, perhaps, could have chosen some other time in the future to present my reply, but my remarks will be very personal. I do not care to talk of a man behind his back; whenever I have anything to say about a minister's sermon, I want him to hear it, and for these reasons I propose making my remarks in the presence of Elder C———., that he may know just what I have to say about his discourse.—I want him to hear it, and I would be much better pleased if a few hundred more of his ministers were present.

Much that he said is correct, and on many points I sanction his remarks, but shall take exceptions to those points on which we differ.

He stated that in the time of the apostles there were plenty of Christians, but there were no Dunkards, which proves that Christians are one thing, while Dunkards are quite another. In reply, I remark, that while all agree that there were plenty of Christians in the time of the apostles, all must also admit that there were no Campbellites at that time, hence it follows that Christians are one thing, while Campbellites are quite another.

Elder C—— must not stand in his glass house and throw stones through my windows.

But he claims that Campbellite is not their proper name. I remark that neither is Dunkard our proper name. We call ourselves BRETHREN, now then, when he proves that there were no Brethren in the time of Christ and the apostles, then I will give up the question.

He further remarked that the Christian Church was in existence in the first century, but the Dunkard Church did not exist until after the seventeenth; therefore the Dunkard Church is not the Christian Church. I reply by saying that while it is a fact that the Christian Church existed in the first century, it is also a fact that the Campbellite Church did not exist till after the beginning of the nineteenth; therefore the Campbellite Church is not the Christian Church.

You see that Elder C—— has been making ropes to-night, and now I am tying his hand with them, let him get loose if he can.

Elder C—— further stated that one point of difference between the Christain Church and the Dunkard Church is this: The Christian Church was founded by Jesus Christ, who sprang from the tribe of Judah, while the Dunkard Church was founded by Alex. Mack, who sprang from the tribe of Germany. I remark that it is a fact that the Christian Church was founded by Jesus Christ, who sprang from the tribe of Judah, but on the other hand, the Campbellite Church was founded by Alex. Campbell, who sprang from the tribe of Ireland, "of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning the priesthood."

You notice Elder C—— is good at digging ditches, but while I gently pass around he falls into them, and of course, he intended that they should hold me when he got me in them, but the tide has turned, he is in and there is no place left to get out.

When it comes to taking the name Christian and then make a mere speculation of it in this kind of a way, then I seriously object to it. I have no serious objections to them calling themselves Christians—because we do the same—but then I don't want him to turn round and tell this people that I don't belong to the Christian Church, simply because I refused to believe and practice the doctrines and traditions of Alex. Campbell. He has endeavored to severely stigmatize me because I call them Campbellites, which he says is a term of ridicule. I cannot see where the ridicule comes in: when I use the term I do not mean anything bad—I don't mean that they are worse than Campbell, "the author and finisher of their faith." Webster also uses the term, and I presume that the parties who revised the dictionary thought proper to insert it as an appropriate term.

Elder C—— says that Campbell never died for him, never bled for him, nor never arose from the dead for him. Well who said he did! Did Luther arise from the dead for those whom you call Lutherans? If you have a right to call a man a Lutheran, when Luther did not rise from from the dead for him, have I not the same right to call you a Campbellite, when Campbell did not arise from the dead for you?

But he went still further and says, you may ask the most zealous Dunkard in "all the region round about" if a man can be saved without believing Dunkardism, and he will surely say yes, and then ask him if any one can be saved without believing Christianity and he will say no: this then proves that Dunkardism is not Christianity. I will answer this array of words by turning his own guns against him. You may ask Elder C—— if a man can be saved without believing Campbellism, and he will say yes, then ask him if a man can be saved without believing Christianity, and he will tell you no; ergo, Campbellism is not Christianity.

The audience will notice that so far, I have been using Elder C——'s own arguments against him. If his method is untrue then he has not proven one thing against us, and if true you can see at once just where he stands.

Having fully and fairly disposed of his arguments, in detail, I now proceed to advance facts, which he dare no' question.

1. I call him a Campbellite because he believes and practices what Alex. Campbell believed and taught—in faith and practice they agree as much as any teacher and pupil in this civilized country. Campbell is the very "author and finisher of his faith"--he goes just as far as Campbell went, but no further. If he believed and practiced what Luther taught, then I would call him a Lutheran. If he believed and practiced what Mahomet taught, then I would certainly call him a Mahometan; but as he believes and practices what Campbell taught, I certainly ought to have charity enough to call him just what he is—a Campbellite. Whenever he leaves off Campbellism and teaches Christianity, then of course he should be called after his teacher--a Christian.

There is no use holding Campbellism up to me and then call it Christianity—I lose confidence in the parties who do it.

In these statements I do not question the honesty of Elder C—— any more than I would the 450 prophets of Baal. I believe that those prophets were honest, yet they were wrong.

2. In many respects Campbell's system of religion is correct, while in others it is sadly deficient. The present remarks are not intended to reflect dishonor on the name of this remarkable reformer, but to stay the progress of his followers that they run not into the same excess of error. Among other good things taught by Campbell were faith, repentance, confession, and baptism for the remission of sins. These of course, he learned from the Bible, and in these points Elder C—— is right when he follows him; but here comes in the trouble—Campbell practiced backward immersion, a method not as old as either sprinkling or pouring, never mentioned in the Bible, and Elder C—— is following right in his foot-steps. Christian baptism should be performed in the likeness of the death of Christ, who on the cross, bowed his head forward and gave up the Ghost, but Elder C—— baptizes in the likeness of the death of Eli, who fell backward and broke his neck. Furthermore, this backward action in baptism is a modern invention, having been introduced since the commencement of the reformation. This feature, however, is not purely Campbellism, but was adopted from the Baptists by Campbell, and handed down to his followers, who hold it up before the people under the name of Christian baptism, when it lacks more than 1000 years of being as old as Christian baptism.

I now offer a syllogism which Elder C—— may overthrow if he can:

Christian baptism was practiced in the first century, but backward immersion was not practiced till the sixteenth century, therefore backward immersion is not Christian baptism.

3. In addition to this human tradition there is another trait about Elder C—'s method to show that he does not practice Christian baptism; and in this particular he imitates Campbell to the very letter. You have already observed that it is his failure to practice single immersion. This method should properly be called Eunomian baptism, in honor of its inventor, a heretic who lived in the fourth century. This is another feature that Campbell found in the Baptist Church, and stamped it with his own signature, handing it down to his followers; they receive it in "an honest heart," and thousands of them are not aware of its human origin.

The following points of difference between single immersion and Christian baptism are worthy of a passing notice: Christian baptism was authorized by Christ, while on the other hand single immersion was introduced by Eunomian: Christian baptism was practiced by Christ and the apostles in the first century, but single immersion was not practiced 'till near the close of the fourth century, therefore single immersion is not Christian baptism.

Campbell and his disciples practice Eunomian baptism, while on the other hand Christ and all his disciples practice christian baptism.

4. By referring to and reading carefully the 13th chapter of St. John, you will observe that Christ and his disciples practiced Feet-washing. But before they were through with the ordinance Peter thought to turn Campbellite and tell his Lord that he should not wash his feet. Peter like Elder C—did not believe in feet-washing, but his Lord and Master was not long restoring him back to Christianity by just simply reforming him, that if he washed him not, he should have no part with him. After they were through, then Jesus, "the author and finisher of their faith" told them the following facts and injunctions:

1. "Ye call me your Lord and Master."

"And I have washed your feet."

"Ye also ought to wash one another's feet,"

"For I have given you an example,"

5. "That ye should do as I have done to you."

The Lord gave them a command to observe, and predicated his right to do so upon the fact that he was their Lord and Master, according to their own statements. And as a master had a right to command his servants, so had he a right to command them. To show them their duty he simply told them that they ought to do it. To make the matter plain and easy to be understood, he set them an example. In order to show that it was binding, he simply told them that they SHOULD do as he had done, and to perpetuate the command, he afterwards told them to teach all nations to "observe all things whatsoever he had commanded them." If you examine Paul's letters to Timothy you will find feet-washing still continued in the Christian church, in the time of the apostles.

I simply desire to show you the vast difference between the Campbellite Church and the Christian Church. I do not propose to misrepresent them in the least, but tell the facts as they are, and then if you fail to take heed, it will not be my fault.

I have already intimated that Campbell is the "author and finisher" of Eld. C—'s faith, and now repeat it, referring to the proof. Elder C. fails to practice feet-washing, and why? Not because it was not practiced and commanded by Jesus Christ, for he both practiced and taught it, not because the apostles failed to teach it, for Paul required it of the widow, but the reason, and the only reason, is that Campbell neither practiced nor taught it. Here is just where all the trouble comes in. That the Bible teaches feet-washing Elder C—dare not question, he knows this to be a fact, but Campbell fails to teach it, and as Elder C—is following Campbell instead of Christ, we in this way are able to account for his not practicing feet-washing.—Campbell stopped before he came to feet-washing, or perhaps made a way of his own that does not contain feet-washing, now then I ask this intelligent congregation, where is Elder C—? Is he in the way in which our Savior trod—where feet-washing is found, or is he over yonder where Campbell trod—where there is no feet-washing? No use talking about charity here, the facts are so plain that all the charity in the Universe can't cover them over so much but that you can plainly see that Campbellism is one thing while Christianity is quite another.

5. The following argument will show as much difference between Campbellism and Christianity as there is between day and night. I now refer to the time of taking the Communion. That it was instituted in the night by Christ himself will not be questioned by a single sane man in the religious world. This much then is a fact. Furthermore, Paul says "that the Lord Jesus, in the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread." We further find Paul at Troas taking it after night; this then is Christianity, but not so with Campbellism—their rituals require that it be taken in the daytime, generally about noon, and then they turn round and call it the Lord's Supper, as though people generally ate supper before dinner. That it was taken by the Christian Church after night in the first century is a fact, and it is also another fact that it is now taken in the Campbellite Church in the daytime. Now then if here is not as much difference between the two Churches as there is between day and night, please tell me why!

Of our Savior, Luke says he took the cup "after supper," which shows that they had a supper—a full evening meal. Paul calls it the "Lord's Supper." This practice they observed in the Christian Church, but we find no such order in the Campbellite religion—they have nothing of the kind. Elder C—. will take a small bit of bread and a sip of wine—at noon too at that—then call it the Lord's Supper. He has about as much authority for calling a small bit of bread and a sip of wine, a supper, as the Pedo-baptists have for calling sprinkling baptism.

But then it is just as I told you near the beginning of my remarks, Campbell and not Christ is the "author and finisher of his faith." Campbell called it the Lord's Supper, and so must Elder C—. Campbell took it in the daytime, just about noon, so must his disciples; they must obey their Lord and Master, for he has given them an example that they should do as he has done.

6. I will next allude to another important item and then briefly close my remarks. The New Testament in no less than five different places command the Brethren to "salute one another with a holy kiss," or as it is sometimes termed, a "kiss of charity." Campbellism contains no such an injunction known to me. Paul has told us that if any man preach unto us any other gospel than that which we have received of him, let him be accursed. The gospel preached by Paul did contain the salutation of the holy kiss, no man who believes the Bible dare question this, but on the other hand the gospel preached by Campbell, and transmitted unto us by them that heard him, contains no such a command, it is simply another gospel, unlike that taught by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit by the mouth of the apostle Paul, one that does not contain the holy kiss, one that is from man and not of God.

But Elder C—. pays no attention to this teaching of the Spirit of God; he finds no trace of this law in the commands and traditions of Alx. Campbell, and for that reason, he is just what he is.

Had Campbell commanded the holy kiss, then it is more than likely that his disciples would practice it, but as they think it their duty to stop just where he did, they never come to this command, unless one of them is "converted from the error of his way," and walks steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship.

If Paul in disguise were to come to this house to-night, and say just what he has written on the holy kiss, Elder C—.and all his brethren would unite in calling him a Dunkard preacher, and then attempt to prove that he had no promise of a "crown of life" for the simple reason he is not what they call a Christian—a Campbellite.

I have now carefully examined all of Elder C—'s arguments, completely demolishing his entire building, and in addition to this I have shown conclusively that he is a Campbellite, according to the proper acceptation of the term; he does just what Campbell has taught him, paying no regard whatever to the commands to the law of Christ, not contained in Campbellism. In addition to this array of facts, which he dare not question—I could present quite a number of others, but as I have already presented more than Elder C—. is able to gainsay, and as a "hint to the wise is sufficient," I think proper to close with the following conclusions.

7. If we as a people "walk in all the commandments of the Lord blameless,"—a thing which we try with all our power to do—it will not hurt us any more to be called Dunkards than it hurt the disciples of Christ to be called Nazarenes.

We hold to the New Testament as the rule of our faith and practice, this we know is right whether other books are right or not. This contains the law and testimony of Jesus Christ, it is by this, and not something else that we are to be judged in the last day. It is true that Campbellism contains some good things, but whatever they are they were taken from the Bible. I have shown you quite a number of items contained in the perfect law of liberty, that are not even so much as hinted at in the commandments of Campbell.

As before stated I do not question the sincerity of Elder C—., I only question the correctness of his doctrine, not because there are no good things in it, but because there are many good things that are not in it, that are commanded in the Testament.

I close these remarks with the language of Christ: "Not all that say unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in Heaven."

On the Ministry.

Brother Brumbaugh:

The accompaning sermon, clipped from the R. C. Advocate, (a Methodist paper) was delivered by a Baptist minister, who is also a practicing lawyer in Richmond, Va. He never takes any criminal cases in law. For preaching he recieves a large salary, and gives away every cent of it for charitable purposes. I like his sermon very much. Except for your own persual, I did not know that it would be of any other use to you. I do not advocate preaching for salaries. A danger attends this thing. There are exceptions to all rules. Thus saith the Scriptures: A laborer is worthy of his hire;" "thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. If we have sown unto you spiritual things, it is a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?" These passages quoted, show that a minister merits gifts from his hearers; and the wise in heart will ever be willing and ready to administer to all his necessities. The danger consequent upon a salary is this: "The love of money is the root of all evil;" and where a minister bargains to preach for a certain amount, the prospects of the money too often gains the ascendency over the better interests of his Master. With a full and unwavering trust in providence, a minister should undertake to preach the gospel out of a clean heart, and with a contrite, spirit, making no stated terms about pay; then I do believe a just and merciful God will never allow him to suffer unnecessarily.—"No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." To preach the glorious gospel with a full effect, the heart should be so full of love to Jesus Christ, that one should feel entirely willing to spend and be spent for him. As a result, the spiritual sheaves would be abundant, and of temporals, there would be no serious lack. "Consider the lilies of the field how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more cloth you, O ye of little faith? Therefore take no thought saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or Wherewithal shall we be clothed? (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." When a minister is laboring by both example and precept to save souls, and the members of churches are unmindful of his needs, I am constrained to believe that their hearts are far from God. True love for him and his cause, will always give his followers large and tender hearts, willing minds and open hands for the aid of any and every good purpose. "And they came, every one whose heart stirred him up, and every one whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the Lord's offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments." Such is the reading of Exodus 35 : 21. Paul said he preached "the gospel of Christ whithout charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel." He also said, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. Notwithstanding, ye have well done that ye did communicate with my affliction. Not because I desire a gift; but I desire fruit that may abound to your account. But I have all, and abound: I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, an oder of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing to God. But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory to Christ Jesus." "It is better to give than to receive." "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. The liberal soul shall be made fat: and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." While I adroit I am no advocate for having stated salaries for ministers that is, not preaching for the sake and expectation of filthy lucre, I do strongly advocate enough love for the cause of Christ, to constrain us to bring our various offerings unto the Lord through the medium of his minister's needs and dues, and all other things pertaining to and connected with any branch of his service. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof;" and as God "has prospered" us, so should we offer unto his cause according to what we have, "not grudgingly, or of necessity." As it is written, "He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: his righteousness remaineth forever. But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." One-tenth of what we receive is due to God's purposes. For about five years, I have solemnly and continually practiced this good Scripture rule, sometimes giving all I had, as the case was Often this has placed me in straits; but as "man's extremity is God's opportunity," I have ever been relieved by "special providences" in every emergency. "Behind a frowning providence, he hides a smiling face." Straits give us ample and rich opportunity for acknowledging his hand—his "power and might;" they prepare the heart to know the Savior more closely, and to rightly appreciate the source and blessing of everything we here enjoy.

"Trials make the promise sweet;
Trials give new life to prayer;
Trials bring me to his feet;
Lay me low and keep me there."

In Timothy, 3. 1. it plainly describes the qualification of bishops, deacons and their wives. Among other things, it says they "must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behavior, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous; one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; for if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God? Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil. Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things." Having then a plain and excellent rule for ministers and their wives, let these things be faithfully observed; "wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the firey darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God: Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." With a faithful observance of all these things, (which will be easy of performance to a really regenerated one) God will never allow an unsalaried minister of the gospel to suffer or lack beyond what he is able to stand; and in many cases he will provide enough, and to spare. Read Luke 12: The danger of covetousness, the promise of God's providence and the great need of watchfulness are clearly taught from the mouth of Christ. Let us all ponder these weighty matters most seriously, with this question, Am I walking contrary to this rule? If in the affirmative, delay not any means to "walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing; being fruitful in every good work." For sins of covetousness, God often hides his face and favor from us. In Josbua 7: relative to the "trespass of Acham" is a figure to warn us of God's displeasure with the covetous. Where we do not progress in spiritual affairs, we must search our hearts to see if we are not harboring a species of the "accused thing." Unless we heartily dedicate our time, our opportunities, our talents, our substance, and our "bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service, we will not have proven what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God;" and we cannot fully possess "that peace which passeth understanding." "Again the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman, seeking godly pearls: Who when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it." So if we would follow on to know the Lord, we must take him for a Guide and Counsellor in every vicissitude of life; we must follow him through shadow as well sunshine; for the Shepherd of Israel will never lead us wrong; and true faith and obedience, will surely put us in possession of that "continual feast"—that "hidden manna." A valient soldier of the cross will sooner or later be favored by the blessed presence and communion, spiritually, with the Captain of his salvation. We must daily and hourly press on till victory is the heart's swelling and bounding cry. "Take up your cross daily, and follow me;" for "no cross, no crown." Ministers of the Gospel, with deep humility of heart and of purpose, I affectionately beg you to take a prayerful and searching view of the 4th, 5th, and 6th chapts. of 2nd Corinthian; also the 4th chapt. of Ephesians, especially from the 23rd to the 32nd verses; the 5th chapt. its 4th and 5th verses; 1st Thessalonians, 4th chapt. 11th and 12 verses.

Conservative Thoughts.

We acknowledge our short-sightedness and feel impressed to ask from whence may we expect any good to result from an extended controversy of the High School project? The design of our periodicals is to do good, —to promote love and union, and further the cause of Zion. The editors profess such to be their aim and we feel to say our periodicals are worthy of a liberal patronage; and as a medium of usefulness they are dependent in a great measure upon the support of the Brotherhood. Time and again the readers of our papers have been reminded that to make the papers interesting and instructive lies within the power of the contributors, at least to a certain extent. On the other hand, contributors may detract from them the power to accomplish the greatest good. The School controversy we admit has been conducted in a gentle manner, yet it being an individual enterprise, is it best to press its merits or demerits so largely upon the public columns of our periodicals which are held open for such interests as are of a general character,—to the upbuilding of Zion, or for such things that tend to the interests of the saints in heavenly things. The Annual Council discarded the idea of establishing a church college among the Brethren, but gave individual brethren the privilege to organize or control institutions of learning as they may choose. Even the church refused to lend her name to such an enterprise. Hence we see all such enterprises must stand or fall on their own merits. There are at least, a few that have been contemplating the withdrawal of their support from some of our periodicals on account of this controversy, and that it, (the controversy) will be an inducement on the part of some to subscribe is quite doubtful. It also is doubtful if the controversy has engendered love one toward another or gave strength to unity in the bonds of christian relationship. On both sides of the question are brethren of talent and influence. Friends of the school have advanced things that have been an injury to the very thing they uphold, hence it may be said "their zeal hath eaten them up," or at least has a tendency that way. Opponents have also in this controversy lent a helping hand to the cause by their mode and manner of reasoning in some instances. In surveying the whole field of controversy and the mode and means of defence pro and con, we can't see where the good comes in sufficient to compensate for the time, labor and expense of carrying on the controversy. Therefore we humbly plead for a cessation from a further prosecution of the controversy. As we said once of another school (when asked our views relative to it) if God be for it and the right kind of men at the helm it will stand; if God be against it it must fall. So we say of this, and surely if it is as laudable an enterprise as its friends claim for it, it needs not to be bolstered up through the medium of the press in such voluminous style. And if it is such a wonderful and glaring evil as set forth by the opponents, surely our dear brethren and sisters can by the glass of the gospel discern its ugly features and "keep themselves from all appearance of evil." On the one hand it has the appearance (through so much controversy) that the project has not sufficient solidity or base to stand on its own merits, but must needs appeal to the general Brotherhood for support. On the other hand that the Church has so far departed from the "simplicity that is in Christ" that they are in danger of being swallowed by this "High" idol.

Brethren, let us all learn in the noble school of Christ, and let this "High School" work out its own salvation (if such awaits it), and let us all try and work out our "salvation with fear and trembling." And to those that would think of withholding support from our periodicals on account of some things there not just to your suiting, we would say "charity," noble thing, let us exercise it and relish the good things we find in our "winged messengers" that goeth forth so often on their pilgrimage to our homes. And all that can should throw in their mite, that matters of controversy may be crowded out of the manuscript box into the waste basket, where this is welcome a place if our editors think so.

J. S. FLORY.

A man may be the worshiper of the true God, and yet not a true worshiper of God.—

Some things in the manner of the New Testament writers, in speaking of the coming of Christ and the end of the world, greatly resemble the prophetic way of the old seers. Prophecy was ceasing, but those things are lingering streaks of it in the sky.

"If any man's work shall be burned he shall suffer loss." And a great loss it will be, to behold one's life a failure. Perhaps a minister here and there may find that, by some great misconception of the truth, he did no good, though he himself is saved; yet so as by fire.

Love centered upon a person of moral and religious excellency lifts the soul to bask in the elements of a holy affection far above the sphere of earthly considerations. Personal charms sink into insignificance when compared to the sweet effusions emanating from a heart full of love to God.—J. S. Flory.

That cannot be healthful piety where there is no activity in doing good. There is danger of luxuriously enjoying religious ordinances. We are in danger of spiritual sloth. Solomon seems to have great antipathy to sluggards, and we need to apply his words chiefly to spiritual things. He is wise who mixes reflective and meditative piety with efforts to do good and to communicate.

"I entered into thine house; thou gavest me no water for my feet." When may Christ be said to have been in our dwelling? How was it at the time of those special blessings, happy returns, great sorrows and joys? And how did we treat him? Was it thus? "My head with oil thou didst not anoint" "Thou gavest me no kiss." It seems that the Saviour looks for tokens of love, appreciates them, misses them.

Unless I make religion my great and engrossing concern, I shall be a stranger to all peace and enjoyment. I have at times caught a glimpse of the comfort which it yields to the spirit, when I merge my will into God's will —when I resolve to have no will of my own separate from God. I feel quite assured that this renunciation of self, and entire devotion to God's service, would give a simplicity and grandeur to my existence—would throw an unclouded sunshine over all my ways—would enhance even my sensible gratifications of a higher order, which constitute the main and essential blessings of heaven O my God! may it be thus with me! Call me out of darkness into thine own marvellous light. Give me to aspire after the graces, and hold forth to acquaintances, and above all, to my children, the example of righteousness! Conform to the gospel economy under which I sit, that as Christ died for my sin, I may die to it; that as he rose again, I may rise to a newness of life, and feel it is my meat and drink to do thy will.

The Weekly Pilgrim.

HUNTINGDON, PA. NOV. 3, 1874.

☞ How to send money.—All sums over $1.50, should be sent either in a check, draft or posta. order. If neither of these can be obtained, have the letter registered.

☞ When Money is sent, always send with it the name and address of those who paid it. Write the names and post office as plainly as possible.

Jumped a Number.

Last week through a mistake, we used No. 45 instead of No. 44, and as we cannot go back on time we have concluded to leave the sample No. fill the place of No. 44 and thus complete the volume, as heretofore, with No. 50. A number of our readers are calling for an index at the close of the volume. This we are now considering and expect to gratify our readers in this as well as in all other respects

What Shall We Have?

This is often made a question with us. Our readers are all anxious to read something that is good and interesting, but the wants appears to be so various that we scarcely know what to publish. If our brethren were not so fearful relative to having subjects fully discussed we would have no difficulty in filling our columns. But this kind if writing is objected to by many, and that too, by such as are slow to write themselves. Now brethren, a word to such. You, as well as we, wish an interesting paper, and to have that, we must have contributions of that character, and who is to produce it? Those that are interested in examining and discussing questions or subjects which they believe to be of vital importance to the church will most likely feel inclined to write on subjects of that character, therefore it remains for you who are differently inclined to give us something of a different character. Will you do it? Shall we have it? The subject of religion is so comprehensive that the themes for thought and profit are inexhaustible. God is in everything we behold and wherever we look we can see His handwriting, hence there is no part of His divine Law but what can be made a profitable subject for the exercising of our thoughts and talent. Our soul-cravings are many and various so that we will consider it no disgression from our established theology to over step the limits of the well beaten track and explore the new fields of God's wonders which are being laid open before us, or in the words of our Master, "bring forth things new and old." By this we want it understood that we do not wish all discussions, neither do we wish to cut off the privilege of free christian investigations. Let all things be done in order and moderation and write as the pressure of the spirit may dictate, not for personal aggrandizement, but for the good and prosperity of our Zion and the children of the kingdom.

Our Prospectus.

Next week we expect to send out our prospectus for 1875. We would have sent it out a week sooner but next week we intend to issue our sample copy of The Pilgrim for 1875 and want to send the prospectus with it. For some time we have been desirous of publishing a larger paper and to accomplish this, we proposed a consolidation of the two weeklies, but there seemed to be a difficulty in the way that we never could fully learn, and the project was abandoned. But we still have a desire to enlarge our paper and the only way we can afford to do it, is to secure a larger circulation. Believing that our brethren and sisters will appreciate our desire to improve, we have determined to run the risk and will enlarge and otherwise improve the Pilgrim, having already procured a complete new outfit and intend to change it to a sixteen page, thus making it more convenient for binding. We intend to make the pages two inches longer, making an aggregate of 32 inches, page wide, or equal to three and ½ pages more surface than any paper published by the Brotherhood. We do not say this by way of competition, as our papers were fully worth the price asked for them before, but we want to show our readers that we are determined to give them the greatest possible value for their money spent. By way of still further improvement in the way of correspondence, church news, &c., we are, and intend to make arrangements with some brother or sister, as a reporter, in every Church, to send us all the news, thus keeping our readers fully posted in regard to what is going on in the Church and religious world.

Some of our special friends fear that we cannot afford to put out a larger paper for so small a price. We can not well afford it unless our dear brethren, sisters and friends go to work and greatly increase our circulation which we feel sure they can and will do. There are other features which we think of introducing which we expect to talk of next week.

THE PASSING OF TIME.

Wherever we look around us we behold changes going on. A few short months ago our sky piercing mountains were decked in a most beautiful green, while the hillsides and vallies were made fragrant with charming flowers and delicious odor, but where is it now? Look around us again and all is gone—passed away. The beautiful green has changed to many a hue and the sweet scented flowers have fallen to the ground. Step by step, time has been carrying us along almost unperceived. We look back and count it over, June, July, on to November—six months have passed away and we feel as if it were but two, and even short ones at that. But notwithstanding the time may have seemed short to us, yet we must know that it was of its usual duration and that we lived and acted as we always did, and that the record will show whether for the good or for the bad. Oh, what wretchedly careless sinners we are, how profligate to our best interest and with what astonishing indifference we are willing to kill time. How many of us manifest that abiding faith in the great judgment as did the patient Job? "My witness is in heaven and my record on high." Do we believe or do we only half believe, or is our faith so befogged by the world's dazzle that we cannot get our eyes fixed upon the subject of our faith? We just read of a southern aristocratic family who through mismanagment and pride had nearly exhausted a large dowry left them by their parents. All seemed to be about gone, the father was unthrifty and indolent, the mother had never learned the duties of a housewife and the daughters had learned only to dance and play music. For a family of this kind to come to extreme want was a sad dilemma indeed, but it had come upon them and that too unprepared for. When every hope had fled and all were ready to despair, the father received a note, that in the far west a rich and childless relative wes expected soon to die and his fortune would be theirs. Did he believe it! did he awaken to the glittering fortune before him, and did he act? Do you suppose that his distressed family would continue on in the even tenor of their way from spring to autumn being satisfied to continue in their degraded condition when such a fortune was ready for them and waiting to be accepted? Not a bit of it. The father and daughters, with all possible haste, starts out for the coveted prize.

How different it is with many of us. In the springtime of life, while we were quite young, our Heavenly Father gave us great possesions, but soon we became profligate and proud and commenced wasting our fortunes in riotous living, little by little we craved of the portion that belonged to us and finally received it all. In a short time this too was nearly gone—and we became alarmed. Oh, what will we do? Father has given us our portion and we have left Him without any more to receive. Hunger, nakedness, and even death stares us in the face and we are ready to perish—but ah, we receive a message, a rich relative of ours has died (our Elder Brother, Jesus Christ) and has bequeathed to us a large fortune. Do we believe it? Oh, yes we believe it, but we are in no great hurry about it, we will thirst, we will hunger, and we will starve a while yet—after while will do. Notwithstanding the conditions of the Will is Now, yet since early springtime we have been waiting and risking. To many of us, the summer months are past and the autumnal frost have sprinkled our heads all over with gray, and still we are waiting and risking our all. Oh, dear sinner, soon will the wailing go forth, "the harvest is passed, the summer ieended and I am not saved."

For worldly fortunes, which can afford us enjoyment only for the moment, we are ever ready and willing to strive, but for the riches that are real, which are complete and eternal we are so slow to accept. It is not only made possible for us to reclaim them, but they are urged upon us. Our heavenly Father draws us. His Son intercedes and invites us, the Spirit also says "Come." The Church and its ministers are continually calling, in Christ's stead, "be ye reconciled to God," and Christian parents are pleading, and still some of us are inclined to remain obdurate and deaf to all entreaties, reject salvation and in its stead accept miseries that are untold. Why is it? It is not because we choose wretchedness rather than enjoyment, we all wish to be happy—all expect to be saved, but we are so full of worldliness and the things of time that our days pass as though we were asleep, and before we are aware of it, we find ourselves away down on the broad road that leads to destruction.

We can scarcely make us believe that summer is passed, and were it not for the frosty mornings, the changed appearance of things around us and the shrill whistling of the Northwestern, we would feel as if we were yet basking in the halcyon days of summertime.

Thus passes away the springtime and summer of our lives, and happy will it be for us if, in the midst of its charms and enjoyments, we have not forgotten our seed-time and harvest, so that when the winter of life sets in we may have our garners stored with the bread that nourishes and sustains the soul while passing through the dark valley of the shadow of death.

Come to Christ.

Rise, take up thy bed and walk.—John, 5:8.

In this command of Jesus we observe something which to this poor invalid must have been very remarkable indeed. For thirty-eight long years he had been disabled by an infirmity, so much so as not to be able to step into the pool at the troubling of the water without assistance; but now he is commanded to take up the couch upon which he was reclining and carry it! The idea of performing such a feat in so prostituted a condition must have appeared as an absurdity to the infirm man, but nevertheless he did as commanded, and as a result was made whole. Jesus had an object in giving this remarkable command which was, no doubt, two-fold. First to restore the man, and secondly to perform a miracle, in such a way, and at such a place and time as would exhibit his power. Thus it is with all his commands. They may be apparently absurd to us, but it should be remembered that God is too wise to err, and that all is done with an eye single to our highest good. It was so in the example under consideration.—The command itself was given thro' compassion for the suffering man, while the peculiarity of it was intended for the furtherance of the great work which it was his mission to perform.

From this invalid man we may glean a lesson, and one too, that may greatly further our interests in that inheritance which is incorruptible and fadeth not away. We may suppose if we were unable to walk for thirty-eight years, and some one would come along and tell us to take up our bed and walk, we would doubt our ability,—we would feel too weak for such an undertaking. We have however no evidence that this man expressed any doubt. He felt so sick that he was willing to make an effort to do anything that might restore him, and so should every sin-sick soul, no matter how weak or feeble he may feel, be willing to obey God's commands. The reason why sinners are so inclined to doubt the efficacy and propriety of some of God's commands is, perhaps, because they do not feel sick enough. If they truly felt their helpless condition they would not be so likely to doubt the propriety or efficacy of the prescribed means for their cleansing. Jesus said to the dangeter of Jairus, "Thy faith hath made thee whole." She had faith enough to believe that there was nothing impossible with Christ, and that if she could but touch the hem of his garment she should experience the virtue of Christ's healing power. In like manner the sinner, whose soul is diseased with sin, must feel that he is sick, and then by making application to the great Physician, with a true and living faith, he may be made whole. Some persons profess to have faith in Christ, but are not willing to apply the prescribed remedy for the cleansing of their souls. Such a faith may properly be termed a dead faith, and will not make its possessor whole. We must have faith enough to obey God's commands no matter how weak or feeble we may feel. Sinner, if you are burdened with a load of sin and guilt, even if it has been for thirty-eight long years, Christ says to you to-day, as he did to the infirm man, arise and walk in newness of life. You who are yet in your sins need not wait for the troubling of the waters, neither for any one to put you into them. Christ stands ready to heal you. He sees you toiling and laboring away down in the foul quagmires of sin and folly; he reaches forth his hand and through the spirit gently calls, come! O sinner, come! I will bring thee forth and lead thee into green pastures where thy soul shall be filled with fatness, and ever bask in the clear sparkling light of God's righteousness. But how many souls there are that notwithstanding the glorious privilege they enjoy of coming to Christ and being healed, prefer to go through life halt and lame and at last die! eternally die! Let me tell you, dear sinner, your condition is like that of the infirm man, and how ungrateful he would have been if he had not obeyed the command of Jesus. You who refuse the offers of mercy are manifesting an ungrateful, obstinate spirit. He calls you hourly and daily to come to him and he healed, yet you refuse, or like Naaman the prophet, desire to have your own way for it, and because the commands of God is not in harmony with your feelings, or your preconceived opinions, you disobey them. Oh, sinner remember that while God is a God of mercy, he also is a God of justice, and how fearful will be the retribution at the great day of final accounts. May God help you to consider this matter before it is too late.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

From Jerusalem to Jericho.

—o—

This is an interesting journey. We started from our encampment by the Jaffa gate, on the morning of March 16th, immediately after breakfast. We were provided with a guard of two rascally looking Arabs, armed with long muskets, furnished with old-fashioned flint locks. It took us seven or eight hours to make this trip, including stopages. Winding our way over Olivet, and passing through Bethany. . . . we plunged at once into the gloomy wilderness of Judea. As one has well said, "The road soon becomes dreary enough, running among white, desolate hills, and wild, rugged valleys, without a tree or shrub, or even a green grass-tuft. It would be almost insupportable, were it not for the associations, and a certain spice of danger—just enough to keep up the attention. Here and there the gleam of a match-lock catches the eye behind some projecting rock, or a tufted spear is seen winding suspiciously round the shoulder of a hill."

The road is a mere bridle path now, running through the dry bed of mountain torrents, then winding round the sides of the mountain and skirting along the edge of dizzy precipices. It is only roamed over by wondering Arabs; and unprotected travelers are sure to fall "among thieves," as happened to a "certain man" who "went down from Jerusalem to Jericho," in the days or our Savior's personal ministry. We had no experience of this kind ourselves. But the very next day, an English party, consisting of two gentlemen and a lady, going over the same ground were attacted by Arab thieves, "who stripped them" of all they had; but varied the ancient performance by not "wounding them and leaving them half dead." This party had a guard as we had; but those brave defenders, the moment the attact was made, ran away and kept out of sight till the robbers had taken all they could get and had disappeared. Some time after when the plundered party had resumed their journey, they met their valiant guard returning to give them a benefit of their protection again. On being reproached for their base desertion, they said they "had only gone to Jericho to try and get more help?"

These Arabs are a cowardly set of fellows. They stand in mortal terror of a revolver. As illustrative of this, I heard a good story of a brave-hearted American missionary, who was on a visit to Jerusalem. He made up his mind to go down to Jericho alone. In the wildest part of the road he was suddenly set upon by a company of six Arabs, who stood round him with their muskets pointing at him. Their leader motioned to him to deliver up his watch and money. He put his hand in his coat pocket, as they supposed to take out his pocket book. Instead of this, however, he drew forth a revolver of six charges. He held it before the leader, and pointing with his finger to let him know that there was one ball for him, and one for each of the others in his band, he then looked him steadily in the eye, for a few seconds, and they all quailed before him, and skulking away, left him to pursue his journey without further molestation.

We stopped at noon to rest and lunch at the ruins of an old Khan, once perchance an inn, like that to which "the good Samaritan" took his wounded "neighbor," where he left him in charge of "the host."

One of the most interesting points connected with this journey is the view it affords of "the brook Cherith," where the prophet Elijah was fed by ravens while the famine raged through the coast of Isreal, as we read in 1 Kings 17 : 1—7. I had always pictured to myself a solitary, shady glen as the scene of that remarkable incident in the prophet's experience. Then my fancy has been wont to locate the man of God in his loneliness, seated beneath his sheltering tree, on the pleasant bank of some murmuring brook. But how different from all this was the actual reality as verified by the scene here presented! In the very wildest part of this wild region is a deep mountain gorge. On the opposite side of the gorge from where he stood, the mountain rose up almost perpendicularly for hundreds of feet. We approached the edge of the ravine and looked down. What a scene is their represented to the eye! Rugged, grand, gloomy, awful, it seemed like a fit hiding place for such a prophet as Elijah, and must have been in striking harmony with the majestic sternness of his character. It was enough to make ones head dizzy to gaze down that appalling mountain chasm. The sides are almost sheer precipices of naked rock, occasionlly pierced by grottoes, apparently inaccessible to anything except the eagles that hover around them. And far down at the bottom of this ravine is a little thread of green skirting along where the brook flows by. And there it was that Elijah had hidden, while Ahab in his rage was seeking him through all the coasts of Isreal, and among all the neighboring nations.

Two thoughts are suggested by this matter. How easily God can hide his people, and how safe they are when He hides them! Here was Elijah dwelling for months but a short distance from the very capital of the kingdom, and yet so completely covered by God's sheltering wing that all the zeal and resources of his royal enemy failed entirely to find him. How true is it that "the beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him!"

And then how easily God can provide for the wants of his people, when he thus hides them! If we had looked down into that wild gorge and had been told that God was going to hide Elijah there for months, we might have said, "Very good indeed as a hiding place. The prophet will be safe enough there. No one would ever think of looking for a human being in such a scene of unrelieved desolation. But how can he live there?" To us this would have been an unsuperable difficulty. But to our covenant God nothing is difficult. Almighty in power and infinite in resources, he can never be at a loss to carry out his purposes. Look at the ravens at Cherith, bringing food to Elijah, morning by morning, and evening by evening, and what a striking illustration we have here of that sweet promise, "My God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus."

We shall not be able to reach Jericho this time. We must finish our present journey at "the brook Cherith," and take a fresh start from here next month.—Dr. R. Newton in S. S. World.

Correspondence.

Reporter is wanted from every Church in the brotherhood to send us Church news Obituaries, Announcements, or anything that will be of general interest. To insure insertion, the writers name must accompany each communication. Our Invitation is not personal but general—please respond to our call.

Brother Brumbaugh:—By your permission, I will give the readers of the PILGRIM a short account of a visit I made through part of Bedford and Blair counties.

On the morning of the 14th of Oct. I started for Yellow Creek Church, Bedford Co., Pa. After a pleasant ride over the Allegheny mountains, I landed safely in Altoona, thence to Roaring Springs where I was met by brother Jacob Horner, and conveyed to his home near New Enterprise, also near the Yellow Creek meeting-house. Thursday 15th, at 4 o'clock p. m., was the time appointed for their Lovefeast to commence, at which time a goodly number of brethren, sisters and friends were assembled together. The ministers present were George and John W. Brumbaugh of Clover Creek, John S. Holsinger and John B. Miller of Dunnings Creek; Henry Hershberger and others of Snake Spring and Hopewell, Bedford Co., and H. R. Holsinger of Berlin Somerset Co. Had a very good meeting, one added to the church, meeting next day at half past nine, also in the evening at Waterside.

On the morning of the 16th brother George Brumbaugh of Waterside gave us a seat in his buggy and landed us safely near the Clover Creek meeting-house, Blair Co. Soon after dinner, brother George W. Brumbaugh of Clover Creek gave us a seat in his buggy and we started for brother Joseph Snowberger's down Clover Creek, a distance of 9 miles. Meeting in the evening in a school house near by. The brethren lately built a very comfortable meeting-house near this place, and Sunday morning at 10 a. m. was the time appointed to open the house for the worship of God, at which time a large crowd of people were present. The ministers outside of the Clover Creek congregation were P. S. Myers of Spring Run; H. R. Holsinger of Berlin, and George and H. B. Brumbaugh of James Creek. Had a pleasant meeting. We also met at 7 p. m., after which P. S. Myers, George and H. B. Brumbaugh left us. We continued the meeting morning and evening until Thursday night. On Monday night brother L. Furry joined our number, or came to assist us. On Thursday three precious soul's were added to the church by baptism, and we think more were almost persuaded to be Christians.

During our stay among the brethren and friends at this place, we enjoyed ourself very much indeed, and only regretted that we had to take our leave of them so soon. On Thursday night after meeting brother Adam Smith took us in his buggy and landed us safely at his home in Williamsburg, which is a pleasant one indeed, however brother Smith, I have no doubt, feels somewhat lonely, as he has lately lost his wife. Early next morning, was by him conducted to the railroad depot, took a seat in the cars and soon found ourself on the way to the Duncansville church; landed at brother John Stiffler's. Here we again met brother Holsinger and wife. The brethren of this arm of the church have also lately built a new meeting-house and at 10 a. m. on the 23d was the time appointed to open the house for the service of the Lord, at which time I met brother Wm. Quinn of Tyrone. Although the congregation was not very large, we think we had a very good meeting. Brother Holsinger preached for us after which he started for Clover Creek. Also meeting in the evening. Saturday 24th, at 4 p. m. was the time appointed for their communion meeting. Shortly before that time there was one added to the church by baptism. During the evening services the house was uncomfortably full of people, and I was told a great many could not get in and went home, and with all this we had good order and a good meeting. Also next day at half past nine public preaching. A full house again, and an appointment made for the evening; after which we started for Altoona. By the kindness of Bro. Tobias Imler we were safely landed in the city in time for Sunday School. Also tried to preach in the Brethren's meeting-house in the evening to a very attentive congregation. Here we had the pleasure of meeting brethren Samuel Cox and Conrad Imler of Warriorsmark. Monday morning went out to Eldorado and spent part of the day pleasantly with some friends that formerly lived at Mineral Point, Cambria Co., Pa. In the afternoon had a pleasant talk with brother Grabill Myers and family, took a seat in the cars at 7 p. m., arrived home at 10, found all well, Thank the Lord. In conclusion brethren, sisters and friends, for your kindness you have my thanks.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

I thought that a few words of encouragment might b worthy of a place in the PILGRIM. I therefore take the opportunity to give a few words of encouragment, that our minds may be stirred up to their highest interest. We remember while Paul was preaching at Ephesus that a certain class of people that were worshipers of the great goddess Diana were stirred up to their highest interest, because Paul had persuaded many to believe on the Lord Jesus; and the worshipers of Diana were greatly enraged, fearing that Diana would come to naught, her magnificence destroyed, for by this goddess they had their wealth.

Brethren, when reading and meditating upon this portion of scripture, I was made to think that there is a great goddess Diana in the world in these last days, and many cry great is this Diana of ours! How mighty she is! how grand and sublime! how magnificent her temple! how mighty and powerful her worshipers! And those who make silver shrines for this goddess become enraged when they see one of its advocates drawn from the fold through the preaching of one of God's ministers. They begin to muster their forces against the sacred truths of God, crying, not only is the temple in danger, but the silver shrine; if we suffer this to come to naught our occupation is foiled.

Just withhold the mighty dollar and Diana would tumble down sure enough. Oh, brethren, when we see so many poor starving souls intoxicated under the influence of wickedness, it is high time that every servant buckle on his armor and meet the enemy on his own ground, and fight for the Lord of Hosts. Don't become frightened, but go forth as David did, in the name of the Lord. But sometimes the servant of the Lord becomes discouraged, the enemy seems too strong and he begins to retreat. He thinks his sword is too sharp, it only makes the enemy more enraged. Sometimes he thinks of a compromise in order to gain favor and then begins to blunt his sword, that it will not cut so deep as at first. Then he begins to polish his sermons, seeing that the effect produces fruit to his favor. This encourages a little, and by succeeding efforts he finds the means that has gained the favor of the enemy, and now knows what kind of food is required and how to distribute it. But don't make any compromise. Don't blunt the sword, but weild it by the help of God, and let it cut. The deeper the wound the greater the effect. Don't think of receiving any silver shrine from the great Diana. Just so soon as the ministers begin to receive one shrine they will want another. Feast on heavenly shrines. The more we feast on heavenly manna the more eager we work, and the greater our efforts and zeal becomes. The inducements are so great, the promises so sure and the blessings so lasting, that nothing can separate us from the love of God. As it is written, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of great joy." We are young in the cause ourself, and sometimes feel like giving the battle up, the victory over to the enemy, but when we look back to the trials of the faithful, and what they had to endure to gain heaven, and knowing that "we must through much tribulation enter the kingdom of heaven," and that every nerve must be employed in fighting the natural propensities in order to gain heaven, and that a failure in this will deprive us of receiving a part in the first resurrection, we become encouraged in our warfare, and when seeing so many aged brethren whose locks are getting white, contending so faithfully for the good old paths, we are made to rejoice that we still have fathers in Israel, instructing those of us that are young, entreating us to follow good old Paul as he followed Christ. Yes, fathers in Israel go on a few more days and your work is ended here, but thank God your influences will not be gone. The fruits of your labor are seen and felt. Then be not discouraged. Those tears that have often flowed on account of trials, disappointments and afflictions will all be wiped away; your rest will be complete; your happiness eternal. Oh, young brethren and sisters, be subject to the elders, walk in their foot-steps, encourage them for they encourage you. Remember their kind words, the tears they shed for you, the sympathy they have for you, the desire they have for your welfare, praying and crying mightily for you, that not one of you be lost. O, take heed, the enemy is gaining ground inch by inch. Do not give him the advantage, but come out conquerors through him that loved us and all will be well. BENJ. BASHOR.

Dear Pilgrim:—

Modesty is one of the chief ornaments in the Christian character. I do not write for your paper by jerks as I have been doing because of a thought that your readers will wonder about and think of me when I don't write. I can see no other cause for it than that which makes us all subject to moods, dispositions, and circumstances that come and go. I am not aware that my communications are appreciated much or little. I start them out pitying them as an affectionate father would, by reason of poverty, thrust his children out against a cold, cold world in order to save his own life. I do not profess to write expecting that my communications dare not be criticised or that I dare not be censured. A just criticism and censure of every human being upon the earth is an element in the mind of God. I claim the right—and I further claim that it is my duty to exercise that element in my judgement of the words and all other actions of all men; no matter in what position they are, or how high they are in authority. If I love my brother as I love myself I will in a generic way, allow him the same privileges which I take, and encumber him with the same duties that are encumbent upon me. Whenever I sacrifice truth to please any man, then I cease to be the servant of Christ, and so it is with every other pilgrim. On this line I expect by the help of God to fight it out, though my seat shall be like that of virtue, always the lowest at the table. J. B. GARVER.

MARMATON KAN.
November 1st 1874.

Dear Pilgrim:—

As we always love to read church news, and not seeing anything from this part lately, I have concluded that a few lines from us would not be amiss at this time. We held our Lovefeast on the 14th and 15th of October in the Yellow Paint Creek church. Elders Daniel and George Barnhart and Jesse Studebaker were present. The disunion that existed here in the church was done away with, and we hope brought to a terminus forever. All met in union around the table of the Lord, and there performed the ordinances of the Lord's house. We can truly say that we were very much refreshed in the inuerman, and made to rejoice at the feeling and charity there manifested among the members of God's householders. The union and fellowship that we had labored and prayed for was brought about, and as we were weak in the ministry (being alone) there was a choice held for a speaker and deacon. As the the vote for minister was a tie both were installed, viz: brother W. W. Reynolds and brother William Stockmire. Brother A. J. Cough was chozen for deacon, brother A. C. Numer reinstated in the ministry, and the writer, ordained or forwarded to the Eldership. There were two added to the church at our council, and much interest manifested at our Lovefeast among the spectators. The brethren labored hard and earnestly, and we trust their labors are not in vain. Paul can plant and Appolos water, but the increase comes from God, to whom we are indebted for all that we have and are. Many thanks to our brethren that labored for us. The Lord reward them. We desire and crave the prayers of our bretnren everywhere.

JOHN J. HOOVER.

Dear Pilgrim: — As I have not seen any report from our church for some time I will give you a little church news. With us the cause is still moving on, and souls are made to rejoice in God. Some are still willing to put on Christ in baptism as commanded by Christ and the apostels. We had a choice here in the Union-district Marshall county on the 12th of September and Bro. Jacob Appelman was elected to the ministry, being a worthy young brother in Christ, and brethren Aaron H. Kreighbaum and David Miller M. D. were elected as deacons. May the good Lord bless them in their high calling

Our communion meeting came to on the 16th of Oct. and was interesting and refreshing to the soul. There was a large crowd of people present, a great many members, and a good supply of ministers. Our meeting closed on Sunday eve. We had some sound and refreshing preaching by brother Jesse Calvert, George Cripe and others. May the Lord reward them for their labors.

There was five souls added to the church by baptism at these meetings. We pray that they may prove faithful until death.

DIED.

MISNER.—In the Yellow Creek Congregation, friend Mary Misner, aged 54 ys 5 months and 6 days. J. CALVERT.

SAGER.—In the Beaver Creek Congregation, near Ottohine Va., Abraham Sager, son of brother Jacob Sager deceased, departed this life October 18th '74, aged 41 years and 3 months. Funeral occasion by brother Martin Miller and Jacob Hedrie, from 1 Peter, 1: 24, 25.

S. N. WINE

MURRAY.—In the Yellow Paint Creek church, Bourbon Co., Kan., Oct. 24, '74, Lotella daughter of brother Clinton and sister Sue Murray, aged 1 year and 10 months.

Little Lotella had to suffer for several months until she became a mere skeleton. But God remembered her and ended her sufferings by calling her home to immortal glory. Then weep not, dear brother and sister, your darling child has only gone before and there awaits your coming. Prove faithful and soon you will be united, never more to be separated. Funeral occasion improved by the writer, from Matt. 19: 14.

MANSER.—Also, in the same congregation, Oct. 26, 1874 Charles Alfred, son of friend Moses Manser, aged 6 months and 14 days. Its mother died 6 months previous to its death. We hope that mother and son are now together in the paradise of God, while father and little daughter are still in this world of trouble, yet we know not how long. We would say to the father, serve God in all his appointed ways, and soon you will meet those whom you love, never more to be separated from them. Occasion improved by the writer, assisted by brother Humer, from 2 Sam. 12: 23.

FRANTZ. | Our dear father, Elder Abraham Frantz departed this life on the 28th of Sept. 1874, in the Logan Church, Logan Co., Ohio, aged 74 years, 9 months and 14 days.

On the 30th his remains were taken to the meeting house, followed by a large concourse of sympathizing friends, where a funeral was preached by Eld. J. N. Kauffman and brother Michael Swonger, from 2nd Timothy 4: 6, 7, 8th verses, then interred in the Brethren's burying ground near by. Peace to his ashes. Father leaves a side companion, sister in the church, 7 children and 20 grandchildren, and 5 great grandchildren to mourn their loss

He was born in Botatourt Co., Va., and came to Logan Co., Ohio, when about 18 years old. He was married to Catharine Houtz in 1824 who preceeded him about 30 years to the better world. He was the last surviving member of the first German Baptist Church ever constituted in Logan Co. Father was chosen deacon in the year 1127 and chasen minister in 1846, and ordained Elder in 1856. Father had been a great sufferer from Paralysis for about ten years. During this time he often expressed a desire to go home to his Savior, and during the last few weeks suffering intensely from a complication of diseases causing him to often pray that he might be delivered from this prison house of clay and be at rest in his Father's house. J. L. FRANTZ.

BEEGHLY.—In the Owl Creek Church, Knox Co., Ohio, Oct. 25 '74, sister Sarah E., wife of brother John Beeghly Jr., and daughter of Bro. Wm. A., and sister Eliza Jane Murray, aged 22 years, 1 month and 3 days.

Sister Sarah was born in the Legonier

Valley, Westmoreland county, Pa., Sept. 22, 1852. She removed with her parents to Wayne County, Ohio some six years ago, where she united with the church when as yet she had not wandered far from home. Subsequently the family removed to New Berlin, Stark Co. where she united in marriage with brother John Beeghly of Ashland Co., Dec. 25, 1873. Little did your correspondent think at that time when he saw her, the hopeful young bride, full of hopes and joys, he would so soon see her lying in the coffin and consigned to the solemn grave; but such was the case. Her parents had finally settled in the Owl Creek church in Knox Co., where she died and from where she was brought to Maple Grove meeting-house, Ashland Co., and by request the writer preached her funeral discourse from Heb. 9: 27, assisted by brother D. N. Workman. This took place on the day appointed for the Lovefeast at Maple Grove, and the funeral formed the opening exercises of the occasion. The congregation was unusually large and the mourners were many, but we are glad to say that they sorrowed not as those who have no hope.

Truly her life was a checkered one. She was born in Westmoreland County, Pa., baptized in Wayne Co., Ohio, married in Stark Co., died in Knox Co., and buried in Ashland Co. P. H. Brown.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Brother A. S. Lehman of Franklin Grove, Ill., has moved to Marshalltown, Iowa.

—We have been favored with a copy of Bro. M. M. Eshleman's "Vindication of True Vital Piety," but have not yet had time to examine it.

For several weeks the print of the Pilgrim has not been good, but we hope in the future this will not be so. Our press and rollers have not been in good trim. All will be right again shortly.

—On last Saturday, October 30th, a snow fell at Omaha, Neb. one and a half inches deep. We have had no snow but are having extremely smoky weather, so much so that it is getting to be unpleasant.

—Brother Bucher in last Companion calls for a series of articles treating on the best mode of properly raising children. This is an important subject and if some of our readers will favor us with some practical information on the same we will gladly publish it. He remarks, "I have known parents who were strong on these points and they conquered their children, * * but lost their love ever afterwards." Such a conquest we would call a signal defeat.

Those of our patrons who know themselves indebted for the Pilgrim, we kindly entreat to send it along, immediately if possible. If you can not pay us now please give us some satisfaction in reference to the matter. If we know that you are willing and intend to pay us, we are still hopeful, but when nothing is said, and we don't know whether you intend to pay, it is discouraging. Perhaps you intend to send it when you renew for next year and if so, it will be all right.

—Next week we expect to supply all of our former agents with a prospectus. If any should be missed they will please inform us of it at once and we will supply them. To all others who will be so kind as to take an agency and gather subscribers for us we will gladly furnish them with a prospectus, containing terms to agents, &c., free of charge. We are considerably enlarging the Pilgrim without raising the price, and hope thereby to obtain an enlarged circulation and therefore shall feel grateful to all who may favor us with their assistance.

—Brother J. D. Troutle, under date of October 28, says:

I was permitted to spend some nine days with the brethren in the valley of Va. I attended three Lovefeasts, on the 17th and 18th at Bro. George Shaver's former charge. This church has a gloom hanging over it, in consequence of its overseer being mentally afflicted. It became necessary to take him to Stanton, where he is well cared for. The family and church need and desire the prayers of the brotherhood. On the 20th at Linville Creek, where I met with many of the children of God. There I had the pleasure of meeting brother C. G. Lint on his way home from a tour of four weeks. This house is 30x45 feet and did not accommodate near all the members. Attended meeting in the Flat Rock district. On the 24th and 25 Lovefeast in Paul's Fort where Bro. Wm. Peters resides, the second Lovefeast held in their new meeting house, had a very attentive congregation, much love manifested. The churches seem to be prosperous and the brethren active in the cause of Christ, opening out new fields of labor, enlarging the borders of Christ. Oh, that there might be still greater efforts made, for there is no doubt many other "Julia A. Wood's" who are longing and praying for the "Light." With much love I am your brother in Christ.

Brother. S. Z. Sharp of Marysville, Tenn. says: "Our lovefeast on the 17th inst. was not only an occasion of unusual refreshing for the members but nearly all present seemed deeply impressed with the solemnity of the occasion and the effect I hope will prove beneficial to the souls of some at least.

An election was held for a minister and a deacon. For minister the lot fell on Bro. N. B. Sherfy and for deacon on Bro. Jos. Frye.

Last Sabbath one was buried with Christ by baptism. More are almost persuaded to come."

Bro. J. S. Flory says: "We have no special news of interest to communicate. Some of the members that had taken temporary leave of the valley have returned, had a full turnout of the members at our last meeting. We are all well and in good spirits. Have a beautiful fall, but little frost yet. Stock is in fine condition. Buffalo are being slaughtered by the hundreds. The Pilgrim comes regularly, no visitor is more welcome, always bearing good tidings and news of interest. Long may it thrive and prosper.

—The Methodist Ministers' Convention in Pittsfield has been discussing the question of advertising church services in the newspapers. It was agued against the practice by several ministers that people would often attend church in answer to an advertisement rather to be amused than to receive good, and that it excited sensationalism in preachers. Others believed that judicious announcement in the advertising columns of the press was the only practical way of reaching the public. No formal expression of opinion could be agreed upon by the Convention.

—The washing of feet before the administration of the Lord's Supper, which is an old practice of the Menonites, is also observed by the Winchenarians, a recent sex whose members are mostly in Penn-sylvania. A correspondent of the Evangelist thus describes the scene as it was witnessed by him in Pittsburg: "Those desiring to participate in the observance of the ordinance occupied front seats, and were waited upon by a brother and sister, who each took a pail of water, and an apron (more after the style of an ancient girdle) served the purpose of a towel. One by one they bathed the feet of each and dried them with the girdle." After the washing the kiss of peace is given. The Pope also washes the feet of twelve poor men once a year; the same custom has been observed by the emperors of Austria.—Christian Standard.

Wealth of the Ancient Hebrews. —In the times of David and Solomon gold existed in immense quantities among the Hebrews. The figures given in the Old Testament appear almost fabulous. From 1 Chron. xx: 14, we learn that David had collected together for the purpose of the Temple building a hundred thousand talents of gold and a thousand thousand talents of silver; and from I Chron xxix: 3, we learn that over and above this enormous amount, he contributed from his own possessions three thousand talents of gold and seven thousand talents of silver; whilst the people in addition offered," for the service of the house of God, five thousand talents and ten thousand drachms of gold, and of silver ten thousand talents. From this data the total value of the gold and silver has been calculated at nearly five thousand million dollars.—The Bible Educator.

—Full reports of the Old Catholic Congress in Friedburg show that there was an attendance of 200 delegates. The Congress declared that it was the duty of the Government to ascertain how many Catholics there were by making the electors of all the communes vote on the question of the recognition of the infallibility of the Pope. Bishop Reinkins, at public meetings and elsewhere, declared fully his views of the "church of Christ." He said that the hierarchy was not the church of Christ; that the church consisted of the society of believers, that it does not save men, but is saved itself, that Christ is the only mediator between God and man, and he only can save, and that the bishop is the only representative of the church over which he presides.

—The Roman Catholic priests in Germany have in several instances evacuated churches the joint use of which, according to a practice not uncommon in that country and Switzerland, has been extended by municipal or other authorities to the Old Catholics. The chaplain of a hospital at Pforzheim has been dismissed by the Baden government for refusing to officiate in the church attached to the institution, on account of its having been used by the Old Catholics. The Old Catolic priest was appointed in this place, but some of the attendants refused to conduct Catholic inmates to the service. This shows the irreconcilable hostility of the Old Baptists to the Old Catholics.

—A Thieving Pastor.—The Rev. M. Craig, a Methodist divine, who is at present the pastor of a church in Evansville, Wis., has been arrested for the larceny of books from the store of Des Forges and Lawrence. He has been in the habit of visiting Milwaukee frequently during the last year or two, and various booksellers here have, soon after his calls upon them, noticed that several costly books were missing. Des Forges, not wishing to accuse the clerical individual of thefts without proof, concluded to catch him in the act, if possible. He appeared in the store yesterday, was well received, and allowed to step behind the counter for the purpose of examining the newest publications. A clerk was detailed to watch him, and when he left the store he reported that several books were taken by the preacher. Des Forges followed and had him arrested. About $15 worth of books were found upon his person. He admits his guilt, but says nothing in extenuation of it. It is understood that he has an extensive library at home, which was undoubtedly procured by theft from Milwaukee booksellers, as some one has carried on the larceny business very successfull in the book house for a long time, and this man appears to be the person to whom the crimes will all be laid. He is now in jail there. He has a wife and and child, and is about forty years of age. His library will be examined by detectives and the stolen property claimed, if it is possible to recognize it now.

Going To Law.

A farmer cut down a tree which stood so near the boundary line of his farm that it was doubtful whether it belonged to him or his neighbor. The neighbor, however, claimed the tree, and prosecuted the man who cut it, for damages The case was continued from court to court. Time and money were wasted, temper soured and temper lost, but the case was gained by the prosecutor. The last of the transaction was, the man who gained the cause came to a lawyer to execute the deed of his whole farm, which he had been compelled to sell to pay his costs! Then houseless and homeless, he could thrust his hands into his pockets, and triumphantly exclaim, "I've beaten him!"

This reminds us of a little story. Fourty-three years ago a young man was teaching a country school. He had not been in the place one quarter before he had acquired a reputation for knowing more than he did know, but he was wise enough to take no pains to disabuse the popular mind of the favorable impression. If there was one study that he was more deficient in than another, it was surveying. But he taught it as well as he could, and his pupils learned. Two farmers had a chronic dispute as to the line between their lands, and for many years they had contended as to the right of possession in a little strip. Both of them were warmly interested in the young school teacher, and in a happy moment it occurred to them to ask him to examine their titles and maps and decide as to the true running of their dividing line. He took the papers, gave "his whole mind" to the question, made a map with the line where he believed it should be: both parties accepted it, set their fence according to it, lived in peace, and to this day, after the lapse of nearly a half a century, the schoolmasters line is undisturbed, though the lands have changed hands frequently. The line will doubtless never be disturbed. How much better is this than to go to law, consume their property in vexatious litigation, alienate families, fret themselves, and bequeath a feud to successive generation. Both the farmers have long since gone to sleep with their fathers, but the young scholmaster, who judged between them, lives to make this the first record of his decision. —N. Y, Observer.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

To Exterminate Rats.—A correspondent of the Tribune says: Take copperas, the quantity to depend upon the number of buildings or places infested, pulverize it very fine; and be sure and sprinkle some in all the buildings—in a word, wherever they congregate—and in a few days all the rats will be gone. This is very simple and easily tried, and has proved completely successful several times at different places. No rat has been seen three days after a thorough application.

Farmers' Children. Every girl and every boy should have the care of something belonging to him or her, to raise, or cultivate, or improve. When there is plenty of room, as on a farm, boys should own a horse or a cow, or have a portion of the garden to cultivate. Girls should be allowed to possess a beehive, or a certain number of hens, or fruit-bearing vines; something of value, that by care and proper cultivation increases and returns a value for itself. Children will acquire an interest in and derive a happiness from this form of industry that will repay the effort and trial.

Waste Nothing.—The Chinese, more than any other people, have reduced the saving of fertilizers to a science. It is well known that they scrupulously save, disinfect, and put to valuable use every particle of offal. In no other way could their land be so enriched as to support its teeming inhabitants. Liebig traced the primal fall of Rome to the building of her great sewers, which conducted to the Tiber fertilising material which should have been applied to her soil. It was the lack of breadstuffs, consequent upon the poverty of the arable lands, which drove the Romans to foreign conquest, and ended in the overthrow of their own liberty. Our people are wasting every day substances, which, if properly utilized, would save them many a dollar and much tribulation.

A Doubtful Case.—The Agriculturist, in reply to a correspondent, said: We should hesitate to advise a man with a young family, and possessing but $800, to buy a farm in the East, which is most likely badly run down, for $3,000, in the expectation of making a living and paying for the farm out of the crops. There are some men who might succeed, but these are very few, and the probabilities are very much against a success. We should also hesitate very much to advise such a person to go west, if he can make a living where he is at a mechanical trade. Although a soldier's homestead can be procured for nothing, yet the care of a young family would be a serious burden in a new unsettled country to a man with such scanty capital. The far West is for enterprising young men without families, or older men with plenty of help, or for persons with money sufficient to carry them over the unproductive period. A worn-out farm in the East requires money and skill to restore it, and skill is a greater necessity and a rarer possession than money.

Weeds on the Road Side.—There is a law in New York, we believe, that requires every road-master to see that the weeds along the roadside in the district over which he has jurisdiction are cut twice a year—that is twice during the season of growth. In some road districts and by some road-masters this duty is performed faithfully; but by the large majority no attention is paid to it.

Every good farmer is interested in the faithful enforcement of this law; because the roadsiders are great weed breeders and disseminators, unless they are carefully kept clean in the manner described. The question of the tidy appearance of the road-side is a secondary consideration. It is not probable that the law originated in the motive of tidiness, but as an economical measure—a means of protecting careful farmers from carelessness or slovenliness of untidy neighbors.

Attention is therefore called to the fact that every road-master's warrant does or should contain this as one of his specified duties; and that if he does not discharge it he should be complained of to the road commissioners of the town.—N. Y. World.

Historical Charts of Baptism.

A complete key to the history of Trine, and the Origin of Single Immersion. The most interesting reliable and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22x28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting at a single glance the impossibility of single immersion ever having been, the Apostolic method. Single copy, $0.50. Four copies, $1.50. Sent post-paid. Address

THE NEW IMPROVED
Remington Sewing Machine.
AWARDED
THE "MEDAL FOR PROGRESS,"
AT VIENNA, 1873.

The Highest order of "Medal" Awarded at the Exposition.

No Sewing Machine Received a Higher Prize.

A FEW GOOD REASONS:

1. A new invention thoroughly tested and secured by Letters Patent.
2. Makes a perfect lock stitch alike on both sides, on all kinds of goods.
3. Runs Light, Smooth, Noiseless and rapid—the best combination of qualities.
4. Durable—Runs for years without repairs
Will do all varieties of work and fancy stitching in a superior manner.
6. It is the most easily managed by the operator. Length of stitch may be altered while running, and machine can be threaded without passing thread through holes.
7. Design simple, ingenious, elegant, forming the stitch without the use of Cog Wheel Gears, Rotary Cams or Lever arms. Has the Automatic Drop feed, which insures uniform length of stitch at any speed. Has our new thread controller, which allows easy movement of needle-bar and prevents injury to thread.
8. Construction most careful and finished. It is manufactured by the most skillful and experienced mechanics, at the celebrated Remington Armory, Ilion, N. Y. Philadelphia office, 810 Chestnut Street.

The Prayer of The Destitute.

"He will regard the prayer of the destitute, and will not despise their prayer." Ps. 1 : 17.

My land lies fallow, Master, till me!
My heart lies empty; Master fill me!
It plays the traitor; Master win me!
It faints, it dies! Put new life in me!
It goes astray, good Shepherd lead me!
It sighs for hunger; come and feed me!
It is so poor! Oh, give me riches!
It is corrupt: O Lord renew me!
So ignorant! Oh wilt thou teach me?
Has wandered far. But thou can'st reach me!
Is sore diseased; Physician, heal me!
Exposed to danger; Oh, conceal me!
It trembles! In thine arms, oh, fold me!
Begins to sink! O Savior, hold me!
Is sinking fast! Lord look upon me!
So cold and dark! Oh, shine upon me!
A poor lost sinner! Come and find me!
A rebel! May thy love now bind me?
A prodigal! wilt thou receive me?
A beggar! Oh, wilt thou relieve me?
A backslider! Wilt thou restore me?
Unholy! May thy presence awe me!
Unfit for life! O God, prepare me!
So weak! On eagles' wings, oh bear me!
So comfortless! Lord Jesus, cheer me!
So lonely! God of love draw near me!
By sin accursed! Good Lord acquit me
Unfit for heaven's pure service! Fit me!
Unfit for work on earth! But use me!
A suppliant! Do not thou refuse me!
Oh, come and fill the hungry with good things;
For thou hast all I need, thou King of kings!

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

BE YE SEPARATE.

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

"For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolator hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ, and of God, 'for I wrote to you in an epistle not to company with fornicaters.' Neither 'shalt thou make any covenant with them; nor show mercy unto them,' but 'come out from among them,' and 'be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth, with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you."

"Depart from evil and do good, seek peace and pursue it." "Wash you, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes, cease to do evil: learn to do well: seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless plead for the widow," for "pure religion pure and undefiled before God and the Father is this. To visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

"For this, thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness. Thou shalt not covet, and if there be any other command it is briefly comprehended in this saying: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. And knowing the time that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed, the night is far spent, the day is at hand, let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light."

Let us walk honestly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof." But "be ye kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another, rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation, continuing instant in prayer, distributing to the necessity of the saints, given to hospitality."

"Recompense to no man evil for evil, provide things honest in the sight of all men."

Finally, "let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." "Having your conversation honest," "for so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men," for "what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness." "As free, and not using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God." "Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God." J. B. Lair.

Answer to Query: "What is the difference between the Soul and the Spirit?"

Different, correct answers may be given and received to this query, owing to the wide gulf which the word difference overleaps as it stands in the sentence. They will however, thus be fragments of the whole answer for which we ought to seek and ask. The soul and the spirit are two distinct elements of the immortal part of man. They are divided asunder by "the word of God," in the 43d, 44th and 45th verses of the 12th chapter of Matthew, also in the 45th verse of the 15th chap. of 1st Corinthians, and in many other portions in connection with the whole. The difference between two elements that comprise anything is discovered by dividing them asunder, and comparing a correct knowledge of the different properties belonging to one with that of those belonging to the other. In the first portion of Scripture referred to, one of three distinct elements of the 'loan'—the spirit went out, away from the other two,—the soul and body. In order to obtain a correct knowledge of this element of that man, we must follow it, so to speak, into the "dry places" and learn that they mean the powerless condition of the spirit when it is separated from the soul, that evil works are not the spirit, but the effects of it, that it can cause no effects while it is "walking to and fro seeking whom it may devour" until it finds a soul which it can enter, where its office is to destroy both "soul and body in hell." These are some of the conditions and powers or properties that belong to the evil spirit when it is in or out of the soul. The house is the body or material part and the soul is located immediately between the body and the spirit. The emptiness of the house, the swept and garnished conditions of it, the state of the man before the unclean spirit went out of him; his state after the wicked spirit entered into him and and the state of one in whom the good spirit dwells, are the conditions and properties of the soul when it is separated from or joined to the spirit.

In the second portion of the Scripture referred to, the soul is divided asunder from the spirit by the declaration that the culminating point of the first creation was "a living soul," and that of the second was "a quickening spirit," that the first creature or living soul became inhabited by a spirit whose tendencies were to produce its death and destruction, and that the second creature or the "quickening spirit" should inhabit the first creature or the living soul, and quicken it into an eternal life. The dividing asunder of the evil spirit from the soul, and the joining of the good spirit with it, is the great redeeming power and the work of God and his ministers. I will close the analysis here, hoping the Bro. will understand the query sufficiently to enable him to continue an edifying investigation. Should he desire closer definitions through the Pilgrim, let him ask for them. There are brethren who can give them. Should he or another have, or think he has a better answer than the above, I assure him there is at least one brother suspicious of such possibilities. J. B. G.

Allen Pa.

More Religion.—Christ calls for witnesses; saved men are the true evidences of his power to save. Holy men are unanswerable arguments; more faith and love among ministers and people would convert sinners by the thousand. When ministers are fully saved, they can preach salvation most effectually. When the churches are filled with the Holy Spirit the ungodly confess that God is among them of a truth. The great need of our day, and of every other day, is more religion to to save men. How much divine power it is possible to possess, we do not know. We certainly can have a large increase if we will accept it. If our editors were clothed with more spiritual power so as to reveal Christ more fully in what they write; if ministers were filled with the Spirit so as to preach Christ more fully, and manifest his love in daily life; if Christians generally were as holy as Christ can make them, unbelief would yield to the gospel like frost before the sun. Full salvation in the churches will save the world.

When we read we fancy we could be martyrs, when we come to act we cannot bear a provoking word.

The eyes of a Christian should be like sunflowers, open to no blaze but that of the sun.

God sends his rain in gentle drops, else flowers would be beaten to pieces.

An Address upon the Organization of the first Church in Colorado.

An organization being effected Elder J. S. Flory in substance addressed the meeting as follows:

Dear brethren and sisters I hope the meeting we have had to-day will long be remembered as an event of signal importance. We are engaged in a noble work. A work that tones to our present and eternal welfare. Like causes will produce like effects. Our minds have been somewhat running back to the days of the apostles who had received the great commission, "Go ye into all the world." There was a cause why they should go in obedience to that important injunction. They went, and the result or effect of their preaching was men and women believed and churches were established "in the faith" in various parts of the then civilized world. The word of God was glorified. In the establishing of those churches we notice the same rule of practice in the keeping of the ordinances and commandments characterized them all. This oneness existed among them from the fact that they were governed by the one rule of faith such as "was delivered to the saints." We have the same rule to-day and by that we must walk if we would prosper. We maintain there is but one order of divine service. God having given no plurality of ways to worship him according to our faith, opinion or convenience, then how dare we assume to take any such privileges in things that pertain to church government. We conscientiously claim we have no such right, therefore in our organization and practice we must be governed by one general order of the church, especially when we find all is in harmony with the gospel. We are pledged to our God, to the Church and our convictions to stand by the "old landmarks" let our surroundings be as they may. The Word of God was not given in such terms that we may bend it to suit our changes and the times, but it is "the same yesterday, to-day and forever." What is right to enforce in the East is right to live up to here in the West, true Christianity is the same the world over.

When we see how the Kingdom of Christ here on earth is prospering —spreading her healing wings over the land we are made to rejoice. We may cast our mind's eye back to that handfull of the faithful fleeing, from persecution—landing in the "New World," settling down near the Eastern shore of this Continent, where Atlantic's waves have long washed the beach—and see how, from the small beginning, true religion by the mercy of God rolls onward. Westward the empire of Jesus spreads, State after State and Territory after Territory hear the gladsome sound, even California and Oregon hear the sweet melody of the song of Redemption. From ocean to ocean the "banner" has been lifted up. But like the great Railroad that connects the West with the East, spanning with a long bound the "desert" center of the Union, so the extending arms of the spreading church of God leaped over this part of God's domain To-day by the mercies of God, it is our privilege, brethren and sisters, to plant the standard of the cross of Christ here Few in number, yet enough, assisted by the strong arm of God, to lift up the "banner." We need not be discouraged, "great oaks from little acorns grow" so from small beginning great things may be accomplished. We look back scarcely 20 years when we were yet in our teens and see the pioneers of the church, few in number, meeting to worship their God in Iowa; and some of those same pioneers we see here to-day. At that time but one Elder in the State, to-day we see the State dotted with many branches of the Church of God and the membership known by the hundreds.

We hope we all feel and will continue to feel the great responsibility that surrounds us, and will appreciate the great blessings of God showered upon us. In a moral point of view, as otherwise, we may, by the grace of God, make the "wilderness" or ("desert") "blossom as the rose." Oh that our daily influence might be such that we may be a light to the world and hold forth that "old-time" religion so many are beginning to pine for. Nothing is of so much importance as an unfeigned love one toward another, and above all true love to God. Where love predominates all self-will will vanish, we will esteem others above ourselves. Love casteth out stubborness, indifference and the spirit of inconsistency, therefore we will cheerfully and meekly conform to the order of the church. If the eminent apostle Paul with a heart full of love for the church did condescend to speak of bodily apparel, shall we be of too exalted a mind to speak of it? All the scoffs and jeers about there being "no religion" in dress never has or never will make it otherwise than the outward is significant of what is within. The spirit of insubordination in the heart is easily discernable by the outside evidence, and on the other hand the spirit of obedience (characteristic of Christ) is also known by the exterior appearance and conduct Consistency is indeed a Christian jewel. To profess to hold the doctrine of nonconformity to the world and at the same time practice "conformity" to the world and nonconformity to the church is inconsitency indeed! The spirit and practice of disobedience to even the least of the regulations of the church leads, as a general thing, to trouble, loss of confidence, while there is nothing of worth in a religious point of view to be gained. We should study more how to please God and the church by a life of consistency rather than how to please ourselves and evade the responsibility resting upon all. If the time that is often taken in hunting excuses to justify disobedience was taken in learning of Jesus, a much higher state of holiness might be attained.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us all in the outset here be of one mind, let uniformity and consistency to our profession be a matter of solemn duty. If we start right we are more apt to keep right, and in our petition as well as to-day we agreed to be governed by the rules of the church so long as they are in the channel of true religion. We hope by the grace of God we shall have such a care one for another as to labor for each other's good in our spiritual pilgrimage. By this it is implied I will try to do my duty, not as a lord over God's heritage, but in meekness and love in the capacity of a servant try to admonish you in every needed work, and deal out the word of God as he may give me grace and ability, and you will make the preached word effective by living up to all the requirements of the gospel, or in other words "practice what we preach."

I wish to say a few words yet in regard to myself. When I gave up the responsible position of having, in a great measure, the care of a congregation in the East it was not my expectation to accept the Eldership over another. I have no desire or ambition in that direction. Believing every man's destiny is marked out, and sometimes by special Providences, we can have a foreknowledge of what the Lord would have us do. We feel that in another capacity we will probably best fulfil the destiny marked out by the finger of God for us. We had hoped some other more worthy would be here to take more special charge of the church, and when such an one cometh we shall willingly give him the responsible position, yet we hope to retain our home among you, and for the present we will shrink no duty incumbent upon us but do the best we can by the grace of God.

Our Differences.

Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob.—Is, 41; 21.

That we do differ in opinion is a fact beyond doubt, and that we have a right to differ is equally as true, yet I wish to be properly understood in regard to this matter. We do not want to differ from our brethren in regard to our faith, neither about anything that we have a thus saith the Lord for, but in regard to matters of opinion, there is no known rule whereby we know how to conform our opinions that we will not differ.

We being free agents, required to act according to our ability to understand, we naturally form opinions according to our understanding. The next man will examine the same subject and form a different opinion to that of ours, now we differ, our difference may not be very material yet it is difference enough that we would like to reconcile it. How are we to do it? The great cry is "the world should not know our difference." Why not? If we differ somebody is wrong. Must the wrong one continue in error lest the world or somebody should find out that he is in error? Those who think we should not differ, will they tell us how to do if we have an opinion. Will they at once agree with us for the sake of not having any difference. I have grave doubts if they would, but I incline to the opinion that they hold their opinion sacred, and the reason that they do not want any difference is because they hold their opinion absolute and do not want anybody to take the liberty to differ from them.

But pardon, may have been too fast in making the assertion, but then "bring forth your strong reasons" why we should not differ. Please do not say that papers should not be published because there is difference of opinions published. That would not be according to our age, but would be driving us back to the dark ages when Catholics held the sway, and it was death by the law to express an opinion different to their creed.

I for one believe that the liberty to differ is not only a privilege but a great good. We may form an opinion and it may be erroneous, and if we dare not differ we may forever remain in the error and it may prove very serious to us too in the end, but when we see another's opinion we may at once see our error, and if we differ can we not differ as brethren? Have we not enough of the divine love in us that we can consider a little, or will we gird on the armor of carnal warfare and settle it at the point of the sword, and then the best man's reason prevail. "Let us reason together," weigh the matter, "produce your cause, bring forth your strong reasons" and if you find you are right, after you have laid aside your self-will, your reasoning may have done much good, and those that differed from you may have been greatly benefitted, but if you find you are wrong would you not willingly renounce your wrong opinion for a right one? Methinks you would gladly.

A sister in No. 40 of the PILGRIM seems to indicate, that some things they don't like, they want articles more edifying. The very same things that the sister thinks are not edifying may be the most edifying to others and vise versa. These are the points of difference. How shall any person tell what to write that would edify everybody? How shall any Editor know what would please everybody and displease nobody? That would be an impossibility. Jesus Christ failed to do that little thing and how shall mortal man accomplish what the Lord failed to do? Are we not charitable enough to bear with these things trusting that they edify others if they do not edify us, or will we be so tyranical as not to yield our opinion nor allow others to differ from us? Another will say, "Some write for popularity." Who knows that to be a matter of fact. That is a matter of opinion only, and I might take the liberty to differ, and say that the child of God could be guilty of doing a thing that would be of no more honor to his God than that. Suppose some person would assert that that brother preached not from a sense of duty, but "for popularity," he might think it to be rather a bold assertion. Is is any less so?

Now seeing that we do differ, and knowing that we will differ, let us know the difference, and let us know who will not yield his wrong opinion for somebody's right one, then we will at once know who wants to differ, and who does not. The difference of opinion has caused many wars, but the proper adjustment of them has maintained lasting peace. J. B. LAIR.

FAMILY GOVERNMENT.

Since a call has been made for something on family government, I will make an attempt to drop a few hints on this very important duty.

We are taught to provoke not our children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. In the first place it is all important the we ourselves walk according to the above admonition. I deem it folly to try to teach our children what we ourselves do not practice. Children are close observers and frequently notice things that we ourselves overlook, consequently while we watch over our children, we have double cause to watch over ourselves, One of our highest duties is to pray for them in our private devotions, with our conduct so that we can also consistently pray for them in their presence in our family worship, and wherever it may be our lot or duty to pray. In all this we need that wisdom that is from above. Brother Bueher in the Companion hints about parents who force their children with unfavorable results. I too, know such parents who in their over zealousness forced their children into certain rules, styles of dress, &c., until they grew up out of their power, then they seemed to be quite wild and ungovernable, and had lost all respect for their parents and their humble religion. So their plan of family government, to a great extent, was a failure.

When I entered upon the duties of bringing up a family, I adopted a somewhat different plan from many others and I think it has so far proved a pretty fair success.

First, I very rarely resort to the old custom of chastising, or punishing the children, only in cases of direct disobedience to clearly given orders. Then after chastisement I speak to them as pleasantly as though nothing had happened.

My principal means of persuasions are, talking to my children. I talk to them I think more than most parents do, on different subjects, explain to them their duties towards God and man, then I explain to them many little things that children ought to know. Then I also give them explanations on such subjects as history, Bible history, astronomy, natural history, incidents of my own boyhood days, &c. Such talks with the children become very interesting to them. In this way I am part of their company, and a counselor with them in their little undertakings. I believe in making them do some work such as they are able to do. When they are careless I reprove them, when they are faithful I approve of it in their presence. When a little one brings a drink of water, or the like, I think it is a sample of good manners for them to bow if we thank them, it also tends to encourage them. In this way we win their confidence, and they will let us know all they know, which gives us a chance to counsel them in whatever they undertake. Children have also their wants, and my plan is to gratify them once in a while, when consistent with our abilities, but when their wants are not proper to be complied with they ought to be promptly refused, and reasons given why they cannot be granted. Then I supply them with reading matter of which they generally soon become very fond. Besides some books, I furnish them with newspapers, the Pilgrim, Vindicator, Child's Paper, Scientific American, American Agriculturist, and Neutralist. Some parents think it wrong to give children anything but scriptural reading matter, but I think if we expect them to be useful in the world, we must give them a chance to gather a reasonable amount of general information, then by observing the above set forth rules in our families, I for one believe our children will respect us and our faith at least more than any other, and when they set out to serve God they will very seldom make choice of any other church.

With this I will close, desiring to hear from other brethren or sisters, what their plans and views are on family government. By so doing we may learn of each other.

JESSE Y. HECKLER.

Mt. Carroll, Ill.

The Danger of Wealth.

Few lessons in the Bible make so little impression upon the minds of people, as our Lord's warning; "how hardly shall they that have riches enter the kingdom of heaven." We dislike to say He was mistaken, or that He was unduly severe; indeed we profess to believe it as regards some rich people, but as to ourselves "why what an amount of good we could do if we were only rich." So we give ourselves up to the work of making money and saving it, (very honourably it may be, as the world talks,) and think no more of Christ's warning than if it were the grumbling of the beggar that has been turned away from our doors, with not quite as much as he expected. But if Christ was anything more than an impester, we may fix it firmly in our minds, that it is impossible for a rich man to enter heaven. Three times is the story of the rich man repeated in the gospel; does not this show us there are lessons which demand special attention, and that this is one of them? Here was a young man, evidently as moral and correct a man as any one, desiring to know what he must do to obtain eternal life; moved to some degree of interest about eternal things, yet kept away from life by money! And three times is this fact made known to us. Many are ready to give up everything for Christ but one; and for that one they lose their souls. Herod heard John the Baptist gladly, and did many things; but one thing he would not do, he would not give up Herodias; this one sin cost Herod his soul. And there are many rich men who cannot give up their wealth to save their souls.

The reasons why wealth is so dangerous, are because it inclines its possessor to pride, to self-will, to self indulgence and to love of the world.

Now how hard it must be for a poor human being thus tempted; to be humble, lowly and self-denying.

Yet without these graces there can be no piety. And an other difficulty the rich man is seldom dealt with faithfully about his soul. He is flattered; few have the courage to tell him the whole truth His good points are exaggerated; his bad excused. The result is, that while his heart is engrossed by the things of the world, his eyes are blind to his true condition; is it a wonder, therefore, that the salvation of a rich man is difficult?

"Doubtless to others; or as an abstract question; but not for me. Am I not a preacher of the gospel; or a member of the communion of the church of Christ; and do I not give away O several hundreds of dollars? Indeed the plate is never presented to me in church, that I do not contribute—well, quite liberally."

Yes—even to you comes this saying of the master; "how hardly shall they that have riches enter the kingdom of heaven." Our Lord does not say it is impossible. There are some men of wealth, yea and women too, who live plainly and meekly; whose tempers are like those of Christ; who give away of their own means in proportion to their wealth, and who are examples to us all. But these are the very few. They run fastest who carry little weight. Riches drag down to the earth; let us not strive after them; they may ruin our souls and they will make it exceedingly difficult for us to be saved.

The true motives of our actions, like the reed pipes of an organ, are usually concealed; but the gilded and hollow pretext is pompously placed in front for show.

Well Regulated Family.

I have sweet recollection of a family I once knew. In thinking of them now, a feeling of sadness crosses my mind, because of being separated from them; but the day is at hand when the separated friends of Jesus shall meet, and then I hope to meet this whole family—father, mother, and ten or eleven children.

Ten years, perhaps, have passed since I lived near them, was intimate with them, and often in their dwelling. The word of God was valued in that house, and Christians assembled there to read and pray.

One thing which struck me at the time and still remains vividly impressed upon my mind, was the implicit submission of the children to their parents. It was not that they were easily subjected, but that they did not appear to think of having a will in opposition to their parents. Yet they were not in slavish fear or dispirited. They were not ruled with an iron rod.

I said once to the father, "How is it that your children are in such submission?" This was his remarkable answer: "We have made it a rule—a law—in this house that no child shall act in opposition to the will of the parent. The will is expressed, the child must not disobey; that is an understanding with our children. When there is a new comer—when another child is given us—we have some trouble at first with it; there is a disposition to wilfulness until we get our rule understood by it and established. Then we have no more trouble with it; it acts like the others."—Mother's Journal.

Two Mothers.

I know a mother who dedicated all of her children to God at their birth. Her constant prayer was, that they might be converted early in life. Like Timothy's mother and grandmother, she taught them the Scriptures from a child. Her greatest desire was to impress upon their young and tender hearts the truths contained in God's word. Her faith was strong. She never doubted that God would hear and answer the prayers in behalf of these dear little ones. She looked for their early conversion and her expectations were not disappointed, for she had the gratification of seeing them all walk in wisdom's way's before they arrived at the age of fifteen years. Some of them became very active, useful members of the church and Sunday school.

I know another mother who thought children ought not to be troubled with the subject of religion. It was better to wait until they were old enough to know what they were doing. She wished her children to enjoy themselves while young, and did not like this grave subject to be pressed upon them, for fear they might make a false profession. When in her judgment they became old enough to think on the subject, that mother was surprised that her children did not become religious, while so many others, younger than they, were converted. After they reached maturity, some of them did, indeed, join the church; but in a short time, when the festive season returned, invitations were received and accepted, by these professors of religion, to dancing parties. Their mother had often expressed the opinion that dancing was a great accomplishment—had looked on with delight as her daughters were whirled around by strange men in the "graceful waltz," and had even said there was no harm in professors of religion participating in this amusement. It is not surprising then that her daughters entertained the same views. It was remarked by many that "these professors of religion were the gayest of the gay, never seeming to become weary of tipping on the light, fantastic toe," though their faces were strange in prayer meeting. There were old fashioned Christians in the church to which these giddy women were attached, and they did not hesitate to discipline these dancing members, when they found that private remonstrance was unavailing, to prevent a recurrence of the offence. The mother is mortified and sorrowful at the position her children occupy, and now feels that she has reaped what she has sown.

Love of the World.

It seems so little a thing that separates a soul from Christ when it is only that vague, undefined temper and habit which we call the love of the world. Here is a young woman—gentle, refined, affectionate—who does many kind things in a graceful way: but who is the lover of gay society and admiration, of the excitement of a continually varying life; she finds her delight in a continual round of parties, visits, concerts, operas, varied with a little novel-reading, and now and then a quiet evening at home for a change. What is there so blameful in all this? It is true she does not relish her Bible, nor care for the prayer-meeting; she seldom prays, and she never thinks of her Savior when she can keep such sober tho'ts as death and eternity away. But where is the harm in all this innocent flow of spirits, this merry round of amusements?

The harm is that it kills the soul. "Whosoever will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." And it makes very little difference whether that enmity be open defiance or cold neglect. "He," says Christ, "that is not with me is against me." If that opposition is veiled with gentle ways, winning manners and amiable social sentiments, it is no covering to Him who searches the heart.

CHEERFULNESS.—Depend upon it, those who gain the most love, and are the nearest to perfect happiness in this world, where all must sometimes suffer, are the cheerful ones; those who, like the little birds, can trust to their Father for daily bread.

"And feel at heart that One above
In perfect wisdom, perfect love,
Is working for the best,"

and who, when the dark clouds of adversity obscure the light, can look through them all at the blue sky beyond, and hopefully wait for the sunshine. Be cheerful, so that the world will be made a little brighter while you are in it, and a dark spot be left when you are gone.

"Be the matter what it may,
Always speak the truth;
Whether work or whether play,
Always speak the truth.
Never from the truth depart,
Grave it deeply in your heart,
Written 'tis in virtue's chart—
Always speak the truth."

The Pilgrim.

HUNTINGDON, PA., NOV. 24, 1874.

Behind Time.

On account of extra labor in putting out our sample copy and prospectus we are several days behind time, but by another week we hope to be up to our usual time. If our readers will go to as much trouble to raise the circulation of the PILGRIM as we did to increase and improve it, and to please and benefit them, we may expect a large increase and we hope we shall not be disappointed.

Short Editorials.

As we have a meeting in progress at the Bethel our editorials will necessarily be short this week as we wish to attend it as much as we possibly can. Our happiest seasons are those spent in associating with God's people in worship, and it is not more than meet that we should have the opportunity of enjoying such seasons, even if our editorial department should be a little meagre.

To Our Agents.

Last week we sent our prospectus to all of our known agents, but in a number of cases we had failed in marking our agents, and when we got to sending out the prospectus we had forgotten who they were, and on this account it is probable we made a number of mistakes, and that some of those who had been laboring for us got none. If such still feel a willingness to labor for us, will inform us, we will gladly supply them with one by return mail. If any to whom we have sent prospectus are not prepared to attend to the agency they will confer us a great favor by giving it to some one who will. To a large number of our single subscribers we have also sent a prospectus. We hope all such will make a little effort on our behalf and try and send us, at least a few names along with their own. If any among those who did not receive any, would be pleased to work for us, we will gladly furnish them. We have over 600 single subscribers. If each one would send us one more it would considerably increase our list. This you can do, will you try?

The Bethel Meeting.

On Saturday we closed our office for the purpose of attending a series of meetings commenced at the Bethel, in the James Creek congregation. Notwithstanding we were very throng we could not deny ourselves of the pleasure of attending this meeting, not only on account of the meeting, but because it was going home, to father's house. On our arrival there we had the pleasure of meeting brother Grabill Myers and a goodly number of other brethren and sisters who had come to attend the meeting.

The first services were held in the evening when we had quite a well filled house and an interesting congregation. On Sunday we also had a full, pleasant and profitable meeting. On Sunday eve. our ministerial force was increased by the arrival of brethren John Spanogle and Seth Myers of the Aughwick congregation. Brother Seth Myers opened and closed the services while brother Spanogle and G. Myers done the preaching. On Monday a. m., we again met for worship. The congregation was largely members, but we enjoyed a very agreeable waiting before the Lord. After this we started for home and are now seated at our usual place of labor and are trying to put things a little in shape so that we can go back and attend meeting a few days longer, as we expect it to continue during the week.

—Orders for the brethrens Almanac for 1875 are now coming in and being booked, and will be filled as soon as completed which will be in a short time. As we have published a large supply, we hope our brethren and sisters everywhere will send in their orders at once and thus be supplied before the New year comes in. It contains the most complete ministerial list ever published, a Memoir of Elder John Umpstead, by Elder J. Quinter and a large amount of other interesting reading. It is gotten up in the same style as the Pilgrim Almanac for 1874, making it a first class family Almanac in every respect, just such a one as every christian family needs. We send them post-paid on the following terms: 1 copy 10 cents 12 copies 75 cents 18 copies $1.00, 100 copies $5.75 Send 10 cents and get a copy, or give it to your agent and let him send for you.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

A Little Sermon for Little Folks.

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."—John xiii: 17.

I. "These things;" that is, your duties. You have duties wherever you are.

1. At home, obedience and respect to parents, and kindness to brothers, sisters, and servants.

2. At school, respect to teachers, faithfulness in study, and fairness in play.

3. On the street, good manners, modesty, kindness, minding your own business.

II. How should you do your duty?

1. Not for pay. That is a low motive. Some always ask, "What will you give me?"

2. But from love. So the Savior did when a boy at Nazareth. So the angels do God's will (which is only another name for duty.) This will make you do it cheerfully.

3. Better every day. By trying to do your duties, you will become more skilful. So you improve in reading, writing, and music. Peter says, "Grow in grace."

III. Doing duty makes you happy. Sin cannot make you happy. Sin did not make Eve happy, nor Cain, nor Judas. Disobedience at home does not make you happy; idleness, unkindness, bad manners, no kind of sin can make you happy. But happiness comes from doing your duty. That is God's reward. This is the promise in the text. Think of this every day for just one week, and see how it is.

Try, then, to know your duty. Be faithful in duty in doing it from love to God and man; then you will be happy every day on earth, and forever happy in heaven.—The Myrtle.

The Broken Window.

"There, you've done the mischief now," cried Joe Harris; "you've broken that church window, real expensive too, such windows are."

Charles Mercer stood up and looked with regret and sorrow at the accident that had befallen him. He had broken the window, and the bare thought filled his young heart with dismay.

One little boy, hearing the crash, had started to run away, but seeing the others maintaining their ground, had turned and stood looking timidly on the wreck. Charlie Mercer was the son of a poor widow, and as he thought of the cost of such a window, tears filled his eyes, which he vainly tried to keep back.

"I tell you what," said Joe Harris, somewhat softened by the evident grief in the face of his playmate, "if you say so, we won't tell, and no one will ever be able to find out who broke it."

"No," cried Charlie Mercer, "never. It is bad enough to have broken the window; it would be ten times worse to conceal or lie about it. I shall go at once to the trustees, and if mother and I can pay for it, it shall be done. Poor mother, how sorry she will be."

"Well," said Arthur Harvey, "I can't see that the whole blame should rest on Charlie. We have been playing, and it just happened that his ball struck the window. You know very well, Joe Harris, that Charlie opposed our playing here so near the church, all said there was no danger. I think it is nothing but right that we should all help him with the cost."

"I'll not pay the first red cent!" retorted Joe. "If I had broken the window, I should have paid the cost like a man, and not been a baby about it, either. As it is he may pay it himself, or get out of it the best he can.

Charles Mercer walked away from the disputing boys homeward. He expected no assistance, and he knew very well how sad his mother would feel, but he must tell her all, and perhaps she could help him devise some means of paying for it. Meanwhile Arthur Harvey hastened across the field to one of the trustees to see what could be done in Charlie's favor He told the whole story of the accident, and how Charlie had refused to conceal his fault. The trustee was a kind-hearted man, and decided at once that the money should be raised by contribution; so heading a paper, he sent Arthur round to raise the necessary amount, which was speedily done.

You can easily imagine Charlie's delight and astonishment when, coming to the trustee a few hours after, to make full confession, and beg a little time for earning the money, he found the necessary funds had all been collected. As for Arthur, he was already too happy to need the grateful thanks of his dear friend and playmate.—Children's Friend.

What Boys do in Japan.

We have had a foreign guest at our house in whom we were all much interested—a young Japanese the son of a gentlemen in Northern Japan. He has been in California more than a year, and came east with the embassy, passing some days at Salt Lake City, of which place and its people he says many very funny things. But what we are going to tell you now is how the boys sometimes amuse themselves in Japan.

He says that on his father's place—which is on a large plateau surrounded by high hills—is an artificial fish-pond In it are a great many fishes of species he has not seen here, that are about a foot long, and very beautiful in color and form. They are as playful and as tame as the kittens on our hearths.

One of his favorite amusements was going to this pond and knocking on the edge of the tank with some hard substance to make a noise when every head would be turned in the direction of the sound, and every fin is employed in making for him the fish expecting some treat from his hand. If, to tease them, he threw nothing in at first, but put his empty hand into the water with his fingers all spread out, they would all gather round it and seize his thumb and fingers in their mouths till he had as many fish as he had thumbs and fingers, playfully snapping and biting at them, as we have all seen puppies do.

But this paradise of the Japanese fish was often rudely broken in upon for it was not expressly as a plaything for the boys, but was the source which supplied the fish for the table.

Whenever fish is wanted for dinner, the cook goes to the tank and knocks, and when the poor unsuspecting things swim up to her, she catches such of them as please her and before they know where they are going, she has them in the pot or pan on the fire.

This young Japanese expressed much surprise at seeing cranberries eaten at table, and said that in the mountains of Japan they grow very large and beautiful, but are never cooked. Some old men occasionally go up the mountain and picks a large basket of them, which he brings on his shoulders down to the town.

Here the boys gather about him and for a small coin purchase the right to fill their pockets with them

And what use do you think they make of this otherwise useless fruit?

The boys blow the glowing berries through rattan tubes, as our boys blew beans through tin ones. That is what cranberries are used for in Japan, where they grow in great perfection.

THE HABIT OF FRETTING.

Fretting is both useless and unnecessary; it does no good and a great deal of harm, yet it is almost a universal sin. More or less we are all given to it. We fret over almost everything. In summer because it is too hot, in winter because it is too cold; we fret when it rains because it is wet, and when it don't rain because it is dry; when we are sick or when anybody else is sick. In short, if anything or everything doesn't go just to suit our particular whims and fancies, we have one grand general refuge,—to fret over it. I am afraid fretting is much more common among women than men. We may as well own the truth, my fair sisters, if it isn't altogether pleasant. Perhaps it is because the little worries and cares and vexations of our daily life harass our sensitive nerves more than the more extensive enterprises which generally take the attention of men. Great wants develop great resources, but the little wants and worries are hardly provided for, and like the nail against the saw, they make not much of a mark, but they turn the edges terribly. I think if we look upon all the little worries of one day as a great united worry, self-control to meet it would be developed. But as they generally come one or two little things at a time, they seem so very little that we give way, and the breach once made in the wall soon grows larger.

I don't believe in the cant that a woman must always, under all and any circumstances, wear a smiling face when her husband comes home, or that she needs to take her hands out of the dough or drop the baby on the floor to run and meet him at the door. But I do believe,—nay, I know, for I have seen it with my own eyes among my friends—that many a woman has driven a kind husband away from her, away from his home and its sacred influences, and caused him to spend his time at a billiard table or in a drinking saloon, and their profane influences, by ceaseless fretting over trifles, which were not worth a word, much less the peace and happiness of a home.

I know that many a mother has turned her son against her own sex, and made him dread and dislike the society of women, by her example constantly set before him. I know that many a mother has bro't up and developed a daughter just like herself, who, in her turn, would wreck and ruin the comfort of another family circle. And knowing all this, my sisters,—and brothers too, if they need it,—I know that we ought to set our faces like a flint against this useless, sinful, peace-destroying and home-disturbing habit of fretting.

Boys and their Mothers.

Some one has written beautifully to the boy in the following manner. Here is a whole sermon in a few sentences:

"Of all the love affairs in the world, none can surpass the true love of the big boy for his mother. It is a love pure and noble, honorable in the highest degree to both. I do not mean merely a dutiful affection. I mean a love which makes a boy gallant and courteous to his mother, saying to everybody plainly that he is fairly in love with her. Next to the love of her husband, nothing so crowns a woman's life with honor as this second love, this devotion of her son to her. And I never yet knew a boy to turn out bad who began with falling in love with his mother. Any man may fall in love with a fresh-faced girl, and the man who is gallant with the girl may cruelly neglect the worn and weary life. But the boy who is a lover to his mother in her middle age, is a true knight, who will love his wife as much in the sear-leaved autumn as he did in the daisied spring time."

THE LITTLE WITNESS FOR JESUS.

As little Charlie was walking on the street one day, he came to a group of boys; among them were two or three he knew; as he passed along he heard one of them say, "There goes Piety! Hurrah for Piety! Pi-Pi-e-ty!"

When Charley first heard it he began to feel ashamed, and his first thought was, "I'll turn down the next street and go out of their way." Immediately these words seemed whispered in his ear, "What! ashamed of Jesus, that dear friend?" It appeared to him as though an angel had spoken. He quickly turned around and said, "No! I'll never be ashamed of such a friend as he!" Then walking up to the group, said, "Boys, I wish you knew my Jesus, too." Not another word was spoken. The boys had no reply to anything like that. They thought Charlie was coming back very angry, and began to think, "He isn't so pious after all." And one said, "Hurrah for a fight!" and began to roll up his sleeves. But it wasn't a fighting spirit that came back to them, but the spirit of Jesus in Charlie's heart.

Do you know my little friends, that His Spirit will give you courage to do right at all times? Learn to love Jesus, little ones, then you can say like Charley, "I'll never be ashamed of such a friend as he."—Loving Words.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Brethren:—

Our festival season closed for this district last Sunday at the Valley meeting house in Botetourt Co. It was my pleasant fortune to attend three this season, one in Floyd, one in Roanoke, and one in Botetourt. As usual they were largely attended, both by members and spectators, and the order generally was praise-worthy. Nothing transpired at any of them to vary the monotony of such meetings save a few baptisms. The most enjoyable feature of the Botetourt meeting was the baptism of a young disciple about 13 years old. She was courageous and of strong faith to enter the list of warfare against the serried hosts of evil in this corrupt age.

There is another feature that I will take this occasion to advert to, that is, the large number of ministers that were present. About 15 were present at each place.

Now according to my views of a preacher's duty, such a state of affairs indicate a state of idleness that is not at all commendable. Many of them came from a long distance and then took no part in the labors. Had they remained at their posts at home, at least half a dozen congregations would have been served.

Yet at some of the other meetings there were no visiting ministers. We think an arrangement could be effected that would apportion the labors more equitably, and we propose to introduce a resolution to that effect at our District meeting next Spring.

It will be substantially as follows; to wit—we will estimate the number of ministers in the District, and the number of meetings, and then assign an equal number of preachers to each meeting. This arrangment will not hinder other ministers from attending the meeting to which they were not assigned.

We saw some things else that deserves a passing notice. The serving or officiating minister in filling the cups at first, invariably poured half from each bottle of wine. We never saw one do otherwise.

Why such a rigid adherence to the usage? Does the scriptures authorize it? We can hardly plead a higher authority than custom or tradition, which to me is no authority at all.

Some say that the two bottles represent the entire blood of Christ. That is a very puerile plea. If it was correct, why not observe the usage throughout the communion?

It is a usage that posesses no merit or authority, and it should be abandoned at once, lest we detract from the integrity of the gospel by honoring our traditions. It is a fact that in exact proportion to our devotion to custom is our departure from the spirit of the scriptures. God asks for the devotion of our whole heart, hence there is no room for this worship of custom.

Again, the usage of the brethren in breaking the bread for the sisters is one that I could see no justification in the scriptures. The sisters are not even allowed to pass the cup from one to the other. Now in all other acts of worship they have equal privilege with the brethren. Under the apostles administration the only restriction imposed was in the matter of teaching. Otherwise there was neither male nor female as touching the distinction of sex. In this we are justly chargeable with the error of devotion to a traditionary usage, which should be abandoned before the judge makes requisition for sin. The penalty for adding to is just as severe as that for taking from.

It is said in defence that the sisters took no part in the crucifixion of our Savior. This is weaker than no reason at all. If the breaking of bread and the passing of the cup was intended as an atonement for that dreadful crime, the plea would have a little show of plausibility, but, as it is for the purpose of perpetuating the remembrance of that event, both reason and the gospel unite in urging an equality of privileges for all the members. It would be a just cause for rejoicing if the brethren, who follow the directions of the Master so devotedly, would divert their worship of these traditionary usages.

Another change could be made that would be productive of good, and that is the random style of speaking observed by many of our preachers. It would be very difficult for one unacquainted with our doctrine to understand sometimes what the brethren are trying to advocate. A little premeditation, a little arrangment, a little mental discipline, would be very gratifying to the audience, and would aid them very much to understand the why's and wherefore's of our practice, and at the same time prove of vast advantage to the preachers.

Paul's addresses are models of harmony of thought, brevity, correctness of language, &c., and taking them as a copy, great improvements could be effected to our credit and gratification.

We took advantage of the opportunity the meetings in Botetourt and Roanoke afforded us, to collect the subscriptions those congregations so generously pledged two years ago.

There are a few due and unpaid yet, and those brethren who have not paid will find the lists with brethren, Samuel Crumpacker of Botetourt, and Henry Garst, near the meeting-house, of Roanoke. We hope they will call on these brethren at an early day and have their subscriptions marked paid. The amount of those lists will be published in due time.

The PILGRIM readers doubtless would like to know what we are doing with our meeting-house that was begun three years since. After much deliberation we succeeded in putting the work under contract last summer and it is progressing satisfactorily. The carpenter, Mr. Ewing Wright, is doing his work in excellent and substantial style, and hopes to finish soon. The masonary under the management of Mr. Bluford Gardner, is not far enough advanced to enable us to hold our festival in it this year, in consequence of which it will be postponed until next Spring.

I promised last Autumn to publish an account of the disorders that were agitating the Roanoke congregation. From various causes it has been delayed. Arrangments are now maturing to have it published some time during the approaching winter in the PILGRIM.

The committee gave us a practical demonstration of one fact that we should have learned long since, and that is, the frailty of human judgment. It would be a sorrowful reflection indeed were our final destiny to be fixed by a tribunal of finite judges. Then might we groan to purpose.

But as all things work together for good to those that love the Lord, we look to a propitious future for the vindication of unrequited devotion to the principles of truth and justice, even if that future should embrace the judgment of the great day. If all your actions are performed with a view to the rigid criticism to which they will be subjected by the "Righteous Judge" to whom Paul referred his cause, we need have no fears of the result.

I will try and keep you advised of all matters of general interest that transpire in this district. The troubles that have agitated the Botetourt congregation for many years past and which culminated in the visit of A. M. Committee, are in about the same condition that the Methodist preacher represented his church to be in after the abolition of slavery "a little better externally."

Church News.

The Maple Grove Love-feast was held in Ashland Co., Ohio in the Brethren's meeting-house, 4 miles North-east of the town of Ashland on the 27th of Oct., and was well attended with ministerial laborers and lay members from adjoining and more distant congregations.

The general attendance was large and what made the occasion still more solemn, brother John Beegly's wife was buried in the forenoon, she being the daughter of brother Wm. A. Murray, who now resides in Knox Co., Ohio.

The evening exercises were very solemnly attended to, and viewed by the spectators with much interest. The order was so good that many glad and thankful hearts could say it was good for us to be here, and what a recommendation it was to our neighborhood. No doubt many wondered who will go the way of all the earth before next Fall, while remembering that the wife of our brother was in the meeting-house near a year previous in health, a joyous communicant, but alas, how soon death came. Let us all "be ready" for when in health we may be in the midst of death.

Editors Pilgrim:—I will give you a little church news from this Territory. The 7th of this month was the time appointed to try to effect a church organization. Pursuant to appointment a number of the brethren and sisters met at the house of brother Troyer, and after singing and prayer and reading of Scripture we stated to the brethren that the petition gotten up and signed by the brethren and sisters (that were here last May) to the Annual Meeting, we took with us to Ill., and presented it with our certificate of membership and official standing in the church. Said petition set forth a desire that the A. M. would grant us the privilege under the circumstances (there being no others Elders to be had conveniently) to organize a branch church according to the general order of the church believing the same to be according to the spirit and order of the gospel. The Standing Committee seeing no necessity to do more than get up a paper granting all we asked done so. We read papers showing why there was as long delay as there was in organizing. We then stated to the members present that inasmuch as we did not know just what promises they made when received into the church, and they did not know what we had promised we would ask each whether they were willing to be governed by the gospel in all things pertaining to our profession, and this promise would imply a willingness to be obedient to the decisions and councils of the A. M., believing them to be in harmony with the spirit of the gospel, and that it is safer to rely upon the wisdom of a multitude of worthy counsellors than our individual views. I promised, by the grace of God, to be obedient unto the church and to do my duty in trying to "keep house" according to the general order of the Brotherhood. All present with seeming cheerfulness agreed to be obedient to all those rules and regulations mentioned. When we read the letters of church membership, some that were not present owing to distance and other hindrances, sent letters desiring to be taken into the organization. The organization embraced a membership of twenty-six souls, the majority of which were present. This is "the beginning of the gospel" as preached and practiced in the capacity of a district of church in this part of the world, and to be known as the "first branch church or congregation of Colorado" of the Church of the Brethren. Being in union and love it was the expressed desire of all the members present that we have a "Communion season" at night, which when "evening had come" was indeed a season of refreshing from the Lord. We certainly had a feast of good things, verifying the truth of God's promise that He will be "in the midst" of a few that meet in His name as well as with the many. Public preaching next day, after which we had to take the parting hand. J. S. FLORY.

Brother Brumbaugh:

As you are hearing from the different churches throughout the brotherhood, you would perhaps like to hear from us here in the Linville Creek church, Rockingham Co., Va. This is the arm of the church that had been under the oversight of our much beloved brother Elder John Kline, who was murdered by wicked hands during the late war, in cold blood.

He was well known by the general brotherhood and especially at the time of Annual Conference, in which he always took an active part. His loss is still greatly felt by us, but the Lord has seen it best so to do. We all have great reason to take new courage and put our shoulders to the wheel and our hands to the gospel plow, not looking back, try to bear the cross and not permit Simon alone to bear it all. The Lord has blessed the labors of our brethren. Many precious souls have been added to the church during the last spring and summer, and especially during the last month. One week before our Lovefeast seven precious souls were added to the church, and during our Lovefeast, which was on the 20th and 21st of October, six more were added and think a good many more serious impressions were make. Our feast was one long to be remembered. Brother C. G. Lint of Pa., and brother Jacob Trostle of Md., were with us and labored faithfully for us. We had a good meeting. We had a number of ministering brethren from adjoining churches and adjoining counties whose services as well as their presence made us glad.

There was a large crowd of members, about four hundred communed, and not having room some were deprived of the blessed privilege of communing with us. The house was filled to overflowing with spectators, of which it was thought twelve hundred a fair estimate. The best of order prevailed, such as we do not often have. We were sorry indeed that brother Lint could not stay for our second day meeting. Brother Trostle spoke from these words: "Ye are the salt of the earth," &c., which was very good indeed. It made us feel that it was good for us to be there. We earnestly request brother Lint to give us a letter of his travels down the valley of Va. among the brethren and Bro. Trostle of his up the valley, through the PILGRIM, for it will be interesting to us to hear from them both. The weather during the time of our Lovefeast was fair, for all of which we are truly thankful to God the giver of every good and perfect gift. J. H. B.

Dear Brethren:—

As we all love to read church news, and as I have not seen any from this part of the brotherhood for some time, I will try to write a few lines for the PILGRIM. On the 18th and 20th of September was the time appointed for our Communion in the Mississinwa arm of the church. Meeting commenced at 10 o'clock. The house was filled and the best of order prevailed throughout the meeting. The following are names of the laboring brethren present: Eld. John Metzgar of Ill., Eld. Hiram Branson of the Killbuck church; also the Elders of the Mississinwa church; Jun. and George Studebaker, with several younger speakers. The laboring brethren attended earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. We were made to feel that it was good to be there. Brother Metzgar did most of the preaching during the meeting. He preached an able discourse on Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m., and also at night. Also a very feeling discourse in way of a farewell address.

On Monday morning he left us on his way to a council meeting, and some more communion meetings. May the good Lord enable him, with all the rest of God's dear children, to discharge the duty we owe to him.

We believe there were many precious souls that felt it was their duty to be an adopted child of God. O, could they get fully persuaded to come out on the Lord's side and be adopted into the kingdom of Christ is my prayer. R. W. BRANSON.

MARRIED.

MILLER—BRUMBAUGH.—In the Oakhan church Piatt Co., Ill., by Martin Nehr, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. John Miller to Miss Amanda Brumbaugh.

WENGER—MICHAEL.—In the Cerro Gordo church Macon Co., Ill., by elder Joseph Henricks, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. David Wenger, to to sister Elizabeth Michael.

D. D. SHIVELY.

DIED.

MARKLEY.—Sister Elizabeth Markley departed this life on the 4th day of November 1874, aged 76 years, 9 months and 20 days.

She left 9 children 61 grand children and 16 great grand children to mourn their loss, though they need not mourn as those who have no hope. She has been a faithful member in the Brethren church for the last 46 years. It seemed in that day and year, her and her beloved husband confessed our Lord and Savior. In that life, they lived in peace with Christ until they were removed by the Savior's call.

The beloved brother Jonathan Markley was born on the 11th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1794. He was a faithful member for 14 years, when he departed on the 10th day of July 1842, aged 48 years and 4 months less one day. Died at Ellisville in the state of Ill.

Elizabeth Kline who became the wife of Jonathan Markley, was born on the 14th day of January, A. D. 1798. In death she had no suffering pain. It seemed her days were numbered and all was well, as she fell asleep in Jesus in whom she had long put her trust.

Funeral services by brother John Humbarger, from Luke 18th chapt. 16th verse.

SMITH.—Jane, wife of Ira Smith departed this life November 6th A. D, 1874, aged 38 years 9 months and 16 days.

Sickness, heart disease, She left a bereaved husband with 3 children. The deceased also left an aged mother of 74 years, with one sister and 3 brothers, and with the bereaved, one sister with many warm friends to mourn their loss. Funeral services by brother John Humbarger from Matthew 24: 44.

BAXTER.—Ira, L. and Jane, the twain babes of John and Mary Baxter were born on the 12th day of February A. D. and lived but the short time of seven months and 25 days. Death caused by water on the brain.

The first took sick on Thursday the second on Friday. They died on Tuesday and were buried on Wednesday. Both in the one grave. They were twins in life twins in death and twins in the grave. They came as the grass, and their lives were as the flowers of the grass, which endureth but for a short time and soon fadeth away. Funeral services by John Humbarger.

BRINDLE.—In the Upper Cumberland Church Cumberland Co., Pa., Nov., 8th 1874, sister Ann, wife of Bro. John Brindle a fellow laborer in the good cause, aged 49 years and two months.

She leaves a husband and 3 sons and one daughter, and a few grand children to mourn their loss, with a number of friends and brethren, and sisters, but we do not sorrow as those who have no hope. We do fondly hope that our loss is her great gain. The subject died in the house of her son-in-law brother David Shenk, on the 10th. Her remains were conveyed to Baker's meeting house in Lower Cumberland, where many sympathizing friends had assembled, where the funeral services were attended to by the brethren, from the 14th chapter of Job, and the latter part of the 4th chapter of Thessalonians, then interred in graveyard at said meeting house.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—In many cases the space in our prospectus will be too small to hold all the names. When such is the case, use the other side by ruling it, with pen or pencil, same as on the first side, which will answer quite as well.

—THOSE of our patrons who have received the sample No. and from whom we have had an opportunity of hearing, express themselves as being very much pleased with it. We shall entertain the hope that it will give universal satisfaction.

—A NUMBER of brethren are now applying for the agency, and we can assure all such and others who may feel so disposed, that we take pleasure in supplying them with the necessary outfit. We want many more agents to canvass for the PILGRIM and our friends will confer a favor by helping us to secure them.

—THIS morning, Nov. 20, the earth is clothed with a garb of white, and yet the snow-flakes are falling thick and fast. Those of us who have comfortable homes, and the necessaries of life, and especially those of us who are happy in Him, can reveal the inner ecstasy by the exclamation, "Beautiful Snow!" But then we think of the hundreds and thousands who are destitute of the necessaries of life, who are not sufficiently clad to protect them from the cold, and who know not from whence they will get their next supply of food. To such this snowy morning will bring increased sorrow. Without a home, without sufficient raiment, without food and a long cold winter before them. Oh! God pity the poor this morning. It is said the prayers of the righteous availeth much, and in view of this God's children everywhere should send up their petitions pure and warm in behalf of the poor.

—IN another column will be found an address by J. S. Flory which we think will be of special interest to our readers. The occasion that called it forth is certainly one fraught with interest to every true disciple. The great commission is being filled, our prayers for the enlargement of Christ's kingdom, and the promotion of his cause are being answered. And then, to the address breathes a spirit that is strictly orthodox. The Old, OLD landmarks are not lost sight of in this organization and we have every reason to believe that a nucleus is formed in Colorado around which many "such as should be saved" will gather.

Brethren and sisters let our prayers unitedly ascend to God in behalf of his little branch of our glorious Zion. It will no doubt have its trial yet if able to withstand it will only bear the richer fruit to the honor and glory of God. Fear not little flock it will be the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

—A brother writes us, "I know of some sisters some distance from here who are isolated from the Church and seldom get to hear preaching, and to whom the PILGRIM would be a welcome messenger. If it has been the means of bringing some into the Church, it may also be the means of keeping those in the faith who are already in, such as have not the privilege of dwelling among the members of the Church, but out in the broad world, surrounded by many snares and temptations of the devil. If I can get such sisters to take the PILGRIM it may guard them against the fatal grasp of sin and besides, bring to them, weekly, many good and useful instructions from all parts of the Brotherhood."

Just so, dear Bro, we hope that many others may look at the matter in a like manner, as much good may be accomplished in this way.

—We have on hands, several reviews from Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, on brother Zook and Sharp's criticisms relative to his article on high schools among the Brethren. To avoid any further discussion on the project, we have respectfully declined their publication, also with them, some others pro and con. As brother Rosenberger claims, that in both cases, his views were misrepresented, we state for his benefit that he wants it understood, first, that he is a friend of education.

2d. That he does not oppose high schools in the world, but does in the Church.

3d. Does not entertain the idea that brethren educated by other schools or churches are better than those schooled among ourselves.

4th. In referring to the Mennonites, had only reference to their schools in Germany.

With this explanation, we hope that all those who have written on the subject, will be satisfied.

—THE editor of the Christian at Work when refering to the result of the elections makes the following very sensible remarks: "Some of us beat and some of us were beaten, and it is uncertain which of us are the worst off. Those of us who have got to be sheriffs, district attorneys, secretarys of state, and govenors, have won ease, anxiety, hard work, temptations to worldliness, and additional opportunities of dissipation. Those of us who were beaten have made fortunate escape from many of these things. So while we offer three cheers for the candidates elected, we offer just as many for the candidate defeated. We have known many persons ruined through political success, but very few dispoiled by political reverses. While, therefore, after election moving around among the killed and wounded, we take with us this box of pain extractor. You may be badly off now, you might have been worse off had you succeeded."

FESTIVAL AT TANGER.—A great festival is celebrated every year at Tanger, by the Mohammedaons on the anniversary of the birth-day of the Prophet. These people, who seem to have been just let loose from a mad-house, have come back from a pilgrimage to Mequinez one of the chief cities of Morocco, and now give themselves up to all kinds of excesses. They crunch bits of glass between their teeth, slash their breasts with knives, tear their hair, rend to pieces the carcasses of sheep, and devour the flesh raw. All the while they dance to wild, shrill music produced on a species of oboe. The spectacle is at once fantastic and sad. As a rule the women who take part in this barbarious festival join in the dance with greater abandon than the men, and keep up the wild display until they fall prostrate from physical exhaustion.

DIVORCE.—At the last meeting of the Synod of the reformed church, in the United States, held in Bethlehem, Pa, the question of divorce was submitted to the committee, in the shape of a resolution, affirming that a divorced person has no right to marry again under any circumstances. The committee reports as follows:

"In the opinion of a portion of the committee, the Synod should not be required to express a judgement on the resolution, for the reason that it contains a general and abstract question, there having been no particular case before the last annual meeting, involving an issue on the subject of marriage and divorce. Yet inasmuch as the Synod desires to have a categorical answer to the particular question involved in the resolution, and has instructed the committee to that effect, we state that in our judgment, the principle laid down in the resolution is not valid. That is to say, a man divorced from his wife on the ground of adultery she being guilty and he innocent, has the right according to the scriptures to marry again during the lifetime of the woman from whom he has been lawfully divorced."

—THE Quakers are now organizing Sunday-schools and are conducting them with considerable zeal. The "Seventh First-day School General Conference" was held at Mount Pleasant, Ohio, October 31. Reports were received from Philadelphia, Baltimore, New York, and Ohio Associations. An important queston discussed was whether it is "better to remove the hedges that surround the society," and to open the school to all, making no effort in them to propogate the views peculiar to the friends. The "propriety of devising some plan by which the school organizations may be recognized by the various Yearly Meetings" was also considered.

—FROM a paper published at Atchison, Kansas, we have the following: A colony of Mennonit-immigrants have purchased 40,000 acres of land from the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe Railway Co. Two hundred and fifty families have arrived, and have already commenced settlement upon the purchase. In order to relieve the religious scruples, the Legislature of Kansas has amended its militia law, so that all persons who, on the first of May of each year, file with a clerk of a county court an affidavit declaring that they are members of a religious body whose articles of faith forbid the bearing of arms shall be exempt from militia duty.

—"MOTHER STEWART," a leader of the woman's temperance crusade in Ohio, recently delivered an address in Chicago to an immence audience. A Chicago paper thus describes her: "She is a person who seems to have no sense of fear, is plain in look and manner, devout in spirit, as shrewd as she is enthusiastic, and has a remarkable capacity for entertaining a purpose. She says if the 'crusades' were a failure, the Pentecost was a failure. She also declares that the 'crusades were not a failure—but the men were !'"

—The New York Observer says, "Ten thousand people, in the western part of the State, are reduced to the verge of starvation. Nebraska, usually so prolific, has this year met with a sad calamity in the loss by grasshoppers of all the crops grown in the border counties. The devasted region, includes Oundy, Hitchcock, Gosper, Boon, Furnas, Franklin, Phelps, Howard, Greely, Buffalo, and Sherman counties. Fully one-third of the people have no shoes, and are clothed in rags. Many are living on little pieces of black bread, watermelons, squashes, and some are already suffering from hunger. Some systematic relief should be organized in the East, as it is thought that nearly half a million dollars will be required to sustain the people this winter and give them seed for their farms in the spring."

—THE Gospel of Matthew, Mark and John have been translated into Japanese by Protestant massionaries and published. Translations of Genesis, Romans, Ephesians, and Herbews have also been prepared, but not yet in print. The Gospel of John has also been printed in Roman characters, but the Japanese have not to any great extent learned the use of these. They are however taught in the government schools. The imperial authority still refuse to give permits for travel or residence in the interior of the empire, until the present treaties are revised.

—NUMEROUS petitions are now presented by the Roman Catholics to their bishops praying for the union of the "Holy Heart of MARY with the Sacred Heart of Jesus in the formola of the consecration of France to the latter." They ask this on the ground that "the heart of MARY is the key to the heart of Jesus," and "because they have learned by experience that all graces asked from the heart of Jesus through the heart of MARY are sure to be granted."

The new Constitution of Switzerland abolishes convents and Jesuits.

Mr. Dorler writes: "It requires great skill on the part of the federal government to enforce and carry out the new laws and regulations, and great forbearance on the part of the people. In several places the Catholic priests urge the people to defy the government and to obey only the Pope, who is above all laws. In July our city government passed a law to abolish a Jesuit school in the vicinity of St. Gall, containing 150 scholars.

Probably few persons are aware that leprosy exists so near us as the Dominion of Canada, but it appears from an article in the Toronto Globe that in an Arcadian village of Tracadie, near the mouth of the Miramichi river there have been lepers for the last eighty or ninety years, with a hospital for their benefit which is supported by the local government and managed by the parish priest and four cloistered nuns from Montreal.

This disease is understood to have been brought to the place about ninety years ago on a vessel which sailed from France to Smyrna, touched at the island of Mytelene, and received clothing from a village in that island called Livchori.

This vessel was wrecked near the present village of Nelson at the mouth of the Miramichi, and wreckers gathered the clothes and thus spread the disease.

—IT is said the Roman Catholic priests in Chicago are engaged in circulating among the workmen of their congregations pledges, not merely to refrain from the use of liquor, but from the temptation also.

—If any of our agents did not receive a prospectus, let us know and we will send it immediately.

Origin of Hymns.

The well-known hymn—

I love to steal awhile away
From every cumb'ring care,
And spend the hours of setting day
In humble, grateful prayer—was written by Mrs. Phœbe H. Brown, a pious female, whose domestic cares were great, having to struggle hard to support a large family. She frequently retired to a quiet place of retreat in the evening after the toils of the day were over. Her regular visit to this spot drew upon her the suspicions and animadversions of a lady of wealth living near. She was told she ought to be at home with her children instead of rambling forth thus. It greatly grieved her to be censured for holding communion with God after the day's labor, and sat down one evening with a babe on her lap and wrote "Apology for her Midnight Rambles," which has now become one of the church's sweetest hymns. Who can fully enter into her feelings as she penned those tender and touching stanzas? How seldom do we think of that pious mother, with her child in her arms, as we sing the lines she penned with an aching heart and trembling hand?

Charles Wesley's sublime and famous hymn,

Thou God of glorious majesty,

No. 248 in the Lutheran collection, containing the well known stanza beginning,

Lo! on a narrow neck of land,
'Twixt two unbounded seas I stand.

was written on a promontory called "Land's End," being the the southwestern extremity of England, projecting into the Atlantic ocean, between the Bristol and English channels. It is a rocky point, more than two hundred feet in altitude above the sea, which rages and roars tremendously at its base when driven by the winds. On this "narrow neck of land" Mr. Wesley stood as he composed his mortal-lyric, so full of solemn grandeur and holy awe. He compares life to this neck of land, with the "unbounded seas" of an eternity past, and an eternity to come, behind and before him, and with a might responsibility to be borne, and work to be done in the brief period that elapses while passing over this narrow space from one sea to the other. What a thought for the frame-work of a meditative hymn! Do we always realize this thought when we sing it?

The hymn beginning—"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep," by Mrs. Mackay, a Christian lady of Scotland, was suggested to the authoress while musing in a burying-ground in the west of England. She read there on a tombstone the simple inscription, and the sentiment seemed to be so in keeping with the place, that she seized upon it as a theme of the sweet consolatory hymn mentioned.

"SLEEPING IN JESUS,"

"Jesus, I my all have taken," was long considered a sweet and holy song of consecration, composed by a young lady whose friends were opposed to her becoming pious, and who actually turned her out homeless on the world because she would "take her cross" and follow Jesus.

But Dr. Belcher, in his Historical sketches, speaking with great confidence, ascribes it to the Rev. Henry Francis Lyte, "a young man of feeble health, but of high promise," who was born in Scotland in 1793: was educated in Trinity College, Dublin, and settled as curate in Devonshire. He died in 1847. Nothing is said about the circumstances that suggested the hymn, which must have been of a peculiar character. On the whole, we cannot but feel a regret that the origin to which it is usually traced is not the correct one.

INDISPUTABLE EVIDENCE.

St. Elmo, Ill., July 9, 1874.

R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.:—I wish to add my testimony to the wonderful curative properties of your Alt. Ext., or Golden Medical Discovery. I have taken great interest in this medicine since I first used it. I was badly afflicted with dyspepsia, liver deranged and an almost perfect prostration of the nervous system. So rapid and complete did the Discovery effect a perfect cure that it seemed more like magic and a perfect wonder to myself, and since that time we have never been without a bottle of the Discovery and Purgative Pellets in the house. They are a solid, sound family physician in the house and ready at all times to fly to the relief of sickness—without charge. We have never had a doctor in the house since we first began the use of your Pellets and Discovery. I have recommended the use of these medicines in several severe and complicated cases arising from, as I thought an impure state of the blood, and in no one case have they failed to more than accomplish all they are claimed to do. I will only mention one as remarkable, (though I could give you dozens.) Henry Koster, furniture dealer, of this place, who was one of the most pitiful objects ever seen, his face swollen out of shape, scales and eruptions without end, extending to his body, which was completely covered with blotches and scales. Nothing that he took seemed to affect it a particle. I finally induced him to try a few bottles of the Golden Medical Discovery, with daily use of the Pellets, assuring him that it would surely cure him. He commenced its use some six weeks since, taking two Pellets each night for a week, then one each night, and the Discovery as directed. The result is, to-day his skin is perfectly smooth, and the scaly eruptions are gone. He has taken some seven or eight bottles in all, and considers himself cured. This case had baffled the skill of our best physicians. Messrs. Dunsford & Co., druggists, of this place, are selling largely of your medicines and the demand steadily increases, and they give perfect satisfaction in every case.

Respectfully, W. H. CHAMPLIN,

AWARDED

THE "MEDAL FOR PROGRESS,"

AT VIENNA, 1873.

THE HIGHEST ORDER OF "MEDAL" AWARDED AT THE EXPOSITION.

NO SEWING MACHINE RECEIVED A HIGHER PRIZE.

A FEW GOOD REASONS:

1. A new invention thoroughly tested and secured by Letters Patent.
2. Makes a perfect LOCK STITCH alike on both sides, on all kinds of goods.
3. Runs Light, Smooth, Noiseless and rapid—the best combination of qualities.
4. Durable—Runs for years without repairs. Will do all varieties of work and fancy stitching in a superior manner.
6. It is the most easily managed by the operator. Length of stitch may be altered while running, and machine can be threaded without passing thread through holes.
7. Design simple, ingenious, elegant, forming the stitch without the use of Cog Wheel Gears, Rotary Cams or Lever arms. Has the Automatic Drop feed, which insures uniform length of stitch at all speed. Has our new thread controller, which allows easy movement of needle-bar and prevents injury to thread.
8. CONSTRUCTION most careful and finished. It is manufactured by the most skillful and experienced mechanics, at the celebrated REMINGTON ARMORY, ILION, N. Y. Philadelphia office, 816 Chestnut Street.

POETRY.

The Light Ahead.

SELECTED BY SALLIE A. HOSSERMAN.

Our life is a path, young maidens,
With roses and thorns bestrewn;
And often the fairest flowers,
Are thickly with weeds overgrown;
But though there are clouds around us
From pinions of sorrow shed,
There's a hand still beckoning onward,
It points to a light ahead.

In youth we build merry castles
If nothing but young heart's dreams,
All wrapt in the misty future,
And peopled with hope's bright beams
But often the glittering fabric,
Falls back to the earth again—
For cold is the stern world's frowning,
As chill as the Autumn rains

With friends we are now surrounded
Who undying friendship vow,
And we dream not time can sunder
The bands that unite us now:
Yet some will but last life's summer,
Some sleep with the early dead,
But the hand that beckons ever,
Will point to the light ahead.

Our moments are swiftly fleeing;
Each idle, unnoticed beneath
Is bearing us nearer, nearer
To the unseen shores of death.
And soon will the threads of silver
Be mixed with our now brown hair,
And over our girlish foreheads,
Be scattered the lines of care.

But when at death's turbid river
We are called at last to stand,
And wait to be carried over
To the silent, unknown land—
The hand that has ever guided,
Shall scatter away our dead,
'Twill point to a home in Heaven,
That glorious light ahead!

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

How Are we to Deal With Brethren Who Offend Us?

"Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault," &c.

This is the foundation laid by Christ. It is one of the elements in the rock upon which every true believer must build. Having found it, he will at once begin to build his house upon it by hearing and doing the sayings of Jesus. But he is liable to be confused and his building is liable to be overthrown by his enemy, satan, who will by his cunning tempt him to use good material—to obey the positive side of the commands of Jesus—when it is not proper to do so. Satan showed Christ the positive side of a passage of Scripture when they were on the pinnacle of the temple, but Christ showed its negative side. The Scripture "go and tell him his fault," is very positive and plain, yet it has a negative side which is "be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves." There are cases in which there would neither be the wisdom of serpents nor the harmlessness of doves in telling a brother of his fault in any way. Therefore we should not always "go and tell him," but only when it is proper to do so, according to the knowledge we have of Christ. There is also another, on the same negative side expressed by the words, "Charity covereth the multitude of sins." Therefore if we have "fervent charity among ourselves" we will neither "go," nor teach others to "go" immediately whenever an offence is given. Forbearance will always be considered and duly exercised by all Christians who are large enough in Christ to know what it is. But there are those little ones, "babes in Christ" who are not aware—who are unable to discern between justice and injustice, whom we should treat as such, receiving and disposing of their offenses as Christ and his followers who are larger than we are, receive and dispose of ours; sometimes hearing them with silent philosophy; sometimes reproving or rebuking immediately, gently or severely. Which every way agrees the best with the dimensions of the love of Christ is the right way. J. B. GARVER.

Letter No. 4.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

As preaching by the "Brethren" is something rather new, and not of frequent occurrence in this vicinity, I shall inform you that brothers John Brower and John Miller spent the night of the 13th of Nov. here, and the former preached at this place for us the next morning; then went down to Cumberland Co., thirteen miles, to fill other appointments. Brother Brower's text was selected from the 12th Chapt. of Hebrews, 25th verse: "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh: for if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven." Strict attention and seriousness seemed to reign supreme during the sermon; which was about one and one-quarter hours' duration. Owing to different adverse circumstances, only a small congregation assembled. All who expressed their opinions relative to the merit of the sermon, agreed with me that it was excellent, and that the preacher discharged his full duty to God and to man. When preaching, I do heartily and humbly wish that all who are called ministers of the gospel would speak more for the cause and glory of God, and watch and pray towards turning their hearts away from seeking and striving for the glory and honor of men. It is a lamentable fact that while there are too often scores of listeners seated to hear the Gospel, they only have their minds puffed up by flowery discourses, (which are "as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal,") while their poor hearts are starving for spiritual food—a knowledge of a crucified Savior and Redeemer. Whould to God that the "crown of pride" was laid off, that pure "Light" could be shed abroad, and have free access into the hearts of benighted people, that they might soon, very soon serve God in "Spirit and in truth;" for he is a spirit and "he seeketh such to worship him." It is a sad truth that many professing Christians honor God with their lips while their hearts are far from him—their "eyes are in the ends of the earth." Such worship, Scripture unmistakably declares is not acceptable with that pure and holy One, who even knows the secret thoughts and motives of our very hearts. Think solemnly of this fact, and let us humbly beg that omniscient, omnipotent and omnipresent Being to "create within us clean hearts, and right spirits," that we may serve him from the heart, and agreeably to his holy will and way. Most humbly do I beg that sooner or later we may realize, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." Serving, and worshiping God with our wills and leaning unto our own under standing is contrary to Scripture. We are plainly commanded to love God "with the whole soul, mind, body and strength." Apart from this, it is utterly impossible to render unto him proper homage, or to receive his special favor, and "that peace which passeth all understanding," and which "the word can neither give nor take away." It is not unfrequently said by people that such and such Scripture rules are "too strait and narrow" for them. When Satan leads one capitive at his will, all those things are natural; but when led by the "Spirit of truth," (which undoubtedly gives the truth as it is in Jesus,) nothing which is commanded in the Bible feels "too strait and narrow." Strict obedience to his holy will and commands, "nothing wavering," sooner or later, places such a person at full liberty to bask in the sunshine of his love, great strength and favor. Then nothing he commands seems "too strait and narrow." Perfect love and perfect obedience, surely give perfect freedom from bondage of all kinds. No person can possibly feel free until the whole heart is given to their Savior and Redeemer. "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." "Like the bullock unaccustomed to the yoke," it first feels burdensome, and becoming unruly and unwilling, it makes one feel weary and sore; but when it is patiently and resolutely worn, instead of its remaining a burden and a bondage, it gradually grows "easy" and "light," as our hearts become wise and faithful. "The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness." I feel truly the insignificance of my opinion; but such is my deep interest and exercise upon the subject of the Gospel that I cannot and will not refrain from uttering my feeble and well-meaning words. Educated and cultivated minds afford real happiness and extend usefulness to their spiritual professors; but in preaching the glorious Gospel, it should be delivered in its purity and simplicity, regardless of vain man's opinions, &c., &c., This is and does produce sincere religion of the heart, while mental productions, flowery and rhetorical discourses, rarely, if ever produce anything beyond an animal excitement—i, e, religion of the mind. This latter result is founded upon "sand," and the former upon a "rock." "But let every man take heed how he buildeth there upon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built there upon, he shall receive a reward. Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God: for it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise. ("His thoughts are not our thoughts") that they are vain. Therefore let no man glory in men: for all things are yours; and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." I read in Scripture that by "prayer and supplication we must make known our requests unto God;" and it says, "For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist." And again it reads, "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: ("For they that live godly will suffer persecution") be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the spirit of your Father which speaketh for you." The Lord said to Moses, "Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say." Doubtless many may be ready to answer thus: But that was done in "old times." Yes I admit that. But God is no less powerful, faithful and present these new times, than he was in "old times." The preventing cause is with the people, who have smoothed down the King's highway of holiness—have forsaken and wondered far off from his righteous judgments, statutes and commandments—instead of being upright, they have sought out many inventions to suit their glory, convenience and fancy. If we forsake God, he will forsake us; and if we draw nigh to him with our hearts, he will draw nigh to us. "With the merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful; with an upright man thou wilt show thyself upright; with the pure thou wilt show thyself pure; and with the froward thou wilt show thyself froward. For thou wilt save the afflicted people; but wilt bring down high looks. The Lord rewarded me according to my righteousness; according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me. For I have kept the ways of the Lord, and have not wickedly departed from my God. For all his judgments were before me, and I did not put away his statutes from me. I was also upright before him, and I kept myself from mine iniquity. Therefore hath the Lord recompensed me according to my righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands in his eyesight." So speaks the inspired and heavenly-minded David. And if we ever wish and expect to attain to this standard of truth and excellence, we must and can practice what we preach, or quote from another. By using proper and prescribed Scripture rules, we can certainly reach and secure Scripture-standard with full happiness and satisfaction to our every need. In all things, example must always accompany precept; for God will reward "every man according as his work shall be." He says, "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginand the end, the first and the last." It matters not how much pure gospel some may preach; in these "latter days," regardless of the plain teachings of the New Testament, there are people (I am truly sorry to know it) who seem to desire to wink at that preaching which was not learned at some high seat of education. Peter and John (the latter was especially loved by our dear Savior) "were ignorant and unlearned men," and they spake the word of God with such boldness, the people took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." "The Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." In the days of the Apostles, (the "old times") so cautious were they in selecting a man to fill the place of Judas, they appointed two men;" and they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two thou hast chosen, that he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place. And they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles." In another place it reads, "Wherefore, brethren, look ye not among your seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the word. And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch; whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them. And the word of God increased; and the number of disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." In all that we do and say, our first query in connection therewith should be, "What saith the Scripture?" Then if we act according to its teachings, which is God's word; and "if God is for us who can be against us?" "Though a host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear: though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident." "The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favor to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all." Since examining the Scripture, I plainly see that God chooses both the educated and uneducated ones to preach the Gospel in its purity, "not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power: That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." Paul, the chosen of God, the chief of apostles, and the preacher of all preachers, and highly educated man too, said, "And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified. And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling, (just as the little David was, I suppose, when he in the name of God, came to meet and slew the proud and boasting giant Goliah. Yes, and I think the blood of Goliah runs in the veins of some these days.) Again Paul says, Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to naught: But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory; which none of the princes of this world knew; for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." If we would but become "wise in the heart," according to God's will and way, we would condescend to listen to that kind of preaching described by good and educated old Paul, and also to such as Jesus Christ deigns to favor; viz: Peter and John. "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble;" "mind not high things; but condescend to things of low estate." In the days of Jesus Christ, he was despised by a certain class, because, he did not come as a king, and dressed in royal apparel; and moreover, he was the son of a carpenter. This meek and lowly Jesus took upon himself the form of servant; and after suffering shame, all kinds of trial and sorrow, he was betrayed, nailed upon the cross and crucified; and when expiring, he cried out, "Father forgive them; for they know not what they do." So must all his meek and lowly followers, everywhere, remember what a great lesson this teaches, both in forbearance and endurance for the right. "In the world, we must expect tribulation;" and "they that live godly will suffer persecution:" "but if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled; but sanctify the Lord God in your heart: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear: Having a good conscience; that whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ. For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing. For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit." The Bible is indeed a "precious treasure" to those who daily strive to serve God in "Spirit and in truth." "How sweet are the words unto my taste! yea sweeter than honey to my mouth. Through thy precepts I get understanding: therefore I hate every false way." "I have done judgment and justice: leave me not to mine oppressors. Be surety for thy servant for good: let not the proud oppress me." "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. Be still and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge." "Be ye not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed according to the renewing of your minds that ye may know that good and perfect will of God." Before I became afflicted, which renewed my nature, purging out vanity and pride, thereby quickening my spirit into the new and living way. I then liked those ways of the world which I no longer tolerate. And when I discern these self-same sins in my acquaintances. Oh! how I do beg God to open their blind eyes and unstop their deaf ears to a true view and knowledge of themselves. This situation is also common to many members of the churches. Would that they could be aroused to a sense of their danger; for in Christ's own words it reads, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." These are solemn words, just as they were uttered by the holy Jesus. "Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good;" "happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth." While I love all of my old friends, I freely confess that I am most drawn and endeared to that society wherever I discern the image of Jesus:—by their fruit shall ye know them;" for "do ye gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles!" Whether high or low, rich or poor, true love for Jesus Christ and his cause will ever give us love for his true followers:—"Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that you love one another with a pure heart fervently: Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." Whether members of churches or not, if people do not act out their love for true Christians of all ranks and stations, (judging them with "righteous judgment" as described in God's Holy Word,) one must certainly conclude that all such persons have not experienced the work of regeneration: in other works, are still serving satan. Bounded duty to our Creator and his creatures has prompted me to write and express my humble, well-meaning and heartfelt feelings and New Testament view upon the forgoing points. "There is a time to speak and a time to keep silence." Dear human beings, please "search the Scriptures" as we are commanded, and see for yourselves if I have written anything but the truth as it is in Jesus. If I have unwittingly erred in any respect, I beg you to call my attention to it; and if I am right, as I understand it to be, I do humbly and prayerfully beseech all of you to "make your calling and election sure;" and keep the New Testament for your cautious guide in everything. Ask God most earnestly to, "Open thou thine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of the law; order my steps in thy word, and let no iniquity have dominion over me." The "most simple" will not err if they "hunger and thirst for righteousness." Please read and ponder my feeble words with seriousness and an unbiassed judgment. I have just examined the sample copy of the most useful and worthy "PILGRIM" for 1875. It is richly worth its price—$1.60, and much more; and for its purity and simplicity of its truth as it is in Jesus. I would circulate it by the thousand if I could. I bid it God-speed on its heavenly mission.

RELIGION.

Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. —James 1: 27.

I will divide my subject into three parts. First, What is religion? Second, Religious duty. Third, General remarks.

What is religion? The word religion means a system of faith and worship; pious practice; piety.

Here we have a definition of the word religion, what it means, and from the definition given to the word, we must acknowledge it to be a work, and a work that cannot be done all at one time, and then set down on the stool of do-nothing, and fold our arms and say there is nothing more to do; but when we make a beginning of this work we must go on. The apostle Paul says, "let us go on unto perfection." Heb. 6: 1.

So you see that it is a work and a progressive work, and a work that will take a lifetime to finish.

We hear so much talk about religion, and about getting religion, but I am sorry to say that one half of the people that profess to have what is called religion, don't know anything about it, because if you ask them what religion is, they can not tell you, yet they profess to have it at the same time. You can get religion on any kind of a faith, but your religion will be just like your faith.

If I understand the meaning of religion, it is a work and a progressive work, and if I understand the meaning of experimental religion, it is an experimental knowledge of the scripture, and when a person has got an experimental knowledge of the scripture and is willing to make an unconditional surrender to God in all things, and take him at his word, and do what he commands, that person will realize experimental religion, because he is a hearer and a doer of the work.

Again, religion is an internal and and external work, and we must be born again before we commence this work; we must be born out of darkness into His marvelous light, and then we must show to the world, by our walk, by our actions, and by our conversation, that we have been born again, and that we are His children and He is our God and our Father.

There is one thing certain, and that is this: you never saw a grain of wheat grow without a shell, but you have often saw shells of wheat growing without any grain in them.

Just so with the christian, you never saw a christian that was not a professor, but you have seen a great many professors who are not posessors. You never saw a sheep put on a woll's clothing, but you have often seen wolves put on sheep's clothing. Just so with the christian. You never saw a christian that would put on a wulf's clothing, but you have often seen false-hearted persons who claim to be christians, put on sheep's clothing and yet they are inwardly raveoing wolves. You never saw a wise virgin that has not a lamp and oil in it, but you have often seen foolish virgins who have lamps and no oil in them. Just so with the christian. You never saw a christian that had not a lamp and oil in their vessel, but you have often seen professors of religion who have lamps but no oil in their vessels.

Now you see how easily we can be deceived in having or getting religion. There are a great many different kinds of religion in the world, but there is only one kind of pure religion, and if we have not that pure religion which the apostle James speaks of, our religion is vain, and our works will not be rewarded when we come to die, for every one will be rewarded just so far as they have done His will. Faith alone will not save us, neither will works alone save us, but faith and works must go together. Faith and works are just like a man on sea, who gets in a boat and wishes to sail across. You may call one oar faith and the other works. If he takes the oar of faith and undertakes to sail his boat across with it, he will be beat, because it will just turn round and round, and he can not get across the sea, but just so soon as he takes hold of both oars, faith and works, and begins to work them both at one time, he will cross the sea, because his boat moves right along. Just so with the christian. We are in a boat on the great sea of time and it takes us a lifetime to sail across it, and if we do not take both oars with us when we set out to sail across life's tempestuous sea, we will never get across because we must have both of them on this voyage, for fear that a storm may arise on the sea while we are crossing its rocky billows. And if our vessel should be wrecked or sunk while crossing the sea we will be lost and that forever. But if we have both oars, when the storm comes, we will be able to outride all storms and land safely it the harbor of heaven.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction." I will now proceed to notice the second part of my subject.

Religious duty. "To visit." Here seems to be a duty that belongs to every follower of Christ, and if we do not fulfil this christian duty our religion is vain. The scripture says, "Judge not, that ye be not judged," but another scripture tells us, "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." Matt. 7: 1, 20.

Now then we find that the scripture speaks about two ways and two gates. So then, we must consider that one of these ways is the King's highway of holiness, while the other is the broad way that leadeth to destruction. Every step we make is one step nearer to heaven—or to hell, because the one way leadeth to heaven and the other way leadeth to destruction. Now I will notice a few of the steps which leadeth the true christian on the narrow way, and if their steps are not this way I shall show you that they are not walking in the narrow way, but are walking in the broad way.

Here we find the apostle James speaks about a visit—and he makes it a religious duty, for he says "to visit." I need not tell you what a visit is or what it means, because you all know that yourselves. Then the question is, who is to be visited, or how is this visiting to be done? You all know that visiting is very customary and fashionable at the present day, but I am sorry to say that it is not done in the way that the apostle James commanded them to visit, neither are the persons visited which he told them to visit.

I will give you a few illustrations of some of the visiting that is done by some of our church members, and then you can judge the tree by its fruit, whether it is bearing the right kind or not, and when you examine its fruit, then you can judge for yourself whether that step is in the narrow way or not.

For an illustration, suppose Bro. A, on a bright Sabbath morning, gets ready, jumps into his three hundred dollar buggy and drives off, about five miles, to Bro. B's. house, and there he spends the Sabbath in eating and drinking and talking about worldly matters. On this visit he drives past sister C's house, morning and evening, and never stops to bid her the time of day. Now sister C. is a poor widow with a lot of small fatherless children, and has no way of going to church only by walking, and sister C. has invited some one of the members, Sabbath after Sabbath, to come to see her, because she can not get out to Church any more, and she is in want for clothing or something else. Now what do you think of brother A. after doing this? If brother A. was a true christian, his visit would have been to see sister C., the poor widow, instead of going to brother B's. house where he expected to get a big dinner.

Another visit—The next Sabbath Bro. B. gets ready, he and his wife, and jumps into their grand spring wagon and drives right along by sister C's. door, but don't stop to ask her whether she will go along to Church or not, but drives on and by and by comes to brother D's. house. Here he stops and invites brother D. and his family to go along to Church. Now brother D. is wealthy and this is why Bro. B. stopped to take him and his family along to church. After church they all go to brother A's. house, where they expect to get a big dinner. After the grand dinner is over and they talk about their big farms, their grand decorated houses, their grand spring wagons, buggies, &c., they start for home. So brother B. drives on home again, and don't stop to ask anything about the poor widow. Now what do you think about that kind of visiting? You must admit that it is wrong, and that all visiting that is done in that way is wrong, and God will hold them accountable for it when they come to die and stand before his bar, and there give a strict account for what they have done here below, because God is no respecter of persons. God loves the fatherless and the widow just as much as the king on his throne.

I have now given you a few examples of the kind of visiting which is done at the present day, and will now pass on to notice the third part of my subject.

General remarks. The apostle James tells us that, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Here we find that the apostle James warns us of a danger, and that danger is the world. He says, "and to keep himself unspotted." Unspotted means pure; holy; spotless, &c.

Every step we make is in the narrow way or else it is in the broad way that leadeth to destruction, and every visit we make that is not according to the scripture, is one step into the world, and every step we make into the world is adding to our religion one spot. This is why the apostle tells us "to keep unspotted from the world."

O. W. SMITH.

The Beard.

"Ye shall not round the corners of your heads, neither shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard."Lev —19 : 27.

"They shall not make baldness upon their head, neither shall they shave off the corner of their beard, nor make any cuttings in their flesh."—Lev. 21 : 5.

I am sometimes aroused while reading the views of some of our friends on the subject, how the beard should be worn, but when I take into consideration how much has been said and written on the subject, and how earnestly some contend for their peculiar cut of the beard, I am compelled to conclude that some of us are becoming, to say the least, a little Pharisaical, clinging to the letter, but forgetting the spirit.

God in his wisdom saw fit to cause hair to grow on the lower part of man's face and upper lip. As he never does an unwise thing we infer that man's beard is for his good. Of the physilogical benefits of the beard, I will not write at present, but will look at it from a religious standpoint. The Jews, with all Oriental nations, viewed the beard as the special mark of manly dignity, and the loss of it as a disgrace or degrading punishment. "Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and shaved off the one half of their beards."—2d Samuel 10: 4. This was done to insult David. To avoid ridicole David sent servants to detain his disgraced embassadors at Jericho until their beards grew long again. See 1 Chron. 19 : 5. Is. 7 : 20.) That the beard was almost idolized by the Jews and Arabs, we infer from the many warm sentiments expressed in its favor. "By your beard, by the life of your beards God preserve your blessed beard," &c. When they would express their value of anything, they would say, "It is worth more than a man's beard."—Ezek. 5 : 1-5-9. Hence we can understand the insult to king David, given by the Ammonites.

The Jews encouraged its growth and were careful to trim it, dress it, and anoint it with perfumed unguents. (Ps. 138: 2.) With intimate friends the beard was used in salutation. (2d Samuel, 20 : 9). The preservation of the beard was a distinction between the Israelites and the Egyptians, among whom they sojourned, as the latter shave off either a part or all of the beard. As strange as it may appear, those who shaved themselves entirely would fasten on false beards.

Just when, or where, the idea of shaving first originated, I am unable to say, but that the thing was done in an early age of the worlds is evident from paintings found on old Egyptian monuments. (See Wilkison's ancient Egypt iii page 362.) Among the Jews, the beards were neglected in seasons of sorrow and calamity; in deep affliction they were cut off, torn out or covered up. (2d Samuel, 19 : 24.) "When the son of Saul came down to meet the King, and had neither dressed his feet nor trimmed his beard." Is. 15 : 2. "He is gone up to Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places, to weep. Moab shall howl over Nebo, and over Medeba; on all their heads shall be baldness, and every beard cut off." Read Jeremiah 41 : 51; Ezra 9 : 3; Ezek. 24 : 17-22. When a leper was healed of his leprosy, he washed himself in a bath and shaved off all the hair of his body. This was repeated in seven days, after which he offered the sacrifices appointed for his purification. (Lev. 14 : 9). The Levites at their consecration, shaved off all the hair of their bodies. We find in Levit., 21 : 5, that Moses forbids the Israelites to cut off entirely the corners of the beard. The question is often asked, which are the corners of the beard? Many of the Egyptians, with other nations, shaved their whole face with the exception of the end of their chin, where they left a small tuft of beard grow. This had with them an idolotrous significance. Now I think the reader will readily see the answer to the question, and also, why Moses forbid the shaving off the corners of the face. The question comes to us, how shall we wear our beard? Have we any positive Scripture command on the matter? My answer to the latter, is no. Yet we may come to some conclusion from the examples and incidental teachings of the Bible. That the beard was trimmed, dressed, and oiled, we have already shown, and that the neglect of the beard was no exception, the evidence show and can be further proved. A part of the Nazarite vow was to let their hair grow. Samson and John the Baptist were consecrated to their Nazariteship by their parents, and continued all their lives without cutting their hair. We find from Acts 18 : 18, and 21 : 23-24, that Paul had taken the Nazarite vow. My conclusion is, from the fact that a vow was taken and a condition of that vow was to let the hair grow, that without the vow the hair was cut and trimmed, hence we conclude that in the time of Christ the hair and beard was cut and trimmed with care and taste. Now Paul commands us to cut our hair short. "Does not even nature itself teach you, that if a man have long hair it is a shame unto him." —1 Cor. 11 : 14. In Matt. 6 : 17 Christ tells his disciples to anoint their hair when they fast. No doubt to make them look cheerful, and not put on a solemn appearance like the Pharisees. It is my opinion that if a man is truly regenerated, and a faithful follower of his heavenly Master, the beard will adjust itself to its proper dimensions. I have no battles to fight or special theory to defend in this matter, but have written this for truth's sake.

The Pilgrim.

HUNTINGDON, PA., DEC. 1, 1874.

Our Charity Offer.

A number of our brethren and sisters residing in Kansas have been sorely distressed by the grasshoppers eating all their living. On account of this misfortune public charity is being enlisted and provisions will be supplied, but as they, like all others, cannot live by bread alone, their spiritual interests must not be forgotten. We therefore propose to do something in this direction and make the following offer to brethren, sisters and friends in localities where the grasshoppers have destroyed their crops. We will send them the PILGRIM one year post paid for $1.30 and wait them either 'till they have time to earn it or let them pay it as soon as they can during the year. This offer is made only for the benefit of those who have been unfortunate, and of course expect no others to take advantage of it. In such places where the PILGRIM is not yet introduced, our friends will do them a favor by telling them of this offer. We will further state that if any of our brethren or sisters wish to send the PILGRIM to such, we will let them pay for it at the same rate.

An Agreeable Call.

On Saturday A. M., we had the pleasure of receiving a call from brother Wm. Howe and John M. Mobler and his wife and sister Andrew Spanogle, all of the Lewistown congregation. They were on their way to brother Archy Van. Dyke's, some five miles North of this place. On Sunday evening they returned to our house wher and when we spent one of the most pleasant evenings that it has been our lot to enjoy for a long time. After spending several hours together in exchanging ideas on religious topics, we had a season of worship or a family religious sociable. Bro. Howe read a chapter and from it made some very appropriate remarks, then had a season of prayer and concluded by singing several hymns. After this, brother Mohler and wife and sister Spanogle took the train for home, and Bro. Howe remained with us until next morning. Such calls are appreciated by the PILGRIM family, and hope we may have the pleasure of enjoying many more of a similar character.

Ministerial Visits.

Mr. Talmage, of Brooklyn, expresses himself, through The Christian at Work, in the following sensible style, on the above subject:

"Ministerial Associations all over the land have lately been discussing the safety or perils of clerical visitations. Some suggest that ministers ought to take their wives with them when they call on their parishoners. Others say better be accompanied by a church officer in order to avoid scandal. All of which humbug arises into the positively sublime. Dear Dominies! the ladies are not so crazy after you as you have been led to suppose. As far as we have observed, they are perfectly harmless. Mind your own business, and they will mind theirs. Use common sense, and the Lord will take care of you and your reputation forever. Do not go about, as many ministers, with promiscuous demonstrations of affection. Kiss your own wife and children and sisters-in-law and cousins as much as you will, but do not feel called upon to treat with similar ardor the attractive people of your congregation, unless it be deacons and sexton. Greet these last with a holy kiss as often as you have a mind to. Solomon says hard things about the women; but if he had contented himself with six or seven hundred less of them, he would not have had so much trouble. With ordinary prudence, there has not since the foundation of the world been a single instance where a good man's name has permanently suffered."

A certain old prophet, long ago said, "I once was young and now am old yet have I never seen the righteous forsaken." It is true, some of our modern ministers have gotten themselves into trouble, but we are not at all sure that women were in fault of it nor anybody else in particular, and had it not been for their own indiscreetness they might be to-day, entirely exempt from the charges now brought against them. There is a sacred privateness belonging to every family with which none have a right to interfere, and if ministers mistake their calling and get to writing billetsdoux to, and courting other men's women, they have a right to suffer the consequences—have no right to public sympathy, and get it largely only from such as are alike guilty. That many of the so-called ministers have shamefully abused their privileges is an evident fact, and it is high time that the public should set its foot upon it.

TAKE THE VENOM OUT.

The other day we received a letter from a brother requesting us to return some manuscript, saying that he wished to take the venom out of it. This venom is what spoils much of our writing, and we glad to know that some of our writers have a disposition to take it out. Charity thinketh no ill and when our hearts are well filled with it, there is no room for venom. It generally creeps into our writings at such times when there is a little of it in our hearts. We may not be aware of its presence there, neither do we intend it to creep out through the nib of our pen, but it gets out nevertheless, not in our sober moments but when we write under the pressure of impulse. But notwithstanding this, this venom is generally the creature of the writer. Yet we are sorry to know that it is frequently the child of later birth, that it is generated and put in by the reader. If his or her heart is filled with this venom it will creep into everything they read, no matter how good it is, they can always find an evil in it. This is very unfortunate for every body concerned, but especially is this the case with us editors. We are often puzzled to know what to insert for fear that some one will put venom into it. We have frequently good articles on hands that might be productive of good, was it not for some that are ever ready to fill them with their venom, forgetting and covering over the good, and only remembering and retaining that which they can shape into some form of evil. How blessed it would be for us all if every brother and sister had their mantel of charity ever ready to cast over their brother or sister's fault. Brethren and sisters, before you read or write please cast away the venom.

The Bethel Meeting. No. 2.

In our last, we talked of going out to the Bethel again, to attend the meeting in progress, and as we have now returned we feel like having another talk with our readers. While the time has not yet come that we can talk with God face to face as a friend to a friend, yet we are glad that we still enjoy the privilege of talking to one another as brethren and sisters in Christ Jesus.

On Wednesday evening we drove out to the Bethel and had the pleasure of hearing a very interesting sermon delivered by brother John Spanogle. "Blessed are they that do the commandments that they may have a right to the tree of life and enter through the gates into the city," is a subject of no ordinary character and is well calculated to animate the faltering soldier to renewed efforts to gain the victory and come off more than conquerors through the might of Him who is able to save, even to the very uttermost. While the saint was feeding upon the life-giving and life-sustaining food, the sinner had an opportunity of reflecting upon the entire barrenness of his own soul and that to him, was promised no blessedness, no right to the tree of life, and no entering in through the gates into the city. Such knowledge cannot be very consoling, especially when we learn that, without are only dogs, whoremongers and such as love and make a lie. Notwithstanding this is an evident fact, is it not passingly strange that, for the sake of a few of the devil's basks thousands of intelligent men and woman too, will remain without, seemingly content to associate with and feed swine! Bro. Spanogle labored to place before the minds of the congregation the beauties, the glory of the former and the disappointments and horrors of the latter, and we hope that some were made to see the great difference between the one that serves God and the one that serves him not. Bro. Grabill followed with some appropriate remarks and then closed the meeting. We then all went to the home of our brother Frederick Showalter, where we enjoyed quite a pleasant interchange of ideas on subjects of interest. This was, a few years ago, a happy little family consisting of father, mother, and three little children, Ida, Effie and Annie, but three out of the five are now on the other side while father and little Annie remain, and constitute the family. Although we had every care and attention that could be desired or wished for, yet we could not help but notice the empty seats and lonely corners. What may yet be in store for this broken household we know not, but feel to say; Father, deal kindly with the unmated brother and have mercy upon the little motherless one. While some are better circumstanced in life many are very much worse, so that all in all, the Lord hath dealt graciously with them.

The next morning, by arrangement, we all visited brother Isaac Norris' family where we spent the day very pleasantly indeed. These visits, if properly conducted, may be of great spiritual benefit to all concerned, especially in such families as reside a little out of the way. Religion is largely made up of love and the more we can cultivate that divine principle, the more good we can accomplish.

In the evening, we again met for public preaching when brother Grabill led off. He seemed to be especially inspired with his subject and spoke with unusual fervor and power. He was followed by brother Spanogle, who seemed to have caught the spirit of inspiration and spoke with such earnestness that there was a perceptible impression made throughout the congregation. After services, we in company with the ministering brethren and others, went to the home of our eldest brother, Benjamin, where we enjoyed another pleasant season together. Next morning our labors called us home and therefore could not be with the brethren any longer. One more appointment was to conclude the meeting at that place and brother Myers was to go to Coffee Run and remain over Sunday. As we had other engagements, we could not be present. What may be the result of the labors of our dear brethren, we know not, but hope that the seed sown may produce a copious harvest.

Negative vs Positive.

Are there really instances in which it is imprudent and a non-fulfillment of the spirit of the command to not tell our brother of his fault? Are we left to judge or are we capable of judging when it is acting the part of wisdom to obey or not to obey a command? If we have understood a writer in this week's issue, it would seem from his view of the subject that we possess this ability, and that we are to exercise our wisdom as to whether a command is to be obeyed or not. He says we may obey the positive side of a command of Jesus when it is not proper to do so, and then to illustrate this view he refers to the temptation of Christ on the pinnacle of the temple. It is true satan did show Christ the positive side of a passage of Scripture but he did not show him the positive side of a command, neither is it his purpose to do so. It was simply a declaration or promise, significant of the watchful care of the Father over the Son. To this satan directed the attention of Christ, with a view that it might induce him to yield to his temptation.

But "be ye wise as serpents and as harmless as doves" is said to be the negative side to the command "Go and tell him his fault." Is it possible that the wisdom referred to is to be used in the negation of the propriety of any of Christ's commands? We think this idea scarcely tenable. The promptings of satan have ever been, and are yet towards disobedience, but does not take the positive side of a command, although he may of a promise, to effect his heinish designs. In the temptations to disobedience consists the great Christian warfare, and in this conflict it does require wisdom in order to gain the ascendency and at the same time appear as lambs in the sight of the enemy. Our wisdom should be employed in refuting the temptations of satan, but not in determining whether a command of God should be obeyed or not. We are not the judges in this matter and obedience can never have an unfavorable result. It is true "Charity covereth a multitude of sins," and when we have enough of it to cover the faults of a brother it ceases to be and the command is no longer in force. J. B. B.

YOUTHS DEPARTMENT.

Just These Little Things.

Kitty had been wishing she could do something to please Jesus. She had been thinking of the time when the mothers had brought their children to him when he was on earth, and he put his hands on their heads and blessed them. She said to her mother:

"I suppose it was only the very little ones that he took in his arms —the tiny ones, like baby—and he put his hands on the larger ones. Do you think he would do so to me mother if he were on earth?"

"Undoubtedly; for he is the same Savior still. And he is just as truly present, looking to you, to see if you love and obey him."

"Oh, I do want to, mother. Tell me something that I can do for him," said Kitty.

"Why, just these little things, which you know you ought to do, at home and at school," replied her mother.

"What! such things as these? I thought I must read the Bible and pray, most of the time; and go and teach other children about him."

"That is a mistaken idea, my child. You ought surely to read and pray, at proper seasons, and never omit these duties; for in this way you learn of God and your duty to him. But just where God has put you is the proper place for you to serve him. And whatever you have to do, feel that Jesus is near and asks you to do it to please him; for he has really given it to you to do."

"If I could see him and hear him ask me, I am sure I would do anything for him," said Kitty.

"Well, dear, he says, whosoever does anything to help another, from love to him, does it for him; and he will take it as if it were done to him. Do you remember the verse?"

"Not exactly," replied Kitty, and her mother then gave her a card, on which was printed, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me;" adding, "This is really the voice of Jesus, asking you to do everything for him."

Her mother was called away, and Kitty studied the verse until she knew it perfectly. Pretty soon she heard Nancy, the colored girl, say:

"Oh, I do wish somebody would call Bob to get me some wood. I'am so belated in my ironing, I don't know how to leave it off, and my fire is so low."

Then thought Kitty, "I will go; for this will help Nancy, and please Jesus."

So off she ran to the barnyard; but Bob not being there, she hunted for him till she found him; and he soon brought the wood for the fire, and Nancy said to Kitty:

"You are a deary, and have helped me wonderfully; for nothing pesters me so much as to have the wood give out when I'm ironing."

But Kitty did not always remember what she learned that day, about the voice of Jesus speaking, when any duty was required of her, and would do it reluctantly, or say, "I don't want to." This would make her unhappy, and she could not rest till she had told Jesus all about it. So, little by little, she learned to be more watchful, and after awhile acquired a habit of doing everything in a more cheerful and loving spirit.

Besides, she felt so much happier when she did things in this way, that the thought of this helped her too. She would say to herself, "I am always happy, when I am obliging and kind;" and one of her little prayers was, "Dear Savior make me loving and kind to everybody." —Mary P. Hale, in Child at Home.

Cultivating a pure Expression.

Every word that falls from the lips of mothers and sisters especially should be pure and concise and simple; not pearls such as fall from the lips of the princess, but sweet good words that little children can gather without fears of soil, or after shame and blame or any regrets to pain through all their life.

Children should be taught the frequent use of good expressive words—words that mean exactly what they should express in their proper places.

If a child or young person, has a loose and flung-together way of speaking words when endeavoring to say something, he should be made to try again, and see if he cannot do better.

It is painful to listen to many girl's talk. They begin with a "My goodness!" and interlard it with "oh's and "sakes alive!" and "so sweet!" and so many phrases that one is tempted to believe they have no training at all, or else they were very foolish woman.

There is nothing more disgusting than the twaddle of ill-bred girls; one is provoked often to taking a paper and reading, letting them ripple away like brooks that flow they know not whither.

My heart warms with love for sensible girls and pure boys; and after all, if our girls and boys are not this, I fear it is our own fault—that this great trust rests in hearts and hands of the women of our land.

If we have a noble, useful purpose in life, we shall infuse the right spirit into those around us.

For the Boys.

"Sir," said a boy, stopping before a man on his cart, "do you want a boy to work for you."

"No," answered the man, "I have no such want." The boy looked disappointed; at least the man thought so and he asked, "Don't you succeed in getting a place?"

"I have asked at a good many places," said the boy. "A woman told me you was after a boy, but it is not so I find."

"Don't be discouraged said the man, in a friendly tone.

"Oh! no, sir," said the boy, cheerfully "because this is a very big world, and I feel certain God has something for me to do in it. I am only trying to find it."

"Just so, just so," said a gentleman, who overheard the talk. Come with me, my boy; I am in want of somebody just like you." It was the doctor, and the doctor thought any boy that was so anxious to find his work would be likely to do it faithfully when he found it.

If everybody had the spirit of this little lad, there would be no idlers in the world, standing at the corners, or sitting in the shops, waiting for work to come to them.

Work does not often come so. Almost everything worth having, like the ore in the mine must be sought for. —Heavenly Tidings.

Thankfulness.

It was a cold winternight, but the frosty air could not enter the rosy sitting room, where a family group were gathered under the softly shaded gaslight.

There was everything about them to make them happy, but somehow the smiles did not come. Minnie was fretting because her new sash was a shade to dark, and Fanny's furs were not as nice as her neighbor's. Fred was contending with his brother and both father and mother had lines of sorrow on their brows. Do you know the reason of the unhappiness of this family? There was no thought of thankfulness to God in one of their hearts. When this is absent you will never find any lasting happiness.

Not far away from this was a poor little house, where dwelt a large family. They had all supped from a brown loaf and cup of milk apiece, and now they huddled about the fire with their shawls and thickest coats about them, busy with lessons and work. But every face is lit with the light of a happy heart. You can tell quick enough when you look into a face whether "the bird in the bosom" is singing sweetly or not. When you pass a house at night it is easy to tell whether the lamp is lit or not. It shines out.

"Father" said little Martha, looking up from the coarse gray sock she was knitting, "how happy we are in our house this cold night. This thick sacque makes me so comfortable, and all the children have good stout shoes. How thankful we ought to be.

"And then we have good warm beds to sleep in this cold night," said Charles, who was beginning to be sleepy.

"Yet the Son of Man had not where to lay his head," said father thoughtfully, as he paused a moment in his work of mending a shoe for the baby's foot. I have thought of that text a great deal to day, when I considered the many comforts he has given to us.

When the boys have finished their lessons, we will all sing our favorite hymn of "Loving kindness" before we go to rest.

The hymn was sung, and the family sank into peaceful rest with more of hearts-ease in their bosoms than many wear who dwell in king's palaces. Would you like to wear this same sweet flower and enjoy its delicate perfume? Learn to look with thankfulness for every good gift you receive. —Presbyterian.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Notes of Travel.

On Nov. 12th, brother Henry Hershberger and myself started on preaching tour through Southampton, Bedford Co., Pa. Had the first meeting at Weimer's school-house, two miles beyond Clearville, where brother Israel Bennett met us. Next day he conducted us to his home in the lower end of the township near the Maryland line. Had meeting in the Fifteen Mile Run schoolhouse near by; tried to preach from the words, "Lord, what must I do to be saved," to an attentive audience. We thought it indispensible among the prerequisites to connect christian baptism with the necessity of salvation: hence we spoke some on the proper mode, formula and position of baptism, as understood from the scripture, in order to divest the audience from the erroneous idea imbibed by being taught again and again that single backward immersion constitutes Christian baptism.

Next morning, 14th, crossed a big and rugged mountain to Mount Zion church, had an attentive audience at 10 a. m. Went to Black Valley church near Geo. Bennett's, preached there that evening on the principles of the doctrine of Christ, Heb. 6 chapter, first part. Next day being Lord's day, at 10 a. m. at the same place, from John, 13th chapter. Tried to show that in order to go on to perfection it is necessary, among other things, to observe the ordinance of feet-washing, and the Lord's supper, (as a separate institution from the bread and wine) the communion, the salutation of the kiss, and the anoiting of the sick with oil in the name of the Lord; which was listened to with profound attention by a full house. Hope the effort may bring some to the searching of the scriptures, whether these things may be so. In this place are no members nearer than 4 or 5 miles. That evening we preached again in the Fifteen Mile Run school-house, to an uncomfortably crowded audience. We preached from Heb. 2: 3, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" Tried to impress upon the mind the magnitude of that salvation, what it cost, and the necessity of accepting the same, and the direful consequences following in case of rejection. Hope impressions have been made that will result in good. Next morning, 16th, crossed Rugged mountain again to Mount Zion church. Meeting at 10 a. m. which ended our labors for the time. We preached from the latter part of the 19th chapter of Matthew's gospel, of the necessity of following Jesus to gain eternal life, to a considerable audience considering the place, and the first working day in the week. Returned to Bro. H. H's. home, found his family well and happy to see our safe return. Next day, 17th of Nov., came home at 1 p. m., found all well, thank God for his care.

When I came to Pattonville I received the sad intelligence that brother David Brumbaugh had went to his long home, and the people were just returning from attending his funeral. He was the oldest minister in our congregation. His death will be noticed in another place.

The region we visited is mountainous and rugged with a few members scattered through it, and belongs to the Snakespring Valley church, which church is weak in the ministry. Their elder lately departed this life, hence it is necessary that the neighboring churches assist them in their ministerial labors, more particularly on the outskirts, as they are in a great measure neglected. Their territory is large and they cannot possibly do them justice without assistance. I have no doubt that by regular and frequent preaching, and now and then a series of meetings, in a short time a reasonable membership could be obtained. They are hungry for the word of God, and I found not a few among them who delight in the preaching of the unadulterated Gospel, they relish sound doctrine, and for the reason of hearing so much spurious doctrine some have never united with any denomination. Some were ready to conclude that preaching is a work of speculation. They say, money, MONEY! is the cry. But when they see that some are willing to sacrifice time and expense, and offer to preach the Gospel free of charge, the idea of speculation or self interest is cut off, and they begin to think these men came for souls, hence they examine more thoroughly into their preaching. It will make an impression upon their minds in such a manner as some expressed themselves, "this is sound doctrine, we cannot gainsay it. Let us hear more of it, come again, do not stay so long away, and make arrangements to stay longer the next time." Such was the earnest entreaty of many when we left them. God bless them for their kindness, their liberality and courtesy. Grant them repentance unto life to the salvation of their souls, is my prayer.

How we hold our Lovefeasts.

Dear Pilgrim:—When on our journey East, while stopping in Ohio, some of the brethren wished us to give them the out lines of how we hold our Lovefeasts in the West. We will cheerfully try to do so, as I find there is some little discrepency among the Brethren on the above subject. Whether our order is the best we would not say, but we think we try to come as near the Word as we know how.

We generally meet for public preaching at 1 o'clock p. m. and have about two hours services, then have recess from one to two hours, to attend to any business pertaining to the church. Then we call the congregation together by singing a hymn, then the brethren talk on the subject of examination, and then close by prayer. We then have recess long enough for the brethren and sisters to arrange the tables with a full meal or supper, also have water and all the necessary arrangements for Feetwashing. Then the body is called to order by singing an appropriate hymn on Feetwashing. Then a brother reads part of the 14th chapter of John, and as he reads he rises from supper &c. The brethren and sisters that intend to commence the washing rise from the table upon which there is a full supper at the time, also the Communion bread and wine on the one end of the same table; then the water is poured into the basin, the towel girded on, and washing feet commences. While the washing is going on some brother speaks on the subject of Feet-washing and the Lord's Supper. At the close of this exercise, thanks are offered for the Supper, then we eat the Lord's Supper remembering that the Lord said He would not any more eat of it 'till it would be fulfilled in the Kingdom of God.

Then thanks are returned for the Supper, nothing being red off the table, and while a brother is reading the 19th chapter of John, the administrator prepares the bread. He makes a few remarks on the suffering and death of Christ, preparing our minds for the solemn occasion, then the salutation of the kiss is passed around, remembering we are commanded to kiss one another. The administrator then asks the blessing of the Lord on the bread. It is broke from brother to brother and sister to sister, then we eat it remembering Jesus said as often as ye do this do it in remembrance of me. Likewise a blessing is asked over the cup and distributed in like manner, then general thanks returned to God, a hymn sung and the exercises close. We have had over four hundred members and generally close between 8 and 9 o'clock; hence good order. I have briefly given the order as far as I know, of Ills., Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota. Now I am inclined to think our practice is as near the word of the Lord that all the Brethren could unite in the one order.

A Proposition.

Dear Brethren: I propose through the columns of the PILGRIM, to suggest a plan of organization for our District (1st District of Va.,) for the relief of the brethren in Kansas. Bro. Allen Ivis of the White Rock Congregation writes in No. 45 of the current volume of the Visitor and Companion, proposing to receive donations free, or to borrow the sum of three thousand dollars on ten years time at 10 per cent interest.

To satisfy this demand I propose that the congregations of our district hold meetings at the earliest practicable period and collect the money the members are willing to give or lend to our suffering brethren, and to forward it to brother Ives of Burr Oak, Jewell Co., Kansas. Owing to the fact that Kansas is destined to become a rich and powerful State, and that many of our brethren here are comparatively poor and must always remain so, I suggest that this money be advanced as a loan on five years time, and if the Kansas brethren cannot return it then, the time can be extended.

The secretary of each congregation should keep a registry of the names of the members and the amount each subscribes, and then when the money is returned it can be ascertained readily to whom it is due. The bond should be given by a responsible committee of the White Rock congregation to a responsible committee of each congregation here for their several amounts.

Now brethred the condition of the Kansas brethren will not admit of delay, and an early response to their appeal is demanded. We cannot neglect this appeal. Read the 17th verse of the 3d chapter of the 1st epistle of John, and then ask yourself the question, how much can I send the brethren who have need? Your Bro.

BROOKLIN IOWA. }
Nov. 23d 1874. }

Dear Editors:—

I have received the sample number of the PILGRIM for 1875. I can say I am well pleased with it, and hope its circulation may be greatly increased. I intend to do all I can in that direction. I asked a brother yesterday whether he intended to take the PILGRIM next year. He said, "Yes, I cannot do very well without it." I think you are giving us a great deal of reading for the small sum of money we send you. Your labors are very much appreciated by us, and I for one have received many wholesome instructions from the columns of your worthy paper. Often have I been told my duty through this medium. O, that parents would place in the hands of their children such wholesome reading as is imparted in the columns of the PILGRIM, instead of allowing them to poison their minds with the trashy novels scattered over the land. For such reading would no doubt lead them to read the holy Bible, which teaches them the way to heaven, the place we are so earnestly striving for, and where we hope to meet those we love so dearly in this world. I have many friends whom I love dearly, yet many of them are yet out of the ark of safty. O, that they would look to their own interest, turn in with God's dear children to love and serve him according to his holy and righteous will. I have often wondered why people would be so careless about the salvation of their souls. Surely "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of the light," for when a man is about to buy a farm he will have the men appointed for the business to search the record thoroughly to see whether the title is good for fear after he had purchased the farm somebody might have a better title, and thereby rob him of his home on earth, and it is all good and right that he should do so before purchasing a farm. But how slow people are to search the heavenly records to see whether their titles are clear and good for heaven. All seem to want to serve God some time and die happy, and enter through the portals of eternal bliss, but many put it off for a more convenient season, which often does not come. The promise of salvation is to-day. I just now, feel like writing more, but have written all that my space and time will allow me.

AN APPEAL TO THE BROTHERHOOD.

Dear Brethren: I make this appeal to you in behalf of brother Joseph Howes, who, on the second day of Nov. last, by fire, his dwelling house, out house and smoke house, supposed to have taken fire by the bursting of a lamp, burning up a helpless invalid daughter, and all of his household and kitchen furniture, grain and meat, implements &c. Nothing saved Loss, $1500, leaving brother and sister Howes houseless. Bro. Howes is a deacon in the church, and the oldest member of this arm. He is upwards of 71 years old. Some years ago he was exonerated from the paymant of county and township taxes on account of his debility and the keeping of his invalid daughter that was burned.

Now brethren, I have given you a statement of facts and if any of you doubt their correctness you are at liberty to make diligent enquiry as to its truthfulness. Brethren, can you help in time of need? I appeal unto you all individually to cast in your mite, and the God whom we serve will reward you in the world to come, "for inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren ye did it unto me." Those that are willing to give something enclose it carefully in a letter and send it to brother Joseph Howes, Balington, Barbour Co., W. Va.

A Special Request

QUERY 11. Will not this district Meeting draft a plan, having for its object the raising of funds to assist poor and needy Churches in building meetinghouses in congregations where the Brethren have no house of worship.

ANSWER. Yes.

QUERY 12 Whereas it is a Bible Doctrine that Faith and Obedience are essential to Salvation and men cannot believe in Him of whom they have not heard and cannot hear without a preacher. Does not this meeting deem it her duty to make decided efforts to have the Gospel, in its primitive purity more extensively preached in the part of Southern Illinois where the practice of the Brethren is not generally known, and will she not, therefore devise means by which the same could be carried into effect?

ANSWER. John Metzger, Joseph Hendricks, David Franz, Daniel Vaniman and J. B. Moore, are hereby a committee to devise a plan to assist needy Churches in getting houses of Worship and also a plan for making greater efforts in preaching the Gospel in its primitive purity, agreable to the above two queries, and report the same to the next district meeting and all the Brethren and Sisters are hereby requested to consider this subject prayerfully and communicate to any member of the committee any proposition or plan that may assist in perfecting suitable plans.

By request of the Committee we copy the above from the minutes of our last District meeting and send them to the PILGRIM for publication hoping the Companion will not fail ot copy.

We make a special request that some of the Brethren will give us a full account of the plan adopted by some of the eastern churches for more extensively preaching the gospel.

We do not yet know what your plans are and would be glad to have them; perhaps they may answer the purpose for which they are intended Any brother or sister having anything on their minds suitable for carrying out the objects of either or both of the above queries will confer a favor by communicating the same to any member of the committee. As we propose to meet about the middle of January ,next, all information on the subject should reach us by that time. J. H. Moore.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—John A. Clement.—The money order was received all righ and the names are marked paid.

—Bro. J. M. Zuck has changed his place of residence and address from Lebanon Ohio, to Medina Ohio.

—Bro. D. D. Shively of LaPlace, Ill., says: "We are having some very fine weather at this time, and farmers are making good use of it in putting away their corn which is tolerable good and is selling at 50 cts. per bushel."

—We have just received the Minutes of the proceedings of the District Meeting of the Southern District of Ill., held on the 19th and 20th of Oct., 1874. With their labors we are much pleased and will have something to say about one of the decisions next week.

—Bro. J. Y. Heckler of Mt. Carroll Ill., says: "We have still remarkably pleasant weather here and no snow yet, nor frost enough to freeze the ground. The farmers have had a good year, good crops, good prices, no grasshoppers nor chinch bugs in this section, and but few potato bugs, but many reasons to be thankful to God for the favors we enjoy."

—The local correspondent idea is meeting a very favorable reception and promises to be altoger the practicable. As before stated, we want a reporter in each church who will make it a specialty to report everything of general interest that occurs in the district. Who will they be? If those who are willing to take this position will send us their names we will form a list of them so that we may know who they are. In some future number we will give definite directions in regard to the character of the news that will be desired. This arrangement will not defer others from the privilege of reporting as all are equally welcome to our columns.

—Bros. H. D. Davy and B. F Moomaw have returned from their visit to Cal., and through the Companion, Bro. Davy gives a very meagre report of which the following is the substance:

They arrived safely—were kindly received by the brethren and sisters—made the acquaintance of a large number of members—hoped that their labors would be crowned with success—and returned home. The brethren may have good reasons for not giving a full report, but this, we fear, is a little too meagre to render satisfaction to those who helped to send them.

Our Sample copy, so far as heard from is giving unbounded satisfaction. The following from Bro. D D. S. of La Place, Ill gives the general expression of those heard from:

Dear Brother:

I received the sample number of the PILGRIM as it is to be for 1875 and am well pleased with it. I am satisfied, that it will meet the approbation of the patrons in general and my opinion is, that by your agents exerting themselves a little they can greatly enlarge the circulation. By you appointing a reporter in every church to give the news, our paper will and can be made a very interesting messenger to all its patons.

—Bro. Samuel Petry of Good's Mill Va., says: "May the good Lord continue to give you wisdom in the future, as He has done in the past, to keep the PILGRIM filled to the brim with the Bread of Life, that it may continue to reach the hearts of the readers and accomplish much good in the name of Jesus. Let us remember each other at a throne of grace, that our faith fail not, so that when our race is run we may meet justified at the judgment seat of Christ."

Such is the spirit of Christ and we say, Ameo. If all of our dear brethren and sisters would pray more for us and chide us less the PILGRIM cause would be greatly blessed. Brethren and sisters pray for us.

—While some enthusiasts are getting frightened on the late sensations produced by the late Beecher, Tilton and Glendenning troubles, fearing that the great cause will suffer, Mr. Dana of the New York Sun anticipates no danger but on the contrary, thinks it may result in a positive good by drawing the lines on thousands of others who are drifting towards the meshes of free love. The following is the conclusion of an editorial on the subject:

"On the whole, a general survey of the field leads to the conclusion that clergymen, when not engaged in writing or delivering their sermons, had better be occupied in digging potatoes, picking up chestnuts, shooting partridges, driving or riding good horses, or something else that is useful, or at least innocent and pleasant, rather than in philandering around with sentimental women, or visiting them in their boudoirs, whether they be married or single.

But whatever ministers may do, religion will stand."

Brother Geo. S. Myers, of Lewistown Pa., says:

"We think the sample copy of the PILGRIM deserves commendation. The appearance is attractive, the form is preferable to the former style, and it breathes a spirit that will win favor wherever it can be introduced. I would specially desire to see the suggestion mentioned in a former number of having a Correspondent in every Church District, carried into working effect. By this means the actual numerical strength of the Brotherhood could be ascertained, the number of meeting-houses, percentage of increase each year, &c., enabling you to acquire an amount of information, and give it to your readers, that could not (or at least would not be attainable for years,) in any other way. A live correspondent who will promptly forward for publication all matters of interest occurring in each church, would, we think, increase your subscription list very materially, enhance the usefulness, and make the PILGRIM visits to the families of its patrons more enjoyable. Wishing the cause prosperity I remain a willing assistant to the extent of opportunities afforded."

—We have just received a circular from brother Lewis Kimmel, of the Plum Creek Normal School. This school is conducted under the principalship of Bro. Kimmel and seems to be meeting with considerable success. From the circular, we extract the following:

This Institution, possessed of all the vigor and life of youth, is running on its merit, and not upon a reputation acquired years ago. Its object is the training of Teachers and the laying of a broad and sure foundation in the Elements and higher branches of a sound English Education.

To the great majority of students who are educating themselves, this school presents some advantages not found elsewhere; thorough teaching, professional training, a low rate of boarding, a quiet and healthy location, and a community thoroughly in sympathy with the school and its management, are some of its leading characteristics.

To those whose love of a "good time" is paramount to thorough work, we have no inducements to offer.

To the youth of limited means, this school offers the very best facilities for a good use of his time and money.

In the immediate vicinity are excellent places for self-boarders—different buildings for the sexes—and by the right parties clubbing together expenses may be reduced to a minimum. The principal will, as heretofore, take pleasure in assisting to school such students as by their conduct and competency justify such action.

Heaven is my Home.

BY HEZEKIAH BUTTERWORTH.

Every Sunday-school teacher is familiar with the hymn beginning:

"I'm but a stranger here,
Heaven is my home."

Older and more experienced minds may have marked so much of evident sincerity and so little of the spirit of authorship in the lines as to wish to know more of the author, and under what peculiar circumstances they were written.

The hymn was written by Thomas Rawson Taylor, the son of an English Congregationalist minister. He was born near Wakefield on the 9th of May, 1807. At the age of fifteen he became a merchant's clerk, but was subsequently apprenticed to a printer. While thus employed he became interested in the concerns of his soul, experienced great spiritual consolations in seasons of prayer, and was impressed that it was his duty to give up his secular calling and prepare for the ministry.

He entered Airesdale College where he remained three years, living a life of self-forgetful piety. He did not wait to complete his education before he commenced active service in the cause of his master. He seemed to feel the force of the Divine command: "Work while the day lasts.

While a student he used to go out to the towns and villages near the college preaching the word, and appearing in his young zeal like a special messenger of truth. In July 1830, he was received as minister at Hoyland Street chapel, at Sheffild. Here his health began to decline; it became evident that he was marked for an early death and that his bright prospects of worldly usefulness were destined to be disappointed.

The change gradually continued. He struggled against it for several years, and at times seemed to check the hand of the destroyer. But all remedial power proved in vain, and he died March 7th 1835.

In his altered days he felt that he was a "stranger here" in the world of life and activity But as one by one his worldly hopes perished and the things on earth lost their power to charm, he realized with growing anticipations that "Heaven was his home."

I

I'm but a stranger here,
Heaven is my home;
Earth is a desert drear,
Heaven is my home.
Dangers and sorrow stand
Round me on every hand:
Heaven is my fatherland—
Heaven is my home.

II

What though the tempest rage,
Heaven is my home;
Short is my pilgrimage,
Heaven is my home.
And time's wild wintry blast
Soon will be overpast;
I shall reach home at last—
Heaven is my home.

III

Therefore I murmur not,
Heaven is my home;
Whate'er my earthly lot,
Heaven is my home;
And I shall surely stand
There at my Father's hand
Heaven is my Fatherland
Heaven is my home.

IV

There at my saviour's side,
Heaven is my home;
I shall be glorified,
Heaven is my home.
There are the good and blest
Those I loved most and best
There too I soon shall rest,
Heaven is my home.

Taylor died young and he must have felt like Keats, that his name was "writ in water," or like Kirke White,

"I shall sink,
As sinks the traveller in the streets
Of busy London."

LITERATURE.

Centennial Art Gallery. We have received from the publisher, Thomas Hunter, 716 Filbert street, Philadelphia, Pa., the beautiful lithograph of this immense structure now in course of erection in Fairmount Park, at Philadelphia, for the use of the Centennial exposition in 1876. It is a finely executed and very pleasing picture, and will be an appropriate adornment for many thousand American Homes. The exceedingly low price (50 cents, postage paid) places it within the reach of all. A similar picture of the "Main Exhibition Building" will be published about Dec. 1st.

Peterson's Literary Magazine. H. Peterson & Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., having relinquished their connection with the Saturday Evening Post, are about to commence the publication of a new monthly, which they promise shall be a first class Literary Magazine with an able corps of contributors. Each number will be complete—no serials. Terms $2.00 a year. Specimen No. 25 cts.

All lovers of books should read regularly The Publisher's Weekly, published by F. Leypold, at 37 Park Row, N. Y., which gives a record of all new books from week to week and the advance announcement of those soon to appear; and The Literary World, published by S. R. Crecker, Boston, which gives choice readings from the best new books, and impartial criticisms upon them. It is authority upon books and can be relied upon, without danger of being deceived.

The Habit of Reading.

"I have no time to read," is the common complaint, and especially among women, whose occupations are such as to prevent continuous book perusal. They seem to think, because they cannot devote as much attention to books as they are compelled to devote to their avocations, that they cannot read anything. But this is a great mistake. It isn't the books that we finish at a sitting which always do us the most good. Those we devour in the odd moments, half a dozen pages at a time, often give us more satisfaction, and are more thoroughly digested, than those we make a particular effort to read. The men who have made their mark in the world, have generally been the men who have in boyhood formed the habit of reading at every available moment, whether for five minutes or five hours.

It is the habit of reading rather than the time at our command that helps us on the road to learning. Many of the most cultivated persons, whose names have been famous as student, have given only two or three hours a day to their books. If we make use of spare minutes in the midst of our work, and read a little, if but a page or a paragraph, we shall find our brains quickened and our toil lightened by just so much increased satisfaction as the book gives us. Nothing helps along the monotonous daily round so much as fresh and striking thoughts, to be considered while our hands are busy. A new idea from a new volume is like oil which reduces the friction of the machinery of life. What we remember from brief glimpses into books often serves as a stimulus to action, and becomes one of our recollection. All knowledge is made up of small parts which would seem insignificant in themselves, but which, taken together, are valuable weapons for the mind and substantial armor for the soul. "Read anything continuously," says Dr. Johnson, "and you will be learned." The odd minutes which we are inclined to waste, if carefully of for instruction, will, in the long run, make golden hours and golded days that shall be ever thankful for.—"Home and Society;" Scribner's for August.

OUR ALMANAC FOR 1875.

Orders for the brethrens Almanac for 1875 are now coming in and being booked, and will be filled as soon as completed which will be in a short time. As we have published a large supply, we hope our brethren and sisters everywhere will send in their orders at once and thus be supplied before the New year comes in. It contains the most complete ministerial list ever published, a Memoir of Elder John Umpstead, by Elder J. Quinter and a large amount of other interesting reading. It is gotten up in the same style as the Pilgrim Almanac for 1874, making it a first class family Almanac in every respect, just such a one as every christian family needs. We send them post-paid on the following terms: 1 copy 10 cents 12 copies 75 cents 18 copies $1.00, 100 copies $5.75 Send 10 cents and get a copy or give it to your agent and let him send for you.

A WALKING ADVERTISEMENT.

LIMESTONE SPRINGS, S. C.

Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR—I am a walking advertisement for your Golden Medical Discovery, Purgative Pellets, and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, they having cured me of Catarrh of nine years' standing, which was so bad that it disfigured my nose, and, while curing it, your medicines also cured me of Asthma in its worst and most aggravated form. Before using my medicines I had become reduced in flesh from one hundred and fifty-five to one hundred and fifteen pounds, and I now weigh one hundred and sixty-two pounds, and am in better health than I have enjoyed for twenty years. Yours truly,

J. L. LUMSDEN.

The above is but a fair sample of hundreds of letters which are received by Dr. Pierce, and in the face of such evidence who can longer doubt that the Doctor's medicines cure the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh.

The Great Favorite with the Ladies.

Wm. Forsyth Bynum & Son, druggists, of Live Oak, Fla., write, Sept. 16th, 1874, as follows: "Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.—Your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets sell very largely and give complete satisfaction, as numbers of our customers and friends testify with pleasure. Your Favorite Prescription is indeed the great Favorite with the ladies, and numbers can say with joy that it has saved them from taking out a miserable life or meeting with premature death, and restored them to health and happiness."

Thousands of women bless the day on which Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was first made known to them. A single bottle often gives delicate and suffering women more relief than months of treatment from their family physician. In all those derangements causing back-ache, dragging down sensations, nervous and general debility, it is a sovereign remedy. Its soothing and healing properties render it of the utmost value to ladies suffering from internal fever, congestion, inflammation or ulceration, and its strengthening effects tend to correct displacements of internal parts, the result of weakness of natural supports. It is sold by all druggists.

DR. PIERCE'S pamphlet on Diseases peculiar to Women will be sent to any address on receipt of two stamps. Address as above.

Historical Charts of Baptism.

A complete key to the history of Trine, and the Origin of Single Immersion. The most interesting reliable and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22x28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting at a single glance the impossibility of single immersion ever having been, the Apostolic method. Single copy, $0.50. Four copies, $1.50. Sent post-paid. Address

Rest in God.

[PSALM 31 : 20.

When winds are raging o'er the upper ocean,
And billows wild contend with angry roar,
'Tis said, far down beneath the wild commotion,
That peaceful stillness reigneth evermore.

Far, far beneath the noise of tempest dieth,
And silver waves chime ever peacefully
And no rude storm, how fierce soe'r it flieth,
Disturbs the Sabbath of that deeper sea.

So to the heart that knows Thy love, oh Purest,
There is a temple sacred evermore,
And all the babble of life's angry voices
Dies in hushed stillness of its peaceful door.

Far, far away, the noise of passion dieth,
And lovely thoughts rise calm and peacefully,
And no rude storm, how fierce soe'r it flieth,
Disturbs the soul that dwells, oh Lord,

Oh rest of rests, oh peace, serene, eternal—
Thou ever livest, and Thou changest never,
And in the secret of Thy presence dwellest
Fullness of joy—forever and forever.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

The Christian's Home in Heaven

The hope of the Christian is truly a blessed one, the prospect of the faithful in the future is glorious, cheering and self-sustaining in life; giving them assurance for eternity, and strength to pass through the dark valley and shadow of death without fear. And why this hope, this cheering prospect? Because he trusts in the promises of God as revealed in the Scriptures. He believes in Jesus Christ his Son, as one who came to save upon condition that he will obey all the commandments for men to observe; yea, this will secure him a title, an undisputed diploma for admittance into the Father's house, the City of God, the home in Heaven. The Revelator saith, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." What made faithful Paul to face the storms and quicksands of a rugged ocean, and the persecutions of the enemies of the cross, and so joyfully endure sufferings and afflictions while preaching the gospel to a lost and ruined world? Nothing but the blessed hope, and the sweet thought of securing for himself and the Church at large a home in Heaven could induce him so to do. He exhorts the Colossians "to continue in the faith, grounded and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel which you have heard and which was preached to every creature under Heaven, whereof I, Paul, am made a minister; who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the Church." In another place he saith, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labor; yet what I shall choose I wot not, for I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better." This is the trouble with all faithful ministers, for they know their labors while in the flesh will augment their glory "according to their earnest expectation, and their hope that in nothing they shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also, Christ shall be magnified in their bodies, whether it be by life or by death."

Brethren and sisters, think of your ministers who faithfully discharge their duty, remember their labors in the Lord and uphold them in their arduous duties, for they watch for your souls as they that must give an account, that they may do it with joy and not with grief, for that will detract from your glory, and may hinder you or deprive you of that home in Heaven. God's faithful ministers must often leave their comfortable homes, the sweet enjoyments of their family circle, sacrifice their labor required for the support of their needy family, and sometimes on expense, in order to dispense the Bread of Life to a starving and sin-defiled world, crossing hills and vallies, mountains and ravines,—through rain and snow, cold and storm, and exposed to danger, ridicule, mockery and contempt from those who serve the prince of darkness; while you can be at home at ease caring for none of these things. Can you not pray for them at least, if you think pecuniary aid is too much required of you? Brethren, think of these things. Why does the minister of God subject himself to so much discomfort and unhappiness in this world? Oh, he feels the value of the souls, and shudders when the truthful thought presents itself that numbers will forfeit that happy home in Heaven while procuring a comfortable home here. Let the careless and unconcerned remember that the home they possess here they cannot take along to eternity, and if they neglect their soul's salvation, their future and permanent home will be in the gulf of misery, and their associates, the the devil and his angels. But faithful ministers want you to accept of the terms of salvation in order to gain the assurance with them, "that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," and hence the Christian "walks by faith and not by sight." Behold that blessed home, the Father's house, that better country in which is that "inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away; "that city which has foundation, whose builder and maker is God."

The Christian's home in Heaven is presented to us in Holy Writ by divers figures, such as "Crown of life." "Crown of rejoicing," an "Incorruptible crown," a "Sea of glass mingled with fire," a "pearl of great price," &c. The happiness, "joy unspeakable and full of glory," "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love Him." The endurance thereof, "life everlasting," a "Kingdom that cannot be moved," the associates, "all the saints or just men made perfect, the angelic hosts, Jesus our elder brother and mediator of the new covenant, and God the Father of all, who shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." The habitation thereof is described in order to cap the climax, in glowing beauty, as a city, yea, a grand city, the holy Jerusalem descending out of Heaven from God, which John saw in a vision, having the glory of God. Read John 21. Finally, be faithful to the end and ye shall inherit all things.

A home in Heaven! what a glorious place
Where God will no more hide his face!
Where saints in happiness shall dwell,
Sing Jesus Christ did all things well.

LEONARD FURRY.

Answer to Query in No. 45.

Brother R. Miller writes, what is the difference between the Soul and she Spirit?

We understand by the word spirit; the breath of life, see Gen. 2: 7. Eccl. 12: 7, 3: 21, and by the word soul, matter organized so as to be susceptible of life. See Gen. 2: 7,—"breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul. What was he before that? A dead soul. See Lev. 23: 30. 17: 11, 12. 22: 11. Num. 15: 30. Ezk. 18: 4, 20. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

As an explanation of 1 Thess. 5: 23, we only have to say, that Paul prays for the complete blamelessnes in that day, in the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, of the entire being of each, the spirit, the animating breath of life,—the soul, the organization capable of being endowed with life and performing its functions,—the body; the material elements which, ever changing, still by their orderly arrangement go to make up the organization, not excepting the body, in the estimation of the apostles, as essential to the very existence of the individual and to the future reward of each.

WALDEMAR MYERS.

Pray without Ceasing.

How can we pray without ceasing is often asked? I remember reading a beautiful answer to this question years ago. At a minister meeting this text was brought up for discussion, and at length one of their number was appointed to write on it an essay for the next monthly meeting. A servant girl overhearing this exclaimed involuntarily: "A whole month wanted, to tell the meaning of it! It is one of the most simple and best texts in the Bible." Her remark being overheard, one of the old ministers called to her, saying:

"Well tell me how you understand it: Can you pray all the time?

"O yes, sir."

"What when you have so much to do?"

"Why, sir, the more I have to do the more I can pray."

"Well, my good sister, tell us how it is, for most people do not think so?"

Well, sir, when I open my eyes in the morning, I pray that the eyes of my understanding may be opened and while I am dressing, I pray that I may be clothed in the robe of righteousness, and when I wash myself, I pray that I may have the washing of regeneration. As I begin work, I pray that I may have strength equal to my day. When I kindle the fire, I pray that the fire of divine love may warm my heart As I sweep, I ask, that my heart may be cleansed from all that is impure, and while I am getting and eating breakfast, I pray to be fed with the bread of life. Then as I look to the children, I look up to my heavenly Father and pray that I may be his own child; and so on all day."

"Enough," said the minister, "go on and pray without ceasing."

Surely these things, though hid from the wise and prudent, are revealed unto babes.

Have Mercy on the Young.

Such is the caption of an article in one of our religious weeklies, and we take the text for a short sermon to our churches.

I. Have mercy on the young. They are placed under your care by Providence, comparatively unknown and liable to all sorts of dangers, temptations and visitiations. Have mercy upon them.

II. Have mercy upon the young. Soon they will grow up and take their places. Shall they be worthy fathers, mothers, and members of the church? Now is the time to mould their characters. Have mercy upon them.

III. Have mercy upon the young. Spare neither time, money nor labor to make them happy, virtuous, pious and intelligent. O! think of a whole generation of growing up ignorant, base, mean and impious. Think of your children growing up thus. Then have mercy on them.

IV. Have mercy on the young. They are immortal creatures, and their soul's destiny will, in all likelihood be decided in early life Their eternal happiness may depend on the manner in which they are cared for or neglected. In the name, then of all that is good, holy, pure, useful and happy, "have mercy upon them." — B.

"Remember Lot's Wife." Luke 17: 32.
No. 1.

INTRODUCTION. The above sentence is a very significant expression of our Savior, and well worthy of serious reflection.

We are taught by the apostle, that such and like characters as Lot's wife stand forth as ensamples to us, in these last days, when departures from the simplicity of the gospel is so prevalent. Jesus chose a very short, as well as appropriate sentence —one, too, easily remembered, if we are only willing to do so. We believe that the advantages derived from storing away in the granary of our minds, the expression "Remember Lot's wife," where it may be easily, and often recalled; will be paramount to our best conceptions of salvation. Around and in those words are clothed circumstances which the saint and sinner may profit by remembering. Upon these and other considerations we have concluded to take our pen, to write three articles on the above subject, relying upon God and the word of His grace for the accomplishment of the same, to edification.

1. THE PAST HISTORICAL ALLUSION TO LOT'S WIFE.

1. Abraham and the Angels. Much of the matter composing this division of the subject will be gathered from the 18th and 19th chapters of the book of Genesis. We would, in the outstart, recommend the reader to refer to the said chapters and peruse them carefully, as they will make our subject clearer and more impressive. We will not go back to the time that Abram and Lot came out of Egypt, to the disagreement of their herdsman, and their separation one from the other, but would refer the reader to the 13th chap. of Gen. for that account. On account of this separation we find Lot taking up his abode on the plains of the Jordan, and Abram locating on the plains of Mamre. As Abram was sitting in the door of his tent, in the heat of the day, the Lord appeared unto him, in the plains of Mamre. The Lord is here to be understood rather in the sense of his messengers, as we find them called angels.

These messengers are now welcomed to Abram's tent, to share his hospitality, which they accepted. Sarah hastened to the kneading trough with the "fine meal," to make ready a morsel of bread, while Abram ran to his flock for the calf, "tender and good," and gave it to a young man, who "hasted to dress it." Butter and milk are prepared, and all things being now ready, they partake of the rich repast, prepared by hands, whose hearts begrudged not. Abram is the father of the faithful, therefore we need not wonder why our dear brethren and sisters are so kind, and ready to receive and entertain their brethren.

Abram and Sarah are now informed of God's intention to bless them with an heir, which they can hardly realize in their old age. The angels now rose up to go on their way, and cast their eyes toward Sodom. Abram accompanied them for a distance, to bring them on their way. The Lord seeing that Abram surely will become a great and mighty nation, reveals to him His intention to destroy Sodom and Gomorrah. Abram assumes an intercessorship immediately. The first idea that came up before Abram, was God's justice toward His people, and asked, "Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?" This he could not conceive that the God he served would do. He remembers his nephew, Lot, with his family dwelling in Sodom, and pleads for their deliverance. And the prayer of the righteous surely "availeth much" with God; calling forth his mercy and compassion, when His servants plead, and in this case is shown that man's most extended request is granted. Abram no doubt knew the extent of Sodom, and the labors of Lot in preaching the right ways of the Lord, and left off interceding, with the hope that that number surely can be found, righteous before the Lord, and Sodom would be spared for the sake of ten righteous persons.

2. Lot and the two angels. "And there came two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sodom." As Abram sat in the door, so Lot sat in the gate. This certainly show the anxiety and watchfulness of the servants of God. And as Abram bowed before the Lord so Lot also "bowed himself with his face toward the ground," showing the posture of humbling ourselves before the Lord. Lot entreats them to come into his house, but they say, "Nay; we will abide on the street." But Lot greatly pressed upon them to enter in, and they did. A feast is prepared for them, "and they did eat." The Lord is about to execute judgement and the devil becomes enraged. He collects his hellish friends around the house of Lot to destroy the messengers of God, but are frustrated in their purpose, as they ever will be in the presence of the Lord. Lot goes out to plead with them not to do so wickedly, but to no effect. This surely was a terrible night mob, as the old and the young, and all people from every quarter of the were there. Upon Lot's refusal to deliver the strangers to them, they threaten him with worse things than them. But just then the hand of the Lord was present to deliver Lot out of their hands. The angels "put forth their hands, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut the door. And they smote the men that were at the door of the house with blindness, both great and small; so that they wearied themselves to find the door."

The angels are concerned for Lot's friends. It seems as though the Lord is jealous for even the relatives of those who have found favor in His sight. They advise him to bring forth his sons and daughters out of the city, for the Lord has sent us to destroy this city. Lot now goes forth to seek for those ten that Abram had plead for, but his words were not credited, and the truths he proclaimed were as idle tales unto his sons-in-law. And he "seemed as one that mocked.

3. Lot's departure. It was highly necessary for Lot to depart out of the city, for the Lord said, "Haste thee, escape thither; for I cannot do anything till thou be come thither." The Lord will not suffer the righteous to perish with the wicked. The time of their departure was in the morning. The time has now come that they must leave their pleasant home, their friends, neighbors, relatives, and even those of their own flesh and blood, and bid a long, long farewell. And now we see how tightly these things cleave unto us, or rather we unto them. Lot lingers, loathe to depart, even though oftimes vexed with their wickedness. "And while he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; the Lord being merciful unto him, and they brought him forth, and set him without the city."

Instead of ten being found worthy of salvation, only four could be pursuaded to turn from sin and wickedness, and flee the wrath of God. Although few in number the Lord had respect unto them, and highly regarded them for their work's sake. They being set without the city and sent on their way, the Lord gives them their final commission: "Look not behind thee."

Lot's wife disobeyed the command, and turned into a pillar of salt, and stands as an evidence of God's disapprobation of disobedience. "Remember Lot's wife" should ring in our ears when we are tempted to disobey the least of God's commands.

4. Sodom destroyed. The cause of this memorable destruction was sin. Their sins had become very grevious in the sight of the Lord, so much so that he determined to suffer it no longer.

The manner of destruction is one of God's own choosing, and was well suited for the purpose He designed it. Fire and brimstone are both elements of great power when combined, to extinguish e, to consume and devour. "The sun was risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar." The time is now at hand, and God must show that what He has said, He is also ready to perform. "Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven." This manner of disposing of sin and sinners stands fearfully before the guilty and unbelieving. And anxious Abram remembers the message delivered him, and gets up early in the morning; his first thoughts are turned upon Sodom, and casting his eyes toward the city, "and lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace." Thus Sodom is destroyed, the righteous saved, and the unrighteous destroyed from the presence of the Lord. "Remember Lot's wife." Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation. More anon. JOHN ZUCK.

A Reply.

"Come let us reason together." Isaiah.

And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into my kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise. Luke 23: 42, 43.

After reading the criticism on my quotation of the text by my respected brother Flory, and after an examination of the same, I feel called upon to make a short reply

In the first place, I have always had a chronic disposition to believe the Bible in its plainest sense. We are aware that there is a good deal said about the translation of the the Bible, about the rendering of certain words, and about the punctuation of some sentences, but we never have thought that God in his infinite wisdom, power and goodness, has ever allowed the Bible to be so perverted that we cannot get the true meaning of it. Consequently we are not inclined to give it any other construction than what it really has. If one part of the Bible is correct why not another also, and if such was the cas, it would at once appear that we did not have the te no Bible.

From the construction of the text, as it stands, I have always thought that it contained a promise. "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." The sentence is unbroken, and as Christ "came into the world to seek and save that which is lost," as the thief came out on the Lord's side, ("and he that is for us is not against us") why should he not grant his petition?

"One of the malefactors railed on him saying, "If thou be Christ save thyself and us;" but the other answering rebuked him saying, "Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? And indeed justly, for we receive the due reward for our deeds: but this man has done nothing amiss." After this he puts up a petition similar to that of the "publican" and he went down justified, more than the Pharisee that made the long prayer. The rebuke that he gives the other malefactor is evidence that he was penitent. Now then are we to believe that Christ would slight the prayers of a dying penitent, knowing his own condition, that he was about to give up the ghost and depart hence; and knowing that the thief's time was also short? What would be more natural than to say what he did? "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

If I were to think that Christ slighted the prayer of the dying thief at that time, and on that occasion after he showed his penitence, I should incline to the opinion that many other petitions would be slighted also.

What need we care what Pedobaptists make of the sentence, if they will pass over all Scripture like this—"Except ye be converted and are baptized ye cannot enter the kingdom of God" and fall back on the text for their hope. I shows at once that they are not born of God, and they will believe it any way no difference what we believe.

Seeing that we have already written too much, we leave it for your consideration, hoping it we are in an error in regard to the matter, the evidence will yet turn up, that will be able to convince us.

"Produce your cause saith the Lord, bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob."

Memoriam.

A sad message was received late on Saturday evening, October 31st, 1874, that Elder Samuel Garver had died the day before, and the family wished me to be at their house the next day, at half past 11 o'clock, the distance being twenty miles. The next morning I started about sunrise, with horse and buggy. At the time appointed, I found many neighbors and friends had come together. After singing the first two and the last two verses of the 614 hymn, and prayer, we went about four miles to a school house, near the burying ground of the Brethren of the State Center district in which brother Garver lived a the time of his death. He also had the charge of the church in Harrison Co., Iowa, although one hundred and sixty miles apart. Now there is only one young minister left in each of those districts.

and in his young days he was set apart as a servant of the church, and the brethren are few, if any, that have devoted more time to the ministry than brother Garver did. In his first labors for some fourteen years, he traveled on horse-back over mountains and dales, from Tennessee to South Carolina. He built up two churches in Tenn. and one in South Carolina, and then moved to Ogle Co., Ill., where he made his home for twenty-one years. He there built up a large church, and then moved to Iowa, where he labored faithfully in the cause of Christ over six years. His labors in the ministry was over 41 years, and one year he preached and traveled all the time, from the Fall of 1857 to the Fall of 1858.

During the last six years, brother Garver and myself labored much and often together, at common meetings, church meetings, communions and on committees. In the last year we served on four different committees, and I now remember well, that on the last committee, he remarked, "that we had labored much together, that a hard word had never passed between us neither a hard thought, at least he was sure there had not been on his part;" and I feel glad that I in truth can say the same on my part. I trust God has given peace to his soul.

He leaves a widow, two sons and four daughters, all members of the church, and the oldest son is a minister. May God grant consoling grace and comfort to the widow and children. May God help us all to think often of the good counsels he gave us, and give us grace and strength sufficient to enable us to become fully qualified and prepared to meet brother Garver in peace. His age was 68 years, 6 months and 30 days.

Singing.

Singing is a part of divine worship in which every one can take part. Paul in writing to his Ephesian brethren 5:19, says, "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your hearts to please the Lord." It seems to me, when we come together in one place to worship God we should all sing. It is true we are not all gifted in singing but we all can sing a little or at least show a willingness. There is not more required of us than what we can do, and if we try we, perhaps can make some melody. The psalmist trys to impress us with the importance of singing in the following language: "Sing aloud unto God our strength, make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob. Sing unto the Lord, O, ye saints of his, and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness." Paul in 1. Cor. 14:15 says, "What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also. I will sing with the spirit and I will sing with the understanding also." I think most of us will acknowledge if we go to preaching and hear good music, we are benefited, although the preaching is none of the best. It gives life and interest to the meeting and people are likely to give better attention to the word when there is good singing, than when it is poor.

Then dear brethren and sisters, let us all try to be lively stones in that building that is to be erected for the Lord, and not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is. Let us always be found at our post and do what we can, be it little or much. Not only at our public meetings, but at our council meetings also we should be present. If we think we are not needded there, and remain away, we cannot become lively stones in the masters building. D. D. SHIVELY

Answer to Query.

What is the difference between the soul and the spirit?

I suppose the querist has in mind the sentence spoken by Paul in 1st Thess. 23, in which Paul recognizes two elements occupying the body, the soul, or mental part with all the high aspirations of man; and the spirit as giving life to the soul and body. The two terms, as frequently used in the Bible, are synonomous, or in other words, they are frequently used to express one and the same thing.

The meaning of the word soul Heb. nepesh, Gr. psuche, is the human mind; that vital, active principle in man which perceives, remembers, reasons, loves, hopes, fears, compares, desires, resolves, imagines and aspires after immortality. The sacred writers use the word with considerable latitude, sometimes for the physical, sometimes for the sensitive, and sometimes, and indeed most frequently, for the rational principle or spirit as originally created, in the image of God. It is also frequently used to express the whole man. It is used in the latter or general sense about thirty times in the New Testament, and in the specfic sense of mind distinct from the body about fifty times.

The word spirit, Heb. ruach, Gr. pneuma, means mind or breath, in an incorporial being or intelligence, in which sense God is said to be a spirit. Good angels are said to be ministering spirits. Devils are called unclean spirits, evil spirits, spirits of darkness, &c. The life beyond this vale is called a spirit life, in contradistinction to the present physical or corporial life.

We conclude from the above that the spirit of man in connection with the soul is the life of the soul; and when the soul and body are parted in death, the soul takes its flight in the form of a spiritual being.

I think that friend J. B. G. makes a great mistake when he calls the spirit of the devil in the parable the spirit of the man. His other reference will do to itself but not in answer to this question.

A Correction.

P. H. Beaver:

My Dear Brother, suffer a poor afflicted invalid to offer a few words by way of correction.

Extreme nervous agony prevents me from reading, save a few minutes at a time, and consequently I have not examined the entire contents of a single number of any of our periodicals in nearly four years.

The PILGRIM I seldom see. No. 45 is before me. I am astonished beyond measure at the drift of your reference to my note to Bro. Holsinger.

You class me, in effect at least, with the opponents of the school. So I conclude from your assertion, that my remarks are calculated to confirm the fears of Bro. Thomas as to the probability of the sch ol culminating in a "Theological Seminary"

I am utterly at a loss to account for such a misconception. For your sake no less than mine, I am exceedingly sorry, that you should fail to discriminate statements made with such emphasis and perspicuity. In an appended post-script, Bro Holsinger cordially assented to the correctness of my views. This should have restrained you from an adverse reference.

The note was designed solely to promote the interests of the school and to turn the attention of the friends of the school to the principle of its constitution, and the scope of the operations.

Nearly all that has been advanced pro or con, your own article included, is simply declarative, seldom toncing on the subject or any principle that finds its life in Christ. To divert the discussion, if possible, from its imaginary basis to one, that inheres in the life of God manifest in the flesh was the object of my note. That any one should for a moment think of me as opposed to the highest possible culture, on a basis accordant with our physical and mental organization, and relation to God and nature are wholly without a semblance of evidence from anything I have ever expressed relative to the matter.

But I am much more concerned, as to what the school shall be, than as to whether it shall be. To establish a precedent materially variant from the distinctive features of the Church would ultimately crop out into an unmangeable territory of thistles.

I wish the schools abundant success, but only as it moves along the prominent and secure line of accord between the great teacher and his pupils—the divinely established and accredited sense-basis of the everlasting Gospel. Rom. 1:20.

Answer to Query.

1 Thess. 5:23. Brother J. R. Miller asks the question, "What is the difference between the soul and spirit?"

I would say, sometimes they are one and the same thing. But, where they stand they are different. The Thessalonians were addressed collectively and yet individually too. The apostle's prayer was that they should have the spirit of Christ, i. e., live in accordance with the principles of the gospel, in word, deed, and action. While the word soul, where it stands, means every individual. It is a known fact that it also means a human being; and here he addressed them individually. So as a body he addressed them in his prayer that they might be united in love to God and one another, "for they are all members one of another." How pleasant when brethren all agree.

Heb. 4:12. While living we are considered souls. Spirit means breath, and when the spirit is gone out of man there is no more a living soul, but the body is dead, and that which constitutes a living soul (a human being) is separated. This God has power to do, and we should be ready for that time, let it come sooner or later. These are my humble views in short. W. SADLER.

The Controversies.

The place from which to make the best observations. "Ask for the old paths."

The most desirable position, with regard to the difficulties among our brethren about education, high schools, and a salary paid ministry, is right between and a little above the contending parties. It enables the anxious beholder to receive the clearest and most reliable view of all the sides and properties which these subjects really have and are said to have. As he looks contemplatively down over the surface of the different sides of "the question," he may observe distinctly that the most prominent quality of the minds of men inclines them to reason in a line of their own temporal convenience. Upon a closer observation he will discover beneath this outward appearance the true result of their actions. He will find the distance between their positions and truth long or short, according to the attention they have given to the truth as it is revealed in the gospel through Christ, upon these and all other subjects that are essentially investigated by the Christian. Fretful People.

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthy. You can hardly put more work on a man than he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery, but the friction. Fear secretes acid, but love and truth are sweet juices.

We know a man with a patient, good Christian wife, and we never heard him speak a kind, pleasant word to her, and doubt if he ever did in the half-century they have lived together. He is always in a fret. You would think he was made of cross-grained timber, and had always been trying to digest a cross-cut saw. He is eternally cross, and thinks that his wife and children, hired hands, and all the domestic animals, have entered into a combination to worry him to death. He is not only rusty, but fairly crusted over with it. Friction has literally worn him out, and he will soon worry himself to death. Of course he has never worked to any advantage to himself or anybody else. With him everything goes wrong. He superstitiously believes it is because the devil has a spite at him, when, in truth, it is nothing but his own fretfulness.

Slang.

What can we do to keep down the tide of slang that deluges conversation a very smallpox of imperfections with which so many of us are more or less inoculated? I notice one thing however, which is encouraging in this connection: that persons of real refinemement and cultivation don't catch the infection, even as individuals in firm and perfect health seldom catch contagious diseases. Children can be taught to eshew slang just as they can be taught to avoid ungrammatical and profane expressions, and the most effective teaching is the example of their parents. Cicero says that all the great orators of the age learned of their mothers to speak the native tongue with purity, and from the cradle used correct and elegant language. Surely we should not in this enlightned age be a whit behind those Roman mothers.

Our Almanacs.

In a few days we expect our Almanacs to be completed, when we will commence sending them out to those who have ordered. Those who have not yet ordered should do so at once in order that all who want them can be supplied before the New Year comes in.

By an oversight we made a mistake in our terms and did not notice it until apprised of it. Where we say, 18 for $1.00 it should be 17 for $1.00. The other quotations are all right. 18 for $1.00 makes it less than the 100 rate, 50 copies and upward will be sold at 100 rates.

On account of the Ministerial List being considerably larger than last year, we had not room enough for our reading matter, and were therefore necessitated to enlarge it 4 pages, thus giving our patrons 4 pages more than we bargained for, making the largest Almanac ever published by the Church.

One More.

One more number and our present volume will close and the query rises up before us in all of its importance, have we been laboring to edification, has the cause been benefited by our labors, and have souls been made wise unto salvation? Sometimes we are lifted up in hope by the declaration that God has been glorified, by some precious souls being led to Jesus. At other times we are depressed, but on the whole we have much to be thankful for. That we might have done better we know, but our position is a critical one and we are glad that our readers know it and hope that a due allowance will be made. In speaking of our work, our esteemed Elder Moses Miller of Mechanicsburg, Pa., says, 'Some do not like the controversy of the writers. I know it is hard to please all, but I do think there were many things published during the year that were not edifying to the Church." Very true, my dear brother, but you do not know how much was written and not published that might have been still less edifying, neither do you know how many reprimandings, how many scoldings (?) and how many threats not to subscribe any more, we get if we do not publish certain things. These things trouble and grieve us and you speak truly when you say, "it is hard to please all." If all of our writers had the wisdom and prudence of some of our good old brethren—and young ones too—we would not get under these pressures and could feel much more at liberty in this respect.

But notwithstanding some have been disappointed and felt grieved at the course we have taken, yet we hope that after a due consideration of the position in which we stand, they will acquiesce to the propriety of our manner of proceeding, even if it does not run in harmony with their way of thinking. We hope that you may look at it in this way, and that you will not feel discouraged, nor yet forsake us but try it again. Perhaps at another trial you may think differently, and we may feel differently, and all may work together for edification.

Hear ye the Appeals.

Of late there are a number of appeals being made for the exercising of our charities, and as they are becoming important and urgent it becomes us to give them heed. Last week we published the appeal of brother Fitzgerald in behalf of an afflicted brother who had been burnt out of house and home, and this week we have pleas for and from the suffering of Kansas and Nebraska. These are all urgent and need immediate action.

It will be seen that the Northern District of Ill. have appointed the 8th day of Dec. on which delegates from the sub-districts are to meet and devise some plan to provide means for the relief of the suffering. Would it not be well for the Districts generally to adopt this plan and thus respond to the calls made upon us? We propose that the Middle District of Pa. appoint a day as soon as can be done, at some convenient point, and agree on some plan of rendering aid to the suffering. Brethren, what say you, and where and when shall we meet? We will be glad to hear of some propositions from our elder brethren at once so that we can get organized and cast in our mites for the Lord's poor. It may seem a little late to enter a plan of this kind, but we feel assured that it will not be too late as the winter will be long and aid will be timely any time between this and Spring. Brethren, let us hear from you as to the most proper course to proceed.

Report of Annual Conference.

There, perhaps, never was a question presented to our Annual Conference of such universal interest to the brotherhood as that of having, published, a full report of its proceedings. This is so from the fact that the principles of the Church of the Brethren has ever upheld the justness of equal rights, or what one member knows in regard to its government it is the privilege of all others to know. We acknowledge no head but Jesus Christ, hence, the whole body is included in the simple declaration, "Ye are brethren" and sisters.

Because all the brethren and sisters cannot attend these meetings, neither would it be advisable for them to do so, the idea was first suggested of having published, a full report of the discussions of the meeting. This move, at first, was objected to by a large number of the leading brethren or those who made it a point to attend those meetings. But the desire to have it, on the part of the laity and those who could not attend the meetings, grew so strong that the pressure overcame the objection, and a report was allowed, with the restriction however, that the names of the speakers should not be published in connection with the report. This restriction gave considerable dissatisfaction as it greatly destroyed the interest of the report and in some instances made it defective. At our last Annual Conference the subject came up before the meeting again. Some discarded the report altogether, others objected to the names, while a large majority, apparently, were in favor of a full report with the names of the speakers but for the sake of peace they yielded and a report was given without the names except a few of the leading ones.

This report, to some extent, met the wishes of those who could not be present but still was very unsatisfactory on account of not having the names of the speakers in connection with it. Some were so disappointed that they said they would not read it while the more considerate brethren assented to the decision but now urge such a change as will obviate the usual objections brought against the publication of the names. That plan is to have a full report, with the names of the speakers, but have it published in pamphlet form and send it to only such as send and pay for it.

This plan we proposed to brother Quinter at our last A. M., but he thought that we had better not adopt it at that time as it would be a disappointment to our readers and perhaps it would have been to some, but we thought a large majority of our readers would rather pay a small pittance for a full report with the names, than to have one without the names, free. Expressions of the brethren and sisters, since received, favor the correctness of our ideas and we now believe that a change of this kind would meet with a very general acceptance and be attended with several advantages over the present manner of publishing it.

The first advantage would be that of having it altogether, thus affording an opportunity of reading it right along in direct connection.

Second. It would be published in a small form making it more convenient for preservation, for carrying along, when desirable, and for reference.

Third. It would avoid an undue publicity, as when it is published in our periodicals, not only every reader gets it, but also all of our exchanges which affords them opportunities for criticisms which some times are of no very great advantage to the cause.

A fourth advantage would be, that by this arrangement, only those would get it who desire to read it and therefore could not give offence to such as are opposed to the report.

These are some of the reasons why we would be favorable to having the report published in pamphlet form and we were led to speak of it on account of the late action taken upon it by the Southern District of Illinois, which is as follows:

> QUERY 4. Will the Annual Meeting of 1875 grant the publication of a full report of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting in pamphlet form with the speakers' names to their speeches?
> ANSWER. Yes; with the understanding that any person can get one by paying for it.

We approve of the move of this meeting, not so much on account of the decision as to get the expression of the whole Brotherhood on this subject. We hope that every District will take an action on this question so that their respective delegates may come to A. M. prepared to give an expression of their district, and then, to the decision we will cheerfully submit. We always were in favor of having a majority rule, and to the defence of this principle we have solemnly set to our seals. As to what decision shall be made we care not, only so it is in harmony with the whole Church, whether that be no report, have it published in our periodicals with or without the names, or have a full report with the names in pamphlet form. Whatever position we advocate is not for the gratification of ourselves, but for the sake of our readers, for whose good we feel ourselves under obligations to labor, believing that they will only demand of us such things as are in harmony with the letter and spirit of the Gospel.

"Hard Times."

Hard times is now the general cry and there are those who realize, by actual experience, something of what may be properly denominated hard times. There are many persons in our large cities, and in the far Western States that know not where their daily supplies are to come from. Just now we read of a population of about 17,000 recently settled in the State of Kansas who are dependent upon the charities of other States. They expended all their means in building their houses and putting out their crops. Drouth and the grasshoppers wrought a total destruction of everything they had planted, leaving them entirely destitute. They are without either food, clothing or fuel, and the Winter before them. Then too, in the city of New York, it is said thousands of women and children are now entirely dependent upon the charities of others for their daily food. A large percentage of the deaths are occasioned from a lack of a sufficient supply of the proper kind of food. These persons, the greater part of them, have been reduced to their present destitute condition by the great depression in the financial affairs of our country, and is therefore unavoidable on their part. When we think of the great amount of human suffering that is now, and will be experienced during the present winter, from various apparently unavoidable causes, should it not call forth our warmest sympathies? Should we not feel it our duty to our fellow man and God to do all in our power to relieve their wants? An opportunity, brethren and sisters, is now afforded us by which we may directly do something in this direction. Our brethren and sisters, who should be very near to us by the ties of Christian unity are in want, and are entreating us for aid. Plans are being made by which our contributions may be sent to, and distributed amongst them, and now it only remains for us to determine whether we will do our duty or not. Every Christian must certainly feel that it is his duty to administer to the wants of his brethren. These financial reverses must needs be in order that the divine command, "relieve the poor and needy" be fulfilled, and we who are surrounded with plenty should gladly embrace the opportunity of complying with the request of our blessed Master. Christian friends, let us think of this matter.

There is a class of persons, who are continually crying "hard times" that perhaps deserve censure. They are surrounded with all the comforts and conveniences of life; their tables ladened with the fruits of the earth, and are having a sufficient income to insure them plenty and to spare during the coming year, and yet simply because they cannot add so abundantly to their stock of "filthy lucre," they make all manner of pitiful faces about hard times. If such could be placed in the position of some of the people in Nebraska and Kansas awhile, and realize the position of the poor who are thrown out of employment and know not from whence they are to get their daily bread, this whining about hard times would probably cease. The truth is the people in rural life, and especially the farmers, with the exception of a few of the far Western States, know nothing about hard times. It is only the class employed in public works that are materially afflicted. Of course money matters are not as flush as they were years ago, but the real want is experienced principally among those employed in the public works. Persons of means live about as they always did. We do not see much difference. They wear as good apparel, and banquet as they formerly did. The farmer receives the highest prices for everything he has to sell, while those things that he needs are comparatively low in price. Why then should persons always be crying hard times who have plenty and to spare?

Several of our agents who have already sent in lists, although they did quite well, say the people complain of "hard times." Now there are comparatively few of our patrons or those who may be solicited to become such, that should take this as an excuse. Those of you who are farmers need only to sell a few pounds of butter or a bushel and a half of potatoes, and you have the money to pay for the PILGRIM. Then too, there are other things that you can perhaps do without that does not tend to your spiritual growth, or that is not of as much real worth to you. Our spiritual wants must be supplied as well as our temporal, and when we take into consideration the great value of the soul in comparison with that of the body, we will feel that it is much more important to have a supply of spiritual food than temporal. Our object is to give our readers such food as will tend to give them spiritual strength, and we earnestly hope that our patrons will not suffer slight causes prevent them from giving us the proper encouragement Remember we are entirely dependent upon you for support and if you refuse to take the paper, the cause must suffer and we be made to realize what hard times are. Brethren and sisters, please think of these things.

Trials of the Christian.

It is said by some who have espoused the good cause that it is a very difficult matter to lead a christian life in this age of the world. The temptations are so great to drift unto the popular current, and float along in the even tenor of our way, that it requires never ceasing vigilance and untiring zeal to keep on the narrow way. It is true we are beset on every side by the allurements of satan and every agency is by him employed to ensnare the souls of men. He clothes himself in the garb of religion appearing as an angel of light. So it requires us to ever keep close to the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world, inorder to detect that which is true and real. But while it is so that we have our temptations and our trials, that deception is in the land and that gross darkness is covering the minds of the people, yet our trials and reverses as the true followers of Jesus are comparatively light in comparison with those of former ages. We can as it were worship God under our own vine and fig tree, we can follow the promptings of our conscience unhindered and unmolested. All we have to contend with is our own self and this requires many a hard battle and many severe trials, but when it comes to the sacrificing of our lives for the sake of Christ the trials are much greater. This many of our early Christians were compelled to do. History gives us an idea of the trials of the Christian in former days. Take for example the reign of the emperor Nero A. D. 64, when the great fire broke out in Rome. A suspicion arose among the people that this frivolous and odious monster who then set on the imperial throne was the cause of all their misfortune. Although he was really guilty, yet in order to cover his guilt he at once set about throwing the blame on the Christians, and actually succeeded in directing the rage of the people against them. The Christians at that time were rather an obscure sect yet we are informed by Tacitus a historian of that age, that they had spread with marvelous rapidity and he seemed surprised that a doctrine so odious should be so readily received. But now comes the scene of terror. A great company of them had gathered at Rome. Their hymns and prayers resounded under the imperial palace; they read in their assembles that inspired Epistle to the Romans, which is heard to-day in every church and chapel in the land. And when the false charge was made against them by the pagan emperor, Rome itself was shocked and horrified at the number and sufferings of these obscure victims. The people of the city were invited to witness the punishment of the Christians, and Nero in order to make a great display of it, threw open his own gardens across the Tiber, and there in the fair gardens and groves, amidst the rich foliage and pleasant walks of the imperial pleasure-grounds, the Christians were impaled on crosses, bound to blazing faggots, covered with the skins of wild beasts, hunted by dogs, and executed as the enemies of the human race. At night the victims were covered with wax or oiled clothes, and set up to light the pathway among the trees.

Such Christian reader was the trials of the Christian in that day, and when we think of how we are protected, and of what glorious religious liberties we enjoy, does not our trials sink into insignificance? It is true the Christian life is not in harmony with a pleasure loving world, and on this account we may in some instances be frowned upon and treated with a degree of contempt, but if we are truly in the faith and are fixed and grounded upon the "Rock of Ages," these things will only strengthen us. We need trials in order to purge from us the dross and fit us for an inheritance among the sanctified. Let us then Christian friends, take the cross fairly upon us and follow Jesus through evil as well as good report. We may have trials and and some too, that seem severe, but then we are not called upon at the present day to sacrifice our lives for the truth's sake. If this should ever be our lot, if we are faithful God will give us strength for our day and trial, and now surrounded as we are with the inducements of a fast age, God will not tempt us above that which we are able to bear.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A VISIT.

Having been solicited by many of the dear brethren and sisters, with whom I met on my recent tour of love, to give through our periodicals a note of my trip, I have concluded to do so through that one which I found them to be most generally reading.

I left my home on the morning of the 11th of Nov. and traveled 16 miles on horseback, took dinner with brother Samuel A. Honberger in Davis Co. Brother H. had contemplated being my companion in the work of the ministry, but his wife having been taken very suddenly and severely with an attack of lung fever, he could not leave home; but brother D. H. Coulson, who is ever ready to assist in the good cause, was ready now to change my conveyance to that of a light 2 horse vehicle, in which he and brother D. B. Sell, a young deacon, accompanied me. On the night of this 11th, and twelve miles further on the way, we met our first appointment at the Union Church, in which the brethren of the Hamilton congregation seem to hold some claim. Had good attendance and very good attention. Retired for the night with friend David and sister Shatto. I say friend because our brother for some reason known to him only, has withheld his letter, but is a sincere lover of the cause of Christ, and is alway ready to administer freely and largely to it, and not only has his "cup of cold water" ever ready to offer "in the name of a disciple" but also everything besides, that a mortal can desire for comfort and happiness. The vocal music which his four daughters offer to the ear, in such concord that it borders hard on perfection, is one of the blessings that crowns the hoary heads of these parents. Oh! that you may make sure to meet in heaven as you so often repeated in a promise with your four sweet voices all blended in one.

On the morning of the 12th we set out early for the Long Branch congregation Harrison Co., a distance of about 40 miles which we reached at sunset; fell in first with our beloved brother Wm. B Sell and family. Brother William is the pastor and only teacher in this new organization; having preached here since last March, and has gathered some 12 of the scattered of the flock around him; and has baptized in this time, six, and his prospects of doing much good, and of seeing many more precious souls flock into the fold at his calls, and patient, and ardent solicitations, are as flattering as I ever witnessed anywhere. Here we found an appointment for the eve of the 12th awaiting our arrival—tried to meet and fill it. Also one on the morning and evening of the 13th, and one on the morning of the 14th all at the Long Branch school house.

On the morning of the 14th I was separated to go some fourteen miles further north to fill an appointment at the Hacker's schoolhouse, and to comply with a previous request there, to wit; to expound unto them more perfectly the mode of Christian baptism. Met a large audience and had good attention. All were strangers in the flesh but we received the welcome of many warm hearts if the expressions of thanks &c., were true.

Next morning—Lord's day—we returned, (my pilot Bro. Coulston and brother George Rabbing having accompanied me) and met the brethren and friends again at Loog Branch at 11 A. M. Here we enjoyed the happiest hour of our trip; for at this place one precious soul came forward during services, professing him before men, &c.,

Preached the 8th and last time, on the evening of the 15th at the Nesburn S. C. and set out for home on the morning of the 16th.

We had left an appointment at the Union church for our return on conditions, that the roads remained good so that we could be able to reach it; but having heavy rain all day (Monday) we found no light in the church as we passed by it at a late hour. Lodged again with our ready "host" Bro. Shatto. Stopped next day with brother Coulson for dinner, and arrived home at dark same day. Found all well and tried to thank the Lord for his great care and good guidance, and all the kind brethren, sisters and friends for their kindness bestowed upon me everywhere. C. C. ROOT.

A Visit to Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska.

My wife and I left home on the 25th of June, 1874. We went through Chicago on the 21st, and landed in Marshalltown, Iowa, on the 27th. There we took the Central Railroad of Iowa, and run north to Eldora, the county-seat of Hardin Co., Iowa. Here we met brother H. P. Strickler, who took us by private conveyance to his home, in Grundy Co., a distance of eight miles, where we were kindly received and well cared for. He is elder in this congregation. On the 27th, meeting commenced at 10 a. m., and Communion in the evening. Here I formed acquaintance with many brethren and sisters, some from Waterloo, and some from Dallas and Marshall counties.

On the 28th the lot fell on the writer to preach, which he tried to do in the Spirit of the Lord. Meeting at 10 a. m., good order through all the meetings. On the evening of the 28th, we held a small Lovefeast with a sister, near brother Strickler's, who fell from a wagon and broke a limb. On the 29th, we took the train at Eldora, and run north to Sheffield, a distance of forty miles, where our son and daughter resides. Here we were met by our children and grandchildren, who were waiting for our arrival. Here my wife and I stayed nearly four months, except when I was from home preaching. I held meeting every Sabbath but one, sometimes two meetings a day. On the 19th of July, I held meetings in Crawford's school house four miles north of Hampton, the county-seat of Franklin Co., Iowa. Had a full house and good attention. On the 26th, I preached in West Point, a small village in Butler Co., Iowa. Brethren Ikenberry, Ellis and Rule met me there. They are the speakers in Cold Water District. I stayed all night with brother Philip Miller near there. On the 2d of August, I held meeting in Sheffield, a thriving little village near where my son and daughter reside, on the Central Railroad of Iowa.

On the 6th of August, brethren Ikenberry and Ellis met with us, and had meeting in a school house near Sheffield. On the 11th of August I preached a funeral sermon in Marshall Co., in the town of Liscomb, for brother David Beachley's daughter, 60 miles south of Sheffield. On the 6th of September I preached in old Chapin, in Franklin Co., at 4 p. m. On the 12th of September I was with the brethren in Guthrie Co., Iowa, at a Communion meeting. Brother C. Loog has the oversight there. Brother Samuel Longenecker from Pa., resides there. On the 13th, preaching at same place. After meeting I went home with brother Alfred Brower, and on Tuesday evening the 5th, I preached in Dale City, in Guthrie Co. On the 16th I took the train at Guthrie Station, on the Railroad from Fort Demoin to Council Bluff. The next morning I took the transfer, and crossed the Missouri river to Omaha. Took the Union Pacific railroad, and ran west to North Bend, on the Platte river, a small town in Dodge Co., Neb. Here friend David Dickeson met me and took me to his home,—his wife is a sister; where I stayed during all the meetings. Same evening meeting at school house, eighteen members came together, some from a great distance.

On Saturday 19th, council meeting and preaching at same schoolhouse. Sabbath 20th, preaching at 10 a. m., and Communion in the evening. Here we held a choice for two visiting brethren. The lot fell on brethren Huff and Shark, two promising young brethren, both single. Brother Brumbaugh from Kansas was with me in holding choice. Brethren Mumma and Ikenberry are the speakers here. Brother C. Loog from Dallas Co., Iowa, has the the oversight here. Bell Creek is the name of this District.

Monday morning, 21st, Isaac P. Shively took me in carriage to Freemont, the county-seat of Dodge Co., Nebraska. Here I took the Elk Horn and Sioux City railroad, that runs through Missouri Valley, a flourishing little town on the east side of the Missouri river, in Iowa. Stayed that night with brother Lewis Snider, one mile north of this village. The North-western Railroad from Chicago to Council Bluff runs through here. On the 22d, I took the North-western railroad for Sheffield. Arrived safely that evening, thank the Lord for his protecting care over me.

Saturday morning, September 26, my wife, daughter, son-in-law, Hiram Statt, and myself went to Cold Water district, Butler Co., Iowa, to a Lovefeast. Brother John F. Ikenberry is elder here. Brethren Ellis and Rule are also speakers here. On the 27th, brother Murray preached a funeral sermon here at 10 a. m. The Brethren's meeting-house here stands on the bank of Shell Rock river, in the village of Green, a fine thriving town on the railroad running from Austin, Minnesota, to Burlington, Iowa. On the 2d of October, I took the train at Sheffield and run north through Mason City, Iowa, to Austin, Minn. There I took the railroad that runs from Austin to Mendota on the Miss. Stopped at Lime Springs. Brother David Benedy took brethren Bauman, Ellis and myself in a carriage twelve miles north to Bro. Joseph Ogg's, in Minnesota, near their meeting-house. Brother Ogg is Elder here. Meeting this evening. Saturday 3d, meeting at 10 a. m., and Lovefeast in the evening. Here I formed acquaintances with many brethren. We had a refreshing season, two were added to the church.

Sabbath 4th, meeting at same place at 10 a. m. Here was a choice held for one visiting brother; the lot fell on brother Jonathan Broadwater. My cousin Jacob Crone met me at this meeting, accompanied him home,—preached that evening in his school house.

Tuesday morning the 6th, returned to Sheffield. On the 11th, had meeting near my son's in a school house at 10 a. m., and at McKinsey's school house at 3 p. m. Brethren Ellis and Rule were with us. Sabbath 18th, I preached in a school house near West Point. On the morning of the 21st, my wife and I took the parting hand with our dear children in the far West, and started for our home in Ohio, a distance of six hundred miles. We arrived home safely on the 23d of October and found all well. Thank the Lord for his kind protection over us. Many thanks to the brethren and sisters in Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota.

JOHN P. EBERSOLE.

Bro. Brumbaugh:—

Our Woodland meeting has closed. Satisfactory to all concerned, (so far as I know.) I will try to note some of the incidents connected with the meeting.

Twelve days before the commencement of our meeting I received a Telegraph dispatch at Lathrop, to hasten to Woodland to see a young man lying dangerously ill, with what was supposed to be a rupture of his bowels. When I arrived at the house where the sick man was, I found him insensible of my presence, only at times he would call my name, and desire me to talk and pray with him. I also found Dr. Straum, our eminent physician of Woodland, had administered all the curative medicines known to him, in the science of medicine. Also sister Hartman, a woman of extraordinary knowledge of how the sick should be cared for, had put forth every effort in her power for his restoration; also brother, mother, relatives and friends paid unremitted attention to the sick man, yet under all this skillful treatment and kind attention, the young man suffered until within a few days of the commencement of our meeting, surprising to all he recovered enough to be taken to the meeting, and before it closed was baptized, and we all communed together, and then left for home.

But to return, again our meeting, commenced on the 15th day of Oct. as had been announced in the PILGRIM, and lasted 11 days. One week before the meeting commenced the brethren labored unremittingly, and untiring efforts were made to get things ready to make the meeting interesting and comfortable to all that would attend. The arrangements for holding the meeting were about these: The brethren hired a tent to hold the meeting in, that would seat 500 persons. Cost of the tent during the meeting $15. This tent was erected within a few rods of brother Hartman's dwelling house. Around his house is a beautiful grove of cotton wood trees, under which the eating was done. The house, barn, and other buildings were ample for sleeping purposes. Those that came in wagons brought their bed clothes. The order of the meeting was very complete, being well planned. Fresh bread and meat was obtained every morning in Woodland at the bakery and meat shop. The eating and preaching gives good satisfaction so far as I know. Two meals a day, breakfast in the morning at 8 o'clock, and dinner at 2 in the afternoon. Half after 7 o'clock in the morning, morning worship; preaching in the tent at 11 A. M., 3 P. M. and at candle lighting in the evening.

The attendance, thorugh the meeting was not as large as it would have been, had the weather been better. The few last days of the meeting, there were unusually heavy showers of rain and wind for the season. The last day of the meeting the storm tore the tent from bottom to top, and would have soon demolished the whole concern, but luckily we had a brother among us, who had done service on the seas. He soon adjusted the ropes at the top of the pole, and let the canvas down, so that the wind would not injure the tent any worse.

There were five added to the church by baptism during the meeting, an organization was effected in Yolo, and Solano Counties, 17 members, brother Wm. Hartman elected deacon, and brother Enoch L. Prather takes charge of the church. We had but two preachers during the meeting. Elder Myer's wife was lying very sick, not expected to live, and brother Myers could not be with us, but thank the Lord her health has much improved. Brother S. Broadhurst, also, could not labor with us during the meeting, on account of family sickness.

The cost of meeting in actual cash, including hire of tent Chinaman cook, $1.00 per day, bread, meat, sweet and Irish potatoes, cabbage, sugar, coffee, tea, butter, candles, oil, &c. &c. $133. Grapes, we had all we wanted free, for there are tons of them in that country going to waste. Friend Samuel Cripe, who lives near where the meeting was held, would bring each morning a large box of grapes from his vineyard, of the black Peanoles a very large, good grape. Brother Hartman, and brother B. Dennis had of the California varities I should think, two or three tons going to waste. Our years labor of communion seasons and protracted meetings are now closed.

In looking over the past year, we see many things that might have been done better, had we the wisdom to have acted more wisely, but there are two things that causes us to rejoice in God and be very thankful to him, for his great love in sending his son into the world to save sinners. In the last year, 27 through the instrumentality of his servants, have made the noble confession, that Jesus is Lord to the glory of God the Father, and become identified with us as soldiers of the cross, by baptism

Second, that the church of California is in love and union, having a good conscience, that we have acted on the word of the Lord, as he bas given us an understanding of it.

Now in conclosion as there are many of our brethren anxious to hear what the committee did with us when here, all we have to say now is, the committee did not ask of us to change our organization, or any other thing that we as Christians could not concientiously yield but they acknowledged us as a branch in Christ, the vine. Now we ask of the PILGRIM to copy the report of the committee from the C. F. C. as it will appear in that paper. ELD. GEORGE WOLF.

Lathrop Cal.

Dear Brethren:—On the 23d of October my wife and I started for Illinois. At Cerro Gorda, we stopped and attended two Lovefeasts, one in brother John Metzger's church on the 24th, where we met many loving members, and had a very good meeting. There was a large concourse of people, and many members communed. Had very good order. On the 25th, meeting at the same place, at 10 a. m., and in the afternoon, we were taken to the Millmine Church, had meeting in the evening. On the 27th there was a Lovefeast at the same place. At this Communion two were baptized, and I never saw better order than there was during the services. On the 29th, we started to Whiteside Co., Ill., to visit my wife's sisters; one living in Whiteside, and one in Henry Co. Had two meetings here, a place where the Brethren had never preached before. The people appeared to appreciate the preaching. We stopped with our friends nine days; thence we went to Franklin Grove, had three meetings, visited our old beloved brother Andrew Deardorff, and many others. Found all well.

We then went to Chicago, visited Dr. P. Fahrney, found them all well, and was kindly received by them. We remained in the city eight days; visited some members. The Brethren should preach there, as it is a very large place, and many request the Brethren to come and preach. I gave them a grant, and if the good Lord will, and I can get some brethren to go with me, I will send them an appointment during the winter at Dr. Fahrney's.

I saw brother Beer's book on the Passover and the Lord's Supper, and I do think all the brethren should have one. JOHN KNISLEY.

ORANGEVILLE, ILL. }
Nov. 24, '74. }

In current volume of PILGRIM, page 3, in Miscellaneous column, we see reference made to the calls for aid, and to brother Quinter's remarks in reference to the same, and for satisfaction to all whom it may concern, I would say that the members of the Wadam's Grove District met in council and the destitute of the West composed a prominent part of the business of the day, and the following conclusions were finally arrived at namely. That each church in the Northern District of Ill., send two delegates to meet in council at Cherry Grove Meeting-house on Tuesday the 8th of Dec., to adopt such measures as they may think best, and the different churches to act accordingly and a copy of the proceedings to be published in our periodicals. By this united effort we think more good can be accomplished than by acting congregational.

Now brethren and sisters, when you approach your tables groaning with the burden of luxuries and dainties, think of the cry of the dear little ones looking in to the face of a broken-hearted mother and saying, "I want a piece, mother," when she can only turn away in tears and give vent to her grief because of having nothing to supply their wants. Oh! who under such circumstances can shut up their bowels of compassion and say be ye warmed and filled, and not give bountifully and cheerfully. Brethren and sisters, think, and act quickly and promptly. Yours fraternally. ENOCH ERY.

MARTINSVILLE, Mo. }
Nov. 25, 1884. }

Dear Brethren: We take pleasure in acknowledging a visit from brethren C. C. Root, D. B. Sell and D. H. Conlson, who arrived on the evening of the 12th and remained until the morning of the 16th, during which time brother Root preached seven sermons which were interesting and much enjoyed by us. I feel satisfied that his labor of love was not in vain, as there are many precious souls here hungering and thirsting for the bread and water of Life.

As we are a little to one side we do hope the brethren will think of us and during the winter come and help us spread the gospel in its simplicity, purity, and power, in this part of God's vineyard. From the interest that is taken in our meetings, and the many calls we have to come and preach in different settlements, we believe much good might be done. I now imagine I hear some of our ministers say, I will go and assist in the good work. We have received five since we commenced preaching here. May the ark of God steadily move forward is our prayer. Pray for us.

WM. B. SELL.

Dear Brethren: I have received the sample number of the PILGRIM for 1875. It is decidedly an improvement, hope you may obtain a large number of new subscribers and all the old ones to renew their subscription, so you may get paid for the extra expense and labor of such an improvement as the PILGRIM appears in its new form and dress. May God bless you in your good work.

I will say a word for the Kansas brethren. They certainly will have to suffer if there is not something given to relieve their wants. There have hundreds of families left Kansas this Fall and are still leaving, all that can devise a way and means to get away. The brethren that have reached us here in Holt Co, Mo., were a distressing sight indeed. Sick, without anything to eat, scarcely anything to wear, and no money. The church here took them in and relieved their present wants, and there are a number of others that can not get away who are calling for help from us and the Brotherhood at large. We will do all we can to relive them, but we have also suffered some from the same causes, dreuth, chinch bugs and grasshoppers, so that we did not gather half a crop of corn. If we have too many to care for it will be hard on us at this time, as we expect to commence getting ready to build a meeting-house, but we will put our trust in God for the future as in the past. Now brethren, you that talk of forming a relief society for the suffering people of Kansas, do not be too long about it.

A. J. CORRELL.

Holt, Mo.

QUERIES.

Will some of the brethren answer the following query: Is there any difference between the word of God and the spirit of God? If so, what is the difference? H. G.

John 10: 12. Who is the hireling spoken of, and who is the wolf? Will some one be so good as to give an explanation through the PILGRIM? J. Y. SNAVELY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Our agents when soliciting subscribers, will please take our sample copy for 1875 along. Those wishing them for this purpose, will be supplied on application.

—C. C. Root: The postal order you sent us about the 23rd of October was not received by us. We called at our post office and found the advice there all right. We will be to call on your post master for a new order, which we will attend to as soon as we get time. The money will be safe.

Bro. J.H. Goodman of Woburn, Bond Co. Ill., says: "We are building meeting house No. 2. in this church district which is approaching completion. The general health is good,—weather fine for the time of year and the growing wheat looks right well.

The Brethren of the Lewistown congregation Pa., intend, the Lord willing, to commence a series of meetings at their meeting house near Maitland station, on the 15th. of January.

They request us to extend a general invitation to the brethren and sisters to be with them during their meetings.

From Bro. Daniel Bock of Ervin Howard Co. Ind. we have the following: The sample copy of the PILGRIM for 1875 is before me, am well pleased with it and will try to get as many subscribers, as I can. The general health here is good. We had a remarkable fine fall —somewhat dry, but present we are blessed with plenty of rain, and the fall wheat in the ground looks right well.

—Those of our contributors who will have the kindness to prepare something appropriate for our No. 1, of 1875, will please do so at once, as we intend to publish No. 1 for the next year right along, or immediately after the last No. of 1874 —which will be the next No. This will enable us to supply our new subscribers with No. 1 at an early date and at the same time give our office hands a little recreation during the holidays. If our agents will send in their lists in time we can give our subscribers No. 1 to read on New Year day.

—Our town subscribers will please notice that the next number (50) will complete the present volume and that the PILGRIM for 1875 will be supplied to only such as renew their subscription. This can be done by informing the carrier, calling at our office, or leaving their names at the office of Dr. Brumbaugh. For 1875, town subscribers will get their papers at the post-office. Those who have not yet paid or settled for the present year will do us a favor by remitting, to the carrier. who will have his book along and credit all those who pay him.

The East Nimishillen Congregation, Stark Co., Ohio, held its first meeting in its new meeting-house, near Hartville, on Sunday the 22nd of November. Preaching by brother P. J. Brown in English, and bro. M. Weaver in German. Brother Brown, in his discourse, protested strongly against calling a meeting-house the church. Both discourses were strong and appropriate to the occasion. Brother Brown also spoke in the evening and next morning, when two were added to the church by baptism.

ANDREW BRUMBAUGH.

Eld. A. J. Correll of Holt Co Mo. says, "The gospel trumpet is still sounding and there has been several added to the Church this fall, by baptism. Paul is planting, Apollos watering and God giving the increase. We have some snow and winter has set in. There are two good farms of 800 acres offered for sale at low figures. How glad I would be if some of the brethren would come and buy them. Full particulars given by addressing me at Craig, Holt Co. Mo.

Bro. J. C. Mc. Mullen of Mansfield Ohio says, "We have the sample number of the PILGRIM for 1875 and am well pleased with it. All the brethren that I have yet called upon seem willing to renew their subscription, and I feel that every brother and sister ought to take it and those who are not members should also take it. I will do all I can for you All right, dear brother. If our agents will take with them our sample copy and do all they can, we will ask no more.

Bro. W. M. Wise of Osage Co. Kansas writes: "And now we wish to make an appeal to the general Brotherhood for spiritual aid. If there are any of the minstering brethren who feel like changing their places of labor, we think this is a very good place to locate. We have good soil, good water, plenty of coal, rock enough for building fences and other purposes.

We have had partial failures in crops in the last two seasons but that is nothing more than is prevalent in other portions of the U. S. When it is seasonable here the soil produces everything in great abundance fruit of all kinds hardly ever fail.

Now brethren, we pray you turn a hearing ear to our appeal for while our supplies for the sustenance of the mortal body are short, our soul's are also suffering for lack of spiritual food.

The Brethren from Centropolis Franklin Co. come and preach for us once in a great while. But their field of labor is so great, that they can't get around often, the distance being about twenty miles. Our neighbors appear anxious for the Brethren to come and preach. Land partially improved is worth $10 to $20 per acre. Raw land is less.

Obituaries crowded out.

First Thanksgiving

"Well Sammy, do you know what day to-morrow is?"

"Yes, sir; it's Thanksgiving Day, and we are going to grandpa's to have a real good time, and eat such a good dinner!"

Mr. Mills could not help smiling at the boy's earnest announcement of the "good dinner;" but he said, "Do you know, Sammy, why we have a thanksgiving dinner?"

"No, sir, unless it is because the Governor appoints one and tells us to keep it."

"Why do you think the Governor wishes us to keep it," asked his father.

"I heard you read it, and Mr. Andrews in church on Sunday."

"Yes, he did; I am glad you noticed it, my son; but if you can't tell me about the first Thanksgiving, perhaps Abby can."

"It was in the time of the early settlers of this country, wasn't it father? and didn't a ship come from somewhere with food for them that made them keep the Thanksgiving?" said Abby, looking up, quite interested, into her father's face.

"Yes, my daughter; you have part of it, and I will tell you the parts that are wanting in the story. In the year 1629, a large company of men, women and children came over from England, and arrived in this country in June. They settled in Boston, Charlestown, and in the neighborhood of Boston. The voyage from England was a tedious one, and many of the settlers were sickly. They could not raise crops and build houses, and prepare themselves for winter. So when the cold, snow and ice came, it found them unprepared to withstand its inclemency. I sometimes wonder that they lived, any of them, for they were not used to any hardships, such as they were called to endure in living in a new country."

"I think the cold weather is real fun," said Sammy; "and I don't know but it is better than summer."

"You may think so, Sammy," said his father; "but if your home was in a log-house, without any bath or plaster, I think you would think our New England winters rather cold. Well, when winter came many of them were frozen to death, many died from disease, and worst of all, their food began to give out."

"It must be hard to be hungry," said Sammy. "Didn't they have plenty of bread and milk?"

"No; they had corn, which they made into meal, and even that gave out, so that they had to eat acorns and ground nuts; and as they were so near starving, they appointed the 6th day of February, 1630, as a day of fasting and prayer."

"But, papa," interrupted Sammy, "that is not what we do on Thanksgiving!"

"No, my son. I will tell you how it turned to a Thanksgiving day. On the 5th of February a ship was seen coming in the harbor of Boston, and she proved to be the ship Lion, which had been sent to England for provision, and so their sorrow was turned to gladness, for her cargo was satisfied, and the day of fasting turned into Thanksgiving, and that was the first Thanksgiving held in this country.

Woman's Life in India.

Carleton, the well-known correspondent of the Boston Journal, thus graphically describes woman's life in India: "Think of your own little rosy-cheeked darling, who climbs your knee for a good-night kiss, being affianced at the age of five, and at twelve a bride, shut up for the rest of her days in the house of her father-in-law, with nothing to do—no knowledge of needle-work; surrounded with books, yet not knowing a letter; her room a blank wall; her daily duties for the remainder of her life being the worship of a little brass or stone idolge in the form of a monkey, or a figure with six arms and four faces; hanging flowers around its neck, sprinkling it with water; bowing before it, walking around it, talking to it as little girls talk to their dolls; lighting little wax tapers; nothing but this, except to dandle her children, bring food to her husband, and eat her own, and rearrange the folds of cloth which answer for a garment; doing this and sleeping the rest of the time from morning till night, and night till morning, through the twenty-four hours, the weeks, the months, the years, from childhood to old age! Such is the daily unvarying life of the Hindoo women of the upper class."

—Severe earthquake shocks were felt along the east coast of Mexico last week.

The huge, drastic, griping, sickening pill, constructed of crude, coarse and bulky ingredients, are fast being superceded by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or Sugar-Coated, Concentrated Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules—the "Little Giant" Cathartic or MULTUM IN PARVO Physic. Modern Medical Science enables Dr. Pierce to extract from the juices of the most valuable roots and herbs their active medicinal principles, which, when worked into little Pellets or Granules, SCARCELY LARGER THAN MUSTARD SEED, renders each little Pellet as active and powerful as a large pill, while they are much more palatable and pleasant in effect.

DR. IRA A. THAYER, of Buensburg, Ohio, writes: "I regard your Pellets as the best remedy for the conditions for which you prescribe them of anything I have ever used, so mild and certain in effect, and leaving the bowels in an excellent condition. It seems to me they must take the place of all other cathartic pills and medicines."

LYON & MACOMBER, druggists, Vermillion, D. T. say: "We think they are going to sell like hot cakes as soon as people get acquainted with them and will stop the pill trade, as those that have used them like them much better than large pills."

Historical Charts of Baptism.
A complete key to the history of Trine, and the Origin of Single Immersion. The most interesting reliable and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22x28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting at a single glance the impossibility of single immersion ever having been, the Apostolic method. Single copy, $0.50. Four copies, $1.00. Sent post-paid. Address

POETRY.

Address to Christmas.

Hail! blithesome messenger of joy,
Thy radiance, beaming clear and high,
Lights up the cold, ice-fettered earth
With rays that claim celestial birth!

My fancy eastward far would soar
To grasp the view my pen adores—
Away through ether's vales obscure,
To welcome thee to mundane shores.

My eyes would fain the scene behold,
When first thy lustrous dawn unfolds,
And, coursing through the trackless air,
Illumes thy path with dazzling glare.

Borne on the hoary morning's wing,
Thy whispers happy sonnets sing.
How bright the welcome rays arise
To greet the bowing azure skies!

Thou harbinger of peace and love,
Whose constancy thy visits prove,
As time his annual round fulfills,
Thy lustre decks the snowy hills.

Born with the tide that swept the world,
And from its throne grim darkness hurled,
Thy gracious light thro' shadowed years
The impress of its FOUNDER bears.

The festal board invites thy smile,
Thy presence darkest hours beguile,
Lifting the vale that shades the heart,
Thy cheery voice bids grief depart.

The echo of thy laughter rings
In silv'ry notes o'er joy's deep springs;
The influence of thy soft'ning hand
More potent is than fairy's wand.

The heart of youth pulsates more wild,
At sight of thee, love's darling child,
And welcome thee with shout and song,
For they would fain thy joys prolong.

The aged hail thy glad return,
Though life's dim flame but feebly burn;
In gratitude their hearts raise
When thy blest beams salute their gaze.

O'er all the wide extended earth,
Where swells the anthem of thy birth,
Thy advent with delight is sung
In many lands, by many tongues.

And if our eyes no more behold
Thy opening light to earth unfold,
Tho pleasure that thy gleam imparts,
Will soothe till death our burden'd hearts.

ORIGINAL ESSAYS.

Serious Meditations on the Coming of Christ.

Christmas day is approaching on which Christian nations will celebrate the birth of Him whom they claim to follow, and in whom they hope to obtain salvation. We approve of a proper celebration in honor and reverence to His holy and righteous name, but the festivals and popular display and frivolities, and buffooneries in disguise, we denounce, because it is a public disgrace to His holy Name, and awaits the vengeance of eternal fire.

Holy characters, or true Christians will seriously reflect back to the time when Christ, the author of their salvation, appeared as a babe in the despised little town of Bethlehem; but they should more especially turn their minds to the time when the Prince of Peace, the Mighty Conquerer and King of Kings shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation, to all those that look for Him, hence these meditations. O, who shall be prepared for His coming? Shall I meet His approbation at that eventful period? O, that such a solemn reflection would engage the mind of every probationer for eternity. His first appearance was noted for humility and submission. Perfect obedience was the trait of His character; "God manifest in the flesh," suffered reproach, disgrace, persecutions and contradictions from a sinful world cheerfully. He made himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, became obedient even unto the death of the cross, bore the sins of the world and made peace thro' the blood of the cross; spoiled principalities and powers, made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them. He died the just for the unjust to bring us to God. He was buried in the rock, his sepulchre sealed, and a watch set. But behold! his God-man body saw no corruption. Hark! what voice is this? Why this trembling, this convulsion of the earth? See the king's guards pale as death, their mortal frame shaken and fleeing for life. O, that bright form, the lightning-like countenance of God's messenger! See the sealed stone moving, the pains of death removed, its bars bursted, its sting crushed, the grave swallowed up in victory, and forth came the mighty Conquerer. He burst the bars of death and triumphed over the grave.

Dear reader, let me direct your eye and mind farther on in viewing that important scene. Jesus Christ, God's only son, suffered the penalty of death for you and me, put away sin by the sacrificing of himself, and as a great High Priest, with his own blood, Christ did not enter into the holy places made with hands; but into Heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us. We behold Him ascending up on high leading captivity captive and giving gifts to men,—for the perfecting of the saints—the body of Christ. As the mighty Conquerer ascended upon high, entered the gates of the imperial palace, see him there dragging his enemies to the portals of the sky. When he arrived at those gates of pearl that never had been opened to man, the command went forth, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in." "Who is this King of glory?" The answer was, "JEHOVAH strong and mighty, JEHOVAH mighty in battle." The question was asked the second time, which received the final answer, "JEHOVAH of hosts; He is the King of glory." Then the everlasting portal flew open, never more to be shut. He entered. O, what joy and triumph filled the courts of Heaven with gladness! He entered into the Palace, took his seat at the right hand,—God, even Immanuel went up with a shout, JEHOVAH with the sound of a trumpet; the Son of God Most High foiled his foes, fought and overcome them in battle; cast satan as lightning from heaven, and then sat down with the Father upon His throne. He reigns exalted at the right hand of God "till he hath put all his enemies under his feet." God "hath given him a name which is above every name; that at the Name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, of things on the earth, and things under the earth: and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

Friendly reader, the time is coming that if in this life we do not submit to his will, in eternity we are compelled to bow and submit to that dreadful doom he then shall pronounce over us. Behold this mighty Conquerer will come again, just as sure as he did make his appearance eighteen hundred years ago. This is a truth so plainly revealed in Scripture that it cannot be denied by any that believe God's word to be true. He did come according to prediction, born of a virgin, cradled in a manger, he grew up as a tender plant, and as a root out of dry ground; he had no form nor comeliness, and when they saw him there was no beauty that they desired him. Therefore he was despised, rejected of men, and in consequence thereof maltreated, dishonered, reproached, and his name held in derision, and as a by word among all nations. Hence he shall again appear to receive honor, glory and adoration from all creatures, and destroy all opposition in order to bring unto submission every soul under heaven for the reception of him who is to reign as King of Kings and Lord of Lords. In his humanity he was as a lamb led to the slaughter, but in his exalted and glorified state he will appear as a Lion fierce and strong, ready to execute vengeance upon all them that rebel against him and reject his council. O, willful sinners, disobedient characters, callous professors and nominal Christians, stand in awe and fear before him, "For our God shall come and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call from the heavens above, and to the earth that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me, those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice. How necessary my dear readers then that we stand in covenant with him who is the judge of the quick and the dead, and that we are not ashamed of him or he may be ashamed of us, and not gather us with the saints "when he shall come in the glory of his Father."

Permit me to draw your attention to the second coming of the Son of God, the direful prodigy, fearful calamity, yea, the consternation that will seize the inhabitants of the world by the sudden appearance of the Son of Man. Behold the heavens parted, the opening in the sky; see the ensign of the cross, the standard of glory and mark of his majesty. O, what do you think of him now? You who made light of his coming, and by your rebellious conduct pierced him; and ye stubborn, careless and lightminded, hard-hearted sinners, you who being so often invited, yet slighted that invitation and stilled your conviction, you have trodden under foot the Son of God, you have virtually counted the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, and done despite to the Spirit of grace. How will you feel when you see that "fiery stream issue or come forth from before him?" You may call to the mountains and rocks to fall on you and hide you from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, but all in vain. The terrors of the Almighty will overwhelm you, "for he will smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked." Jesus Christ with all his mighty angels will appear in flaming fire taking vengeance on all them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." "Then shall the wicked be revealed whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." O, how dreadful the doom of the ungodly, and how heart-rending and terrifying to the wicked when they see him whom they pierced, and see "Tophet ordained of old; yea, for the king it is prepared, he hath made it deep and large; the pile thereof is fire and much wood; the breath of the Lord, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it."

But inasmuch as the coming of the Lord to the sinner is terrible, so on the contrary is it joyous and glorious to the saints. "He shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." To such as overcome, the promise is, "that they shall sit with him upon his throne." But O, the day, the dreadful, glorious and lovely day, when the King of Kings and Lord of Lords shall appear in his beauty! Whose heart can conceive, tongue declare, or pen describe the grandeur, the glory and the terror of that day when the Almighty Savior shall descend triumphant, and all the celestial warriors who obeyed his commands and followed his example shall compose his majestic train. The Lord of life will appear. View him high-seated on a cloud of brightness; riding on a white horse surrounded with a halo of glory, decked with majesty and excellency, and arrayed with beauty and brilliancy, clothed with power and strength; and the heavenly armies shall follow him on white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. "Thousand, thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him." Oh, shall I be there? Shall I see the King in his beauty? Shall I be one that shall follow in that train?

Let every one weep to think that he may be shut out; O, let every soul burst in tears in the thought that he may be missing, and be weeping in darkness and pain while all Heaven will be rejoicing on the occasion.

Where, my friends, will you be then? Do you think that dying in your present situation you will come to Christ? Awake, awake to righteousness and sin not, be like your Savior now in temper and life, then when He shall appear you shall be like him in beauty; for you shall see him as he is, and be permitted to reign with him a thousand years in the peaceable Kingdom, where everlasting joy is the crown of your glory, a copartner in his glorious reign, the royal diadem for your head and for the prize of your conflict, palms of victory in your hand. On earth he suffered, and on earth he must reign; here he was despised, here he must be praised; here he was execrated and blasphemed, and here he must be adored and reverenced. Here his followers are despised, here they must suffer for his dear sake, and here they must be glorified with him. O, my Lord let me suffer now that I may reign with my Savior in that day! Remember me, O Lord when thou comest into thy Kingdom; remember me, O my God for good.

"Remember Lot's Wife."
No. 2.

THE FUTURE PROPHETIC ALLUSION. Having in our former essay endeavored to carry the mind back to the Past Historical allusion of Lot's wife, we will now try by the aid and light of the gospel to carry the mind forward, and see what we can learn of the future, by remembering Lot's wife.

Sodom compared to the world. According to the prophetic language of Christ, the people will be similarly engaged when He, the the Son of man shall come again. For says Jesus "Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded." Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed. Luke 17: 28, 30. In the above language we only learn what their civil engagements are going to be, and that these engagements are wrong in the sight of God, I would be slow to acknowledge. The Sodomites were men and women, composed of flesh and blood as we, and these engagements were the natural results of their existence. So also, will such engagements be the result of the existence of the children of men, as long as they shall be permitted to dwell on the earth. It seems very plain from this fact that the coming of the Son of man will be very unexpected to many, and that when the busy world shall be moving on prosperously in a temporal sense, so deeply engaged in temporal concerns, forgetting the Lord, their maker, He will suddenly appear as the avenger of sin and iniquity. But the world will be engaged in worse things than those which we have noted above, when Christ shall come. Sin was the cause of Sodom's destruction, sin will also be the cause of the world's destruction. We are taught by Peter of what some of their sinful engagements consisted in. He tells us that it was "filthy conversation." It was the filthy conversation and wicked deeds of unrighteousness that vexed the righteous soul of Lot. Hence we see the immoral and irreligious judgements of God. Just such will be the practices of the people in the day when the Son of man shall be revealed from heaven. We might ask is it not so now? Do we lack much to be equal with the Sodomites? These are grave questions. We buy, sell, build, marry and attend to all those duties incident to this life. We, who love the Lord, and a godly conversation, are often saluted with the filthy conversation of the wicked, yet when we consider the character of the Sodomites, we are led to conclude, that we are only approximating to that condition of corruptness. In some localities there may be but little lacking to fill up the measure of Sodom while in others it may want much. We look forward towards a very dark period of immorality, when the Lord shall make his second advent into the world.

In comparing Sodom with the world we notice that there will be two classes of persons recognized. Those are the good and the bad. God always had a people, for which he had a special care, and we believe he will continue to have such until the consumation of all things. The good and the bad are permitted to grow together, like the tares and the wheat until the harvest, when the Lord of the harvest shall come and divide them. So it was in the days of Lot and so it will be in the days of the coming of the son of man. The wicked will attempt to fight against God. This is shown in the hideous outrage of the people of Sodom, against the Lord's servants, while they were sojourning with Lot. The Revelator speaks on this wise, "And when the thousand years are expired satan shall be loosed out of of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are on the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog to gather them together to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them." Rev. 20; 7—9. Although the armies of hell will array themselves against God, and the hosts of heaven, their efforts will be vain and fruitless, for they will be smitten with blindness and bewilderment, whilst the wall of the Lord's protection shall be thrown around his people, within which they shall rest secure.

Preachers like Lot, will be as those who mock. "And Lot went out and spake unto his sons-in-law, which married his daughters and said, "Up, get you out of this place; for the Lord will destroy this city. But he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law." So it will be in the last days. The faithful preachers will warn without making impression. His truths will be as casting pearls before swine, who will mock—trampling them under their feet, and then endeavor to rend him. The people will heap to themselves teachers having eaching ears, and will not endure sound doctrine, and will turn away from the truth and be turned unto fables. That period in times' history will be truly a discouraging one for the porters on the watch tower of Zion. Then brother ministers do not be discouraged when sinners, do not seem to heed you. Do not doubt the authenticity of the truths of the gospel because the people will not accept it and be saved. Preach on, warning the people of the impending danger of resisting God, and like Lot, if not successful in winning souls to Jesus, you still have the promise of being saved yourself, by preaching the word in season and out of season, by rebuking, reproving and exhorting with all longsoffering and doctrine. Thus you will be justified by God, if not by man, being found faithful unto him who has called and sent you to preach the gospel to every creature.

Some taken and others left. So it was in the days of Lot, so it will be in the days of the coming of the Lord. We just now remember of a question that was put to Jesus relating to this important matter, viz: Will there be few saved? This question although not directly answered by Jesus, by saying yes or no, yet he tells us plainly that "straight is the gate, and narrow the way, and few there be that find it." Few—but four souls were taken out of Sodom, while many hundreds were left behind to perish in the flame. Few—but eight souls, were taken in the days of Noah while many millions were left to perish in the flood. "I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken and the other shall be left. Two women shall be grinding together the one shall be taken and the other left. Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left." Let us then be ready.

The manner of destruction Similar.—You remember in our former essay we called your attention to Sodom's destruction. We are taught in the nineteenth chapter of Genesis that God destroyed Sodom by raining fire and brimstone upon it from heaven. And as it was in the days of Lot, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of man. This earth is to pass through an ordeal for its renovation and that ordeal is to be by fire and brimstone. Reader think of the magnitude of such a conflagration. This shall happen with a great noise. Abram saw the smoke that arose from Sodom, as the smoke of a mighty furnace. But oh! what wailing, weeping and gnashing of of teeth must have taken place when the suffocating smoke of brimstone commenced to penetrate their nostrils, and the searching, scaring, burning, life destroying flame commenced to engulf them into dark despair. Now unconverted reader cast your eye forward, and look into the word of the Lord and there you will find a similar destruction awaiting the ungodly. Remember Lot's wife. Turn unto the ways of the Lord, and walk humbly in his commandments that ye be not consumed with the wicked.

JOHN ZUCK.

Shady Grove, Pa.

The Closing Year.

The present year, the most of which has already run into eternity, and the remainder is hastening on as fast as the wheels of time can move, and soon, soon, it will be gone, never more to return, and with it, many of our friends, fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters husbands, wives and children, are gone with it; and are separated from us, never more to meet with us in this world again. Consequently this year has been especially sad to some of us, no doubt more so than perhaps any other year of our lives, but we do not know what other years may yet bring.

Still the year perhaps to a great many of us has not been fraught with any special circumstances. We have been fed and clothed, in our right mind, and enjoyed a reasonable share of health, for all of which we render ourselves unworthy on account of our shortcomings, and even after we are blest with so many favors, we neglect to appreciate them and are not as thankful as we ought to be.

But many of our fellow beings have not been so highly favored as we have. Many the world over, have famished for the want of that which is necessary to sustain natural life, and even in our country, the west, there are hundreds and thousands of people that are so much deprived of the necessaries of life that it seems that suffering is inevitable, unless they leave their houses and seek a more congenial land.

It is very hard to abandon house and a hard earned home with families of little children, launch out into the the cold world and depend on the chances of charity. There indeed is a large field wherein we can do much good by way of sustaining life, and rescueing victims of starvation from an untimely death.

But still we do not know if that is life's worst feature. It is bad enough it is true, very bad indeed, but then there are many hundred souls, that are starving for the bread of life, that bread of which if any man eat, he shall never more hunger. Would it not be much better to labor to give some of that bread, than to give that alone, which soon passeth away when it is eaten and they hunger again?

While we are musing thus, we think of the means employed in giving such bread. The brethren have no doubt done their duty, and many souls have been turned from sin and satan, to the great marvelous light. We hear that the brethren have preached in many parts of the country, where they never preached before, and always it seems to be the cause of much good. This is a good show for the year. The prospect is encouraging.

And since we have gone thus far allow me to ask one question concerning the leading cause. Was it not, to a great extent the influence of our periodicals?

Was it not the PILGRIM that first introduced the faith to Bro. Fitzgerald of Ky.—he can answer for himself if so—no doubt he will bless the day when first he saw it.

And possibly it has been the means of salvation to sister Wood of Va. These are exceptions of course, but then who knows, what other good may eventually spring up from the germ, that is now planted in those places, remote from the Brotherhood. Large churches may grow and many souls may be saved. Then has not this been the leading cause, and have not the contributors and supporters helped to hide a multitude of sins, and saved souls from death? Who, then, would let go the plow and look back into the beggarly elements of the world.

Possibly the paper may cease to visit the homes of some of the brethren the coming year, but we hope not; but if so, allow me to ask, will you or yours be better in any way by not reading it? Can you devote so small a sum to any purpose that it will add more to your treasure. If so we bid you God speed, but we fear it may go towards purchasing trashy literature of the day and detract more from your treasure than it would add and lead your children from the part of rectitude.

We will suppose that our papers are not just in every particular what you think they should be, would you condemn them on that account? Christ would say "I came not to destroy, but to save", then why do you condemn? Why not redeem if we see a wrong. A few strokes of the pen may have a good tendency and effect a redemption but if we stand by and look on and see the wrong progress without any endeavor to suppress it, we are but little better, than those that are working the wrong.

May be while we are laughing and jesting we had as well be reading something instructive, say the Bible for instance, or possibly something else might have a tendency to make us better. Prove all things and hold fast to that which is good. Let us be careful that wee do not condemn a great deal of good with a little bad or upon the other side we may possibly do much harm for the sake of a little good.

We have almost forgotten our subject but to return. If we were going to review our lives during the past year could we see that we have grown any better? Have we done anything that could commend us as good servants to our Master? Have we improved the time, or have we buried our talent expecting to return that we have received and no more. If so we would be renounced as unprofitable servants.

The year rolls round and steals away,
The breath that first it gave;
Where'er we be, whate'er we do
We're traveling to the grave.

Before the close of another year our existence may be a thing of the past and the soil of the valley may have passed over us, but why should we care, if we are prepared for the change and it would be the good pleasure of the Master to call us hence. But contrary if we have slighted his graces and abused his mercy it may be very sad for us, when we come to die to know that we will have to meet an angry God and be cast from his presence forever to be separated from fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and dear little ones and many friends to take up our abode with devils in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone forever.

Let us then look well to our standing, for if we think we stand, we may possibly slip. Let us work out our salvation with fear and trembling so when we are done with dull mortality, our race run—and we are are called hence to render an account of our stewardship here, that our record may be such, that it can be said of us :" Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord.

But Oh! sinner what is thy hope while boasting of good health and long life thou art stumbling over the brinks of eternal ruin. It is but one step from the cradle to the grave, and one slip may plunge you into the depth of dispair where hope is a stranger and merey never can reach you. You are trifling with God's merey, slighting his grace and working out your own destruction.

Lamentable indeed. Then why not deny yourself a few days of pleasure in this world for eternal happiness in the world to come. Oh, turn sinners before ye die. — J. B. Lair.

BOOK NOTICE.

"Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles," has for sometime been out of print, and up to the present date, we have been unable to fill orders, though they are steadily coming in. The demand for the work, even at this time, seems to be nearly as great as when the book was first published; which, of its self, is proof that the work is generally sanctioned by the brethhood. That the work is doing good we know from the many testimonies received at this office. We could fill several pages of the Pilgrim with them, many of which are quite interesting

To accommodate those yet desiring the work, and at the same time help to maintain and establish the practice of the Brethren, we have concluded to publish another edition, which makes the third edition that the book has passed through in a little more than two years. The work is now in press, and will be ready for delivery soon, and we hope that all those desiring the book, either for reading, or general distribution will send in their orders immediately. The price will be as heretofore: 1 copy, 25 cents; 5 copies, $1.10; 10 copies, $2.00. Churches or members wishing to purchase them by the quantity, for general distribution, and will take 25 or more copies, at a time, can have them for 12 cents per copy. Bear in mind that this is for gratuitous distribution only. For the above prices the work will be sent post-paid.

"Campbellism Weighed in the Ballance and Found Wanting," is a tract of 16 pages, containing the sermon published a few weeks ago in the Pilgrim, and now put up in tract form for the benefit of those who desire them for general distribution. Sent post-paid on the following terms: 2 copies, 10 cents; 6 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies, $1.00. 100 copies, $3.50.

We have never yet asked for donations to our Tract Department, but still they will come from those who are much interested in our work, nor neither do we now intend to ask for any, but simply offer a suggestion or two to those who have means that they wish used in forwarding the Master's cause. Those sending donations should state distinctly in what way they wish me to use their gifts. We have two ways of applying them: 1. The Printing Fund, i. e., to pay for the printing of books and tracts. The more of this fund we have, the greater number and variety of books and tracts we can keep on hand, so as to supply the general wants of the brotherhood.

2. The Distributing Fund. This is to be used in the gratuitous distribution of books and tracts in the parts of the country where the doctrine and practice of the Brethren are not generally known. We have many calls for tracts for distribution, from members who are too poor to pay for them, which our limited means will not enable us to supply. Of this class, we have an important request from Washington Territory, that ought to be attended to. Also another from one of the leading cities of Kansas, where there are only two old members, whose son has created quite an inquiry about the Brethren, by purchasing a few dollars worth of our works, which he says have been read and handled by the people till they are about worn out, and then comes a call for works to be distributed. These are only a few of the many coming to this office.

We will aim to give notice, thro' our papers, of our works as we publish them. This we are requested to do by many who feel anxious to read the work we have in course of preparation. We cannot too warmly express our gratitude and warmest thanks to the brethren and friends, who have taken such an active part in purchasing and distributing our works. In this way, thousands have been reached, and there are yet millions more, who should know, and understand the gospel in all its purity. There are multitudes of men and women, who will not attend preaching, that can be reached with books. The eye can be had when the ear is closed. Oftimes you can send a book when you cannot send a preacher. A certain writer says, "Books are like bombshells, they can be thrown over walls whose gates are closed." You may fail to induce a neighbor to attend meeting, but give him a little book, and he will not only read it, but lend it to his friends, and by so doing, may save both himself and others. A few dimes properly applied, may be instrumental in saving a soul from hell, and hiding a multitude of sins.

Sums of $2.00 and over would better be sent by Post Office Order, Draft, or Registered letter.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—D. M. Your services as reporter will be gladly accepted. Give us the items and we will prepare them for the press.

—Bro. J. Y. Heckler says: "There has been a slip between my pen and your compositors. In my article on "Family Government" in Pilgrim No. 47 page 393. "I think it a sample of good manners for them to bow if we thank them." I did not intend it, nor do I think that I wrote it so, as I have no respect to bows and would be ashamed to teach my children such folly."

—We have, already, the names of a number of reporters who are willing to assist in making the Pilgrim interesting for 1875. As we said before, we want one from every church. Who will they be? Send in your names, with address, as we wish to book them so that we can correspond with them when necessary.

—Read brother J. H. Moore's "Scrap Box." We have the promise of something of this kind from him every alternate week. Bro. Moore has good facilities for obtaining items of this kind, which we hope will be quite interesting to our readers. We also call attention to his "Book Notice," and hope our readers will appreciate the course which he is persuing to promulgate primitive Christianity.

—Bro. J. D. Haughtelin of Panora, Iowa, Coon Run congregation, says: "We met in council a few days ago and made arrangements to gather contributions and send to the suffering in Kansas and Nebraska, through the 'Aid and Relief Societies.' It is our only means of getting free transportation. We hope the deserving ones will get it."'

—Correction.—In D. C. Moomaw's communication of No. 47 that relates to the affairs of the Botetuort congregation and the A. M. Committee, the third paragraph from the end of the article should be preceded with the last clause of the last paragraph, commencing with "the troubles," &c., and the article should end with "I will try and keep you advised," &c.

—From Bro. H. J. Kurts of Poland, Ohio, we have the following: "On the 21st of November, the brethren and sisters in Mahoning Church held their Lovefeast. It being late in the season and the weather disagreeable, the attendance was not large but it seemed to be a pleasant meeting. On the Sunday following there was preaching again, and we had the pleasure of seeing two souls taking upon themselves the obligations of the Gospel. Baptism was performed in the afternoon. Both of these persons are heads of families.

—Our Almanacs ar now ready and we have commenced delivering them to those who have ordered. This Almanac is larger than any previous one published by the Church, and is handsomely put up, having a most beautiful frontispiece bearing emblems of "peace and good will to men." Besides a very complete ministerial list, it contains the following: "The Centennial Almanac for 1875," "Introduction," "Memoir of John H. Umpsted," "Buffalo Valley Church, Pa.," "Computation of Time," "One Hundred Years Ago," "Echoes from Eternity," and a time table of ten of the Eastern Churches of Pa. Send along your orders and get your Almanacs before the New Year comes in.

A Visit.

Eld. Jacob Steel and one of the other ministers of his congregation intend the Lord willing, to visit the following churches at time indicated, and hopes the Elders o said churches will not think it presumption on his part as he assures them that it is out of love to God and the brethren. The appointments he wishes made are as follows: Yellow Creek (Snowberger's M. H.) Sunday evening Dec. 20th Monday 21st 10 A. M. Eshleman's Church, and in the evening at the Cross Roads. Tuesday 22d 10, A M. in Martinsburg, also in the evening. Wednesday 23d at 10, A. M at Clover Creek, also in the evening. Thursday 24th down Clover Creek at the new meeting-house 10 A. M. and in the evening. Friday 25th and Saturday 26th at James Creek, time and places of meetings at their option. Sunday 27th 10, A. M. and evening at Coffee Run. These appointments are all at the

The Pilgrim.

HUNTINGDON, PA., DEC. 15, 1874.

Look For No. 1.

This is the last No. of the present form. No. 1. for 1875 will be like the enlarged sixteen page sample No., and will be ready, no Providential interference, to mail during the last week in this month. We hope to mail it so that our new subscribers may have it to read on New Years day. Send along your names and have them booked.

Please Notice.

As we have large paper bills to meet by the 1st of January we kindly ask all such as are yet back on 1874, to pay us at the earliest possible date as we need it badly. When you renew for 1875 send the money along for the present year, and we will give you time on the next. To our agents and subscribers for 1875 we would say, all that have the money and can pay please do so, and send it to us as near the beginning of the year as possible. By so doing you will much oblige and enable us to be more indulgent towards those who are not prepared to pay just now.

To Our Agents.

As this will be the last opportunity of speaking to you in the year 1874 we feel like taking advantage of it. We have no doubt but what many of you are at work soliciting subscribers and it would be quite natural in us to wish you success if we were to look no higher than our own interest. But we think we have higher and more noble aims than simply our own gratification. Our hope and position is, that while you labor to extend the circulation of the PILGRIM, you favor us, do a little for yourselves and very much, we trust, for those that you succeed in getting as subscribers. When we succeed in getting men and women to attend Church, we think we have accomplished a good work because we bring them to the means of grace. Just so when we get men and women to take a religious paper, we put the means of grace in their homes, and when thus presented they may be accepted.

We have already a number of reports from our agents. Some are at work, while others have sent in their list. The reports, so far, are all favorable and the lists sent show an increase. One brother says: "You see I have just doubled my list and expect to get still more, but if all would do as well as I have done your list for 1875 would be doubled." This we do not expect of all. Some may and will do more while others may do very much less. Still we hope that if all our dear brethren and sisters will make some effort in our behalf, we can have a large increase over that of last year. We will here say, when you go out to canvass for new subscribers do not fail to take along with you our sample copy for 1875 so that all may know just what to expect. While many highly commend the change of form and size we have not had, so far, a single objection offered against it. A few of our agents have determined on the cash system which will do quite well where all have the means to pay, but there are localities where we would prefer to give such as wish to read the PILGRIM and have not the means to pay for it now, a little time. We want every brother and sister in the brotherhood to read it who can and will pay during the year. With this explanation we submit the matter to the judgment of our agents hoping they will give all an opportunity of reading the PILGRIM during 1875, that they think will comply with our reasonable terms. And now dear brethren and sisters, to you and to God we look for our success—labor on and do not leave the field until all have had an opportunity to subscribe. If any wish more sample Nos. they will be supplied when called for. Also any who have not been supplied with prospectus, we will gladly furnish if so requested, but in the meanwhile, make one, and go to work and have the names ready by the time it comes. On the prospectus you will find all the necessary directions.

"Farewell."

Here we are altogether, but perhaps for the last time, as this visit fulfills our contract and therefore we must take the parting hand until invited back again—and what shall we say? Our visits have been pleasant, and warm was our receptions in thousands of pilgrim homes. To all such we wish to take our leave in the most expressive and endearing manner. Adieu and Good-by are likesome terms and convey proper ideas, but do not express our feelings on this occasion. They are too full and convey too much. With their expression have heaved too many sighs, have flowed too many tears, and separated, forever, too many loving hearts. The partings of loved ones are always attended with more or less sorrow, but that sorrow is, oftimes, measurably destroyed by the hope that they shall meet again. But there are feelings for which hope has no cordial, and language no expression. To such partings we wish, not now, to advert, they should be few, and we would gladly cast those few, forever out of sight and memory. We think of those, or such as are more congenial to our feelings, those attended with the hope of meeting again, if not in this life, on the evergreen shores of immortality, in the sweet bye-and-bye. To such Goodbye, (God be with you on your journey) and Adieu (I commend you to the care of God are expressive, but our present leave-taking of our pilgrim band is of a different character, and therefore have adopted the more appropriate expression, "farewell." "Farewell brethren, farewell sisters, 'til we all shall meet again." While farewell may express a proper feeling towards those with whom the PILGRIM may take its final leave, it expresses with equal fullness our wishes towards those who may invite us back again, and with whom we may have the pleasure of enjoying another year's pilgrimage. It carries with it the idea of a blessing and breathes forth our soul-sentiments towards our readers.

During the year that is now almost gone we have endeavored, by the grace of God, to labor for your welfare, and as that labor, for the time, is now ended, we kindly and hopefully say—farewell. May God richly bless your basket and store, may the fatness of the land be yours to enjoy, and through that enjoyment may your souls be lifted up in praise and thanksgiving to our Father in Heaven, who, in return, will feed you with the Bread and Water of Life. While we tender our "farewell," to our thousands of readers, with the hope that we shall meet again, yet doubtless the farewell to some will be final. A few, perhaps, will close their door against us for reasons best known to themselves, while a number have gone to their reward and are no more pilgrims and strangers in a strange land. But we hope that this number may be comparatively small and that our farewell to all may be accepted as a blessing and not a parting.

So far, we have been generously remembered, and just now are we receiving many words of good cheer which greatly encourages us in the work that is before us. To such brethren, sisters and friends, we can express our gratitude, but never repay it, unless, by the grace of God, we can aid you in securing a title to that heavenly inheritance which is eternal and fadeth not away. We trust that your labors devoted to the interest of the PILGRIM may not be in vain, but that through them many souls may be made wise unto salvation. Not only to those who especially labor for us do we feel grateful, but to all of our dear readers we tender our grateful thanks and now say to one and all, FAREWELL.

Must We Part.

This is the last number of the PILGRIM for 1874., Vol. 5, and as we send it to only such as renew their subscriptions the question comes up with unusual seriousness, "must we part?" We have said our farewell to you with the hope that our parting will be of short duration and now extend to all of our dear readers a hearty invitation to again join the PILGRIM band. We need you all. There is not a single name but what we will, again, gladly welcome to our list. Feel assured dear brethren, sisters and friends that if you withhold your name we will miss you. We need you because we hope to do you good and because you can do us good. We will endeavor to do you good by imparting to you such knowledge as may assist you in the divine life. You can do us good, and the cause that we are advocating by giving us your support. Unless our list is considerably increased our work must suffer, and it will not afford us a living support. Each one of you have it within your power to aid us in extending the kingdom of Christ and sounding abroad the "Good tidings of great joy." Will you exercise that power favorably by renewing your subscription for 1875, or must we part? It is true, money matters, in places, are a little tight, but the amount asked for the PILGRIM is so small that we feel assured that there are but few who cannot give it for so good a purpose. There are hundreds and thousands of families who could save that amount by denying themselves of the luxuries of just one meal, things that are only for the gratification of the taste and oftimes are a positive injury to the body, as you all know. If any such should think of withholding their names because of the tightness of money matters we ask them to think a moment and consider whether a little denial in that direction would not be more profitable in the end than to deny yourself and family of the privilege of reading the PILGRIM a whole year. There are many other ways in which even our poorest brethren and sisters can save so small an amount. Just think of it, dear readers, we promise to send you the PILGRIM a whole year, in its enlarged form, postpaid, for the small sum of $1.60. The paper itself is worth, to you, one-half that amount independent of the reading. Then think of the vast amount of reading we give you. Every number is equal to four or five good sermons. Besides this you get or gain a knowledge of all that is transpiring in the church. We tell you of many good meetings held, of souls returning to Christ, of the time of holding our Love-feasts, District Meetings, Annual Meetings and a great many other things in which we are all interested and which we should know. The fact is we believe that you would feel lost and lonesome, as many have expressed it, without the weekly visit of the PILGRIM. To be as accommodating as possible we will say to those who have paid for the present year, and are not prepared just now, to pay for 1875 we will wait on you until you can get it. To those who have not yet paid but will do so at the time of renewing their subscription, we will exercise the same charity.

Now, dear readers, after enlarging the PILGRIM, giving you about three more pages of reading and offering you such fair terms we hope that we shall not only have the pleasure of receiving your name and support for 1875 but that you will become interested in the welfare of the PILGRIM, show it to your brethren, sisters and neighbors and thus procure a number of names to send along with your own and thereby gladden our hearts and aid us in laboring for the salvation of souls.

Thoughts on Christmas.

Christmas is coming! Christmas is coming! is the general exclamamation as we approach this eventful period of time. The little boys and girls are wondering what their Christmas present shall be, and many are the thoughts about Santa Claus and of his deposits in their hats, bonnets or stockings. The fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, are making preparations to meet the fond expectations of the junior portion of the family. What can I do, or what can I present that will give the most pleasure is now a consideration. Then too, what a grand reunion there will be on the glorious Christmas day. Those of the family circle that have for a long time been absent will again be present. Already the anxious father and mother are thinking of the return of a daughter or son. Next Friday they will be here. Each day, as they partake of their meals, they look to the vacant place and think of the time when it will be filled. Then another plate will be set, the table ladened with the best things that kind hearts can suggest and liberal hands bestow, and when they surround that table what a lovely scene is presented! If ever there is a time when there is a "little heaven on earth," it is then. The dark clouds are dispelled, and the sun of earthly glory shines forth in all its splendor. It is true, there are dark spots. There are those who have sad hearts—those who are reduced to penury, and even hunger and starvation looks in at some doors, but it is to be hoped that even some of these will be gladdened. It is said that "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless millions mourn," but it is not at this season; man seems to feel his relation to man,—love flows from heart to heart, and this is manifested by a liberal supplying of the wants of the poor, the administering of the oil of consolation to the distressed, and the bestowing of those little deeds of kindness which touch the heart and fill it with joy and gratitude. Many plans are now in operation for the supplying of the wants of the poor; all over the land contributions are being raised, and it is to be hoped that by Christmas morning many that are in want will be supplied, so that even such may, to some extent at least, realize a happy Christmas day.

But then we think of those family circles that are broken and can never be filled again on earth. Some great changes have occurred since last Christmas day. The place that knew many then, knows them no more, and the thought of the dear departed ones will wound many hearts. Last Christmas mother was here. The little deeds of kindness which only a mother can bestow are remembered; her seat is vacant, and her gentle tones are heard no more. On the mind's picture gallery we see her lovely form, and also many of us that of a father, brother, or sister. These recollections and ideal scenes chill the heart and amidst the throngings of earth we are sad, and long for the mansions above. But to those of us who have to realize these tho'ts of sadness, and especially the Christian, there is a very cheering thought. This day a Savior was born into the world, and through his suffering and death, heaven, the home above, is made accessible to us. This is certainly a very grand consolation. Our friends are gone; they cannot come to us but we may go to them. What a glorious reunion that will be! In this life when we meet we must part, but if we meet above in our Father's Kingdom, there will be no more parting. If Christ had not come into the world and purchased our redemption, we could not have this glorious prospect in view.

Christian reader, when we think of the event that transpired on this day and the glorious result of it, can we not all rejoice? Our surroundings in life may not be pleasant, but the thought of what occurred on this day and what was done for us, should thrill every soul with delight. Truly we received a gift, such as the world cannot bestow, a gift that cannot be taken away from us, a gift that is to all that will receive it, alike precious, a gift that is attainable to all—high or low, rich or poor, all may be partakers of it, and although we may be very poor in this world's goods, yet if we have Christ we are rich. Will we not rejoice on the Christmas day that we can all be rich, and those of us who have Christ in our possession will it not afford peace to our souls. This peace we hope all of our readers may experience. We truly wish you all a happy Christmas.

YOUTH'S DEPARTMENT.

Christmas in Spain.

There is no civilized country on earth in which the children are not made happy by the promise of the coming Christmas. But in every country the festival is called by a different name, and its presiding genius is painted with a different costume and manner. You know all about our jolly Dutch Santa Claus, with his shrewd, twinkling eyes, his frosty beard, his ruddy face and the bag of treasures with which he comes tumbling down the chimney, while his team of reindeer snort and stamp on the icy roof. The English Christmas is equally well-known, and the wonder of the German miracle-tree, the first sight of which no child ever forgets. But you are, perhaps, not so familiar with the spirit of the blessed season of advent in Southern Europe, and so I will tell you some of the pleasures and fancies of the Spanish Christmas,

The good cheer which it brings everywhere is especially evident in Spain. They are a frugal people; and many a good Spanish family is supported by less than the waste of a household on Murray Hill. But there is no sparing at Christmas. This is a season as fatal to turkeys as Thanksgiving in New England. The Castilian farmers drive them into Madrid in great droves, which they conduct from door to door, making the dim old streets gay with their scarlet wattles, and noisy with obstreperous gabbling. But the headquarters of the marketing during those days are in the Plaza Mayor, where every variety of fruit and provision is sold. There is nothing more striking than those vast heaps of fresh oranges, plucked the day before in the groves of Andalusia; nuts from Granada, and dates from Africa; every flavor and color of the tropical fruitage; and in the stalls beneath the gloomy arches, the butchers drive their flourishing trade. All is gay and joyous—chaffering and jesting, greeting of friends and filling of baskets. The sky is wintery but the ground is ruddy and rich with the fruits of summer.

At night the whole city turns out into the streets. The youths and maidens of the poorer class go trooping through the town with tamborines, castanets and guitars, singing and dancing. Everyone has a different song to suit his own taste of mind. The women sing of love and religion, and many of the men can sing of nothing better than politics. But the part which the children take in the festival bears a curious resemblance of those time-honored ceremonies we all remember. The associations of Christmas in Spain are all of the Gospel. There is no northern St. Nick there to stuff the stockings of good children with rewards of merit. Why, then, on Christmas eve do you see the little shoes exposed by the windows and doors? The wise kings of the East are supposed to be journeying by night to Bethlehem, bearing gifts and homage to the heavenly Child, and out of their abundance, when they pass by the houses where good children sleep, they will drop into their shoes some of the treasures they are bearing to the Baby Prince in Judea. This thought is never absent from the rejoicings of Christmas-tide in Spain. Every hour of the time is sacred to Him who came to bring peace and good-will to the world. The favorite toy of the season is called "The Nativity." It is sometimes very elaborate and costly, representing a landscape under a starry night; the shepherds watching their flocks; the magi coming in with wonder and awe, and the Child in the stable, shedding upon the darkness that living light which was to overcome the world.

Before the holidays are ended the three kings make their appearance again. On the eve of the Epiphany, the porters and water-carriers of Madrid, wherever they can find one young and simple enough to believe it, tell him that those royal and sacred personages are coming to the city that night, and that they must go to the gates to receive them. They make the poor fellow carry a long ladder, which, on arriving at each gate, is mounted by one of the party, who announces that the visitors are not yet in sight. The ladder is then put again upon the shoulders of the victim, and the sorry joke is repeated as long as he can endure it.

Before leaving Spain I will give you a little story in rhyme, which came to be written in this way: One Christmas time we went to visit a beautiful Moorish ruin, and one of the party, an American boy, who was too lively to be very thoughtful, picked up a curiously carved nail, used for studding a door in old times, and, I regret to say, put it on his head under his hat. He had great trouble in carrying it home, and was very much laughed at in consequence. He wrote these verses in a penance for his fault, and I give them to you to see if you can find the moral of them:

The Contraband Nail.

As I walked in pleasant company,
From the tables of the Moor,
I spied a large, seductive nail
That lay on the marble floor.
A theivish suggestion came to me,—
Friends' whispers are so pat—
The antiquarian flesh was weak—
I put the nail in my hat.

Through the court I walked with rigid eyes;
The breeze was heavy with dread—
I spoke to the passers like a boor
With sulky, covered head.
The host passed by—the friars scowled,
And fain would have struck me flat;
How could I bow when the host passed by?
I carried a nail in my hat.

It weighed a ton when, at last, I closed
My purgatorial course;
I felt that my head was growing bald
With friction and remorse.
I dropped my nail in the Tagus' stream
And tried to atone by that,
For the crime I had done, and the woe
I had known,
When I carried a nail in my hat.

And I could but think as I homeward rode Across the moonlit miles,
How we would stare, could we see the care
Beneath our neighbors' tiles;
The stiffened neck, the devious walk,
The dodging, and all that Grows plain as the sun in a Spanish noon—
When you've carried a nail in your hat.

How Anna became a Christian.

I will tell my young friends how Anna said she became a Christian. I think some of you may wish to learn like little Anna to be a follower of Jesus.

After reading her Bible a good deal, and thinking and praying over it a long time, at last she made this resolve: I don't know as ever I shall learn to be a Christian, but this I will do. I will give myself to the Saviour every day of my whole life. I will read my Bible, and pray that my sins may be forgiven; and I will act just as Christians do. I will, the Lord helping, do no wrong thing; and I will do all I can to help my little brothers and sisters to do right and to love the Saviour; and I will love Jesus dearly because he is so good, whether I am his child or not." So Anna commenced to do as she said; and the blessed Jesus listened to her accepted her when she gave herself to him, and loved her dearly, as she loved him. Thus little Anna became a Christian, and walked in newness of life.

The little child who loves to pray
And read his Bible too,
Shall rise above the sky one day,
And sing as angels do;
Shall live in heaven, that world above.
Where all is joy, and peace and love.

Look up dear children, see that star
Which shines so brightly there;
But you shall brighter shine by far,
When in that world so fair;
A harp of gold you each shall have,
And sing the power of Christ to save.

CORRESONDENCE.

Our Visit to California.

NOVEMBER 13th, 1874.

Dear Brethren: I'ermit me thro' this medium, to give the Brotherhood a sketch of our travels and mission to the Pacific coast.

I left the place which on earth I call my home, on the morning of the 14th of October, taking the Southern route. Traveled through South-western Virginia and Tenn., passing through a portion of Georgia, Alabama and Kentucky, crossing the Mississippi at Cairo. Took the Illinois Central Railroad to Chicago, where I arrived on the evening of the 16th at 9 p. m., having traveled eleven hundred and seven miles in sixty hours. My observations so far affords nothing worthy of note, except the excessive drouth and failure of crops, which after leaving Virginia and East Tennessee, was really distressing. The crop of cotton and corn is almost an entire failure, comparatively.

After a refreshing night's rest, and a little morning recreation, I set out to hunt my way among the massive buildings, and meandering streets, toward the Fort Wayne Depo', the place appointed to meet brother Davy, where I soon arrived, and among the crowd of strangers that thronged the sidewalks, I beheld his familiar face. After a few words of consultation, and learning that we were yet in time to take the westward bound train to San Francisco, we at once concluded to get our ticket and be on our way. So in a very few minutes we were whirling on across the continent, passing through the beautiful prairies, rich and well improved fields of Northern Illinois and Iowa. Crossing the Missouri River at Omaha, we now enter the barren wilds of the far West. Here we see millions of acres of rolling prairie lands in its native dress, over which roam the deer, the elk, the wolf, bear, and other wild animals, with the red man of America in his moccasin, and wrapped in his blanket—the old matron of more than a hundred winters, the young man and maiden, the mother and her pappoose strapped on her back upon a board, all as it were in restless anxiety, receding before the intruding approaches of the ambitous Anglo-Saxon adventurer, and the progress of civilization, the arts and sciences. In this region there is now immense destitution, and in many instances want and suffering for the necessaries of life among the scattered inhabitants. In consequence of the drouth and destruction made by the grasshoppers, hundreds of families are dependant upon the charities of benevolence.

Coming now to Wyoming, we begin to scale the Rocky Mountains, which presents to the eye of the traveler a large field for thought and reflection upon the wonderful works of God. Here for hundreds of miles he sees scarcely anyt ing but an interminable waste—mountains of sterile sand, with nothing in the shape of vegetation upon it, but what is called sage brush, which grows from one to two feet in height, very similar to the common garden sage of our country. Occasionally we meet with some token that tells the sad story of the terrible sufferings of the pioneers, who fell victims to the privations and dangers of this overland route, before the time of railroads, such as the monument on a lonely hill with the inscription upon it; "The Maiden's Grave." Many in the attempt to cross the continent, lost everything they had and buried part of their families, who fell from the effects of the poisonous water that steeps from the alkali earth, or at the hand of the ruthless savage that wanders on these unbroken wilds. Now passing the summit at Sherman Station, the highest railroad point in the world, eight thousand, two hundred and forty-two feet above the level of the sea. Passing the summit and dropping down the western slope, the scenery is perfectly wild and romantic, with irregular hills and winding canons, and towering cliffs "looming up to the clouds," with all kinds of fantastic designs and variegated colors, presenting new objects of interest at every moment, the grandeur of which cannot be expressed or described, and can only be realized by actual observation.

This now introduces us into the foot hills—into the Weber canon, a narrow valley of fertile soil drained by the Weber river, a beautiful stream of clear and live water, which is used to irrigate the lands along its course, which is cultivated by Mormons, who are settled thro' this country. Leaving the mountains, we soon arrive at the Great Salt Lake Valley. This appears to be a nice and fertile region, and which with the benefits of irrigation, produces abundantly the necessaries of life. Arriving at Ogden, a Mormon city, situated at the north end of the Great Salt Lake, with a population of 3,500, the junction of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific Railroads, thirty miles from Great Salt Lake City.

The numerical strength of the Mormon Church is estimated at about sixty thousand, including men, women and children. The Prophet, Brigham Young, is in a bad state of health, and gone at this time to St. Thomas, in the hope of regaining his health, but he being in his 74th year, it is tho't that his mantle will soon pass to another, for which honors there are a number of aspirants. Who will be the lucky heir remains to be seen, but it is thought that in the contest, perhaps it will be rent, and the fragments clamed and worn by quite a number.

Leaving the Salt Lake, and passing through the Humboldt Valley, a distance of about two hundred miles, an extensive boundary of level lands, watered by the Humboldt river, and occupied only by the employees of the Railroad, the savages and the herdsmen, from California, with their flocks and herds, which are feeding upon the short grass along the streams, and the sage brush, etc., that grows upon the higher lands.

Leaving this valley we are next introduced into the Sierra Nevada, Mountains, which is about one hundred miles across, heavily clothed with timber and abounds with the rich metals of the earth of different kinds.

The cars seem to scale these mountains almost imperceptably, and before we are aware of it we are skipping from peak to peak, looking down to the fearful chasm below, where if the cars were to leave the iron track, they would be shivered to atoms, with their living freight, at a depth of twenty-five hundred feet, causing the more timid to tremble for the danger to which they were exposed.

On the western slope of these mountains the Railroad Company have erected snow sheds for forty miles together, for the protection of the road from the accumulating snows that fall and drift together, during the winter season. These sheds are so dark as to make it appear almost like passing through a tunnel.

All through these mountains may be seen where the miner in search of gold, has completely overturned the face of nature, and leveled hills and mountains, for which purpose the waters from the rivers have been conducted by ditches and tunneling for hundreds of miles, carrying it from peak to peak and thus washing down mountains, as it were, in search of wealth, causing the creeks and rivers below to run thick with mud, for probably hundreds of miles. Taking all together, these mountains afford the grandest scenery that I ever beheld in nature. In a word, it appears that all nature was in commotion, and here displayed its most magnificeot effort. Now, gliding down from these mountains into the plains of California, we behold beautiful prairies and navegable rivers, producing and bearing away on their bosoms, the rich products of the earth to supply the wants of men in the differents parts of the known world.

The agricultural products of California, are wheat, barley, vegetables and fruits. Wheat is the staple of the country, to which farmers devote almost their whole attention. This crop can be raised without irrigation, and if the wet season continues late enough to mature the wheat, they make abundant crops, but if not, then it dries up prematurely and the result is a failure, which happens about two seasons out of five, and ruins the fortune of the farmer, as he has nothing else to depend on. The farmer on the high lands, even depends on the market for vegetables for family use. These are produced in abundance along the streams where they grow without irrigation, and where they are otherwise prepared for irrigation. Farming under these circumstances is not as profitable in California as in the Eastern States, because if the farmer succeeds in making a good crop one year, then he, under the influence of the usage of society will invest everything in a crop for the next, and if the season is adverse, the crop fails, and down he goes. Thus men's fortunes fluctuate continually, and make their life a life of speculation.

Barley is raised in small quantities, for feeding stock principally. Fruits of the different kinds are raised plentifully. Pears of every variety, and grapes of every kind, from the large Muscat, or raisin grape, to the common wild, or fox grape of the East. Many of these are very superior, from which the best of wines are made without the additions of any sugar. All these, as well as other fruits, if cultivated on uplands require irrigation.

THE CLIMATE

is in the main uniform, especially the extremes of cold are not experienced here, snow is very rare. Sometimes there is frost, but the ground scarcely freezes so as to stop the plows. At times, however, during the dry season, which is generally from some time in May until the first or middle of November, there is some very hot and scorching weather during the day, but the nights are mostly rather cool, in fact, to us of the East, while there, it was disagreeably so. The contrast between the night and the day was too great to be agreeable; and I doubt whether it is healthy. The day time was warm enough for summer clothing, and if we rode out as we did to church at night, we required flann ls, overcoats and gloves to be comfortable. The atmosphere at night was penetrating, damp and chilly, and very heavy to the respiration.

THE HEALTH of the country is no better, if as good, as in Virginia, it being subject to all the diseases known here, and some that we are not subject to; such, for instance, as chills and fever and pulminary diseases, are more common than in Virginia and consumptives pass off more rapidly. I think this is owing to the contrast and the dampness of the atmosphere as stated above.

SOCIETY AND MORALS.

While the population of California is composed of almost every race of human beings, the order in society, so far as we could see, in towns, cities and country, seemed to be comparatively good. We saw no intoxication and heard no profane or obscene language.

RELIGION,

as is reasonable to suppose, would be found in this mixed population, of almost every sect and order, the Roman Catholic and all Protestant denominations, the Chinese temple dedicated to Brama, the Swedenbergian and the Mormon, are all here engaged in their peculiar devotions. Vital Christianity, however, I fear is rather scarce. We had a number of meetings while we were there, but rather poorly attended during the week evenings. On Sunday and Sunday evenings, there were better congregations and good order and attention.

EMIGNATION.

The arrival of emigrants is immense, from every part of the world, especially at this time from the Eastern States—that portion desolated by the grasshoppers. The emigrant trains are coming in every day, from eight to ten cars, perfectly crowded, all landing principally at San Francisco, as a sort of distributing point, from whence they scatter out to different parts of the country to seek a livelihood. Many when arriving here seem sadly disappointed, after looking around and failing to find such opportunities as expected, become discouraged and wish themselves back in the eastern States. If this influx continues, there must be immense suffering here, and a reaction will have to take take place sooner or later, and I would advise all that contemplate changing their residence to inform themselves well before emigrating, and if possible go and see first.

Before I went to California, my partialities were strongly in favor of that country, but I came back very much changed in my opinion, and upon the whole, I would not be surprised if many who are emigrating west, would not do much better to turn their course toward the south and procure the cheap lands to be had there, that are now uncultivated since the change of the labor system in the South.

We met the brethren of California in council, according to appointment. Had two days' sessions; all passed off, as we think in the main, in a Christian spirit, while of course we did not find, nor leave the condition of things as we could have wished. We found it better than we expected, all wishing to be and remain in the body and to make some concessions for the sake of a more perfect union, and labor to that end. May the good Lord hasten the day when we all may "be of the same mind and same judgment. See eye to eye and mind the same thing." Those divisions, though they may appear small, ought not te exist among us.

The brethren and sisters, all with whom we met, treated us very kindly, in every way like Christians should treat each other, for which they have our most profound gratitude, and our prayer is that the good Lord, the dispenser of events, will suitably bless them for their Christian courtesy. So far as we could learn, our labors was appreciated by all. No one was wounded or complained of hard treatment. The whole matter is in the hands of the Lord, and we hope he will add his blessing and overrule all for good.

Our short intercourse, with them was pleasant, and will long be remembered, and only regret that we could not have staid longer, but the lateness of the season, and other engagements admonished us that we should take our leave. So on the morning of the fourth, we took the parting hand with some at their homes, and others who met us at the station, to bid farewell.

On the night of the sixth, we encountered a severe snow storm, which continued all night, snowing, hailing, and freezing; and on the following day the wind blew very hard and cold, sometimes jostling the cars when standing on the track. Since then the weather has been pleasant, and after traveling eight days and seven nights, arrived at our home on the evening of the 11th inst. at 9 o'clock, after traveling in all, to and fro, something over seven thousand miles, stretching almost across the entire continent, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast.

We sipped the briny fluid of the great, blue Pacific, and gathered some of the specimens of the inhabitants of the mighty deep which were brought to the shore by the rolling waves, and saw hundreds of sea animals, such as sea lions and seals, roaring and howling and gamboling in their native element, at a safe distance from the shore. Taking all the scenery together, mountains and valleys, fertile fields and barren deserts, the beasts of the field and forest, the dry land, and the watery worlds, and the inhabitants thereof, and all designed for, and put under the control of man, and consider that God has made them all and us for his glory, we are made to exclaim "how wonderful are thy works, Lord God Almighty, just and true art thou, thou King of Saints!"

On my arrival, I found my family all well, for which I thank God, in that he heard our oft repeated prayers and the prayers of those that were interested in our welfare. I would yet say, I am glad to inform the Brotherhood that by traveling as economical as we could, our expenditures will not exceed the appropriation, including a small amount donated by the brethren, at whose request we were sent. We hope that those districts who are in the arrear in sending in their quota will attend to it without further notice.

Respectfully submitted.

Dear Brethren.

Bro. Joseph Snowberger and myself left our homes for a visit to the brethren in Fulton Co, Pa. on the 19th of Nov. In Snake Spring Valley we put up with sister Snowberger for the night. On the morning of the 20th we started on our journey and dined at friend Isaac Richy's where we were met by Bro. David Clapper, who was to be our pilot and companion.

We now started for Bro. Jno. Snider's in Brush Creek Valley where we arrived in due time, found an appointment awaiting us. This was our first meeting. Attendance poor on account of an other meeting in the neighborhood. This meeting was in Bro. John's dwelling.

Nov. 21 finds us on the road to Sidling Hill Valley, Fulton Co, Pa. Arrived at Bro. Alpheus Mellots about at 3 o'clock P. M. Meeting in the evening at the schoolhouse. Not very large attendance but good order. Lodged with Bro. A. Mellot.

Nov. 22. Services in schoolhouse again, large attendance, attention good. Dined with Bro. A. Mellot. By this time we had become thoroughly acquainted with our host and his family, and can truly say that the longer we stayed, the more we love them. May God bless them for their kindness to us.

In the afternoon we rode about six miles to Bro. Jonas Mellot's where we found an appointment in a schoolhouse. It being a wet and disagreable day, the attendance was slim but the order was good.

Nov. 23. We had about 4 miles to our next appointment. This was at Bro. James Lake's dwelling-house. Attendance tolerably good, order very good. Same evening meeting at the school house. Here we had a full house and very good attention.

Nov. 24. 4 miles ride brings us to our next appointment, this being in Bro. Daniel Lakes dwelling house. There we had an other good meeting in the evening again at the same place At the second meeting we had in this valley, we were met by Bro. Absalom Mellot, the only resident minister in the valley. He is young in the ministry, but strong in the faith. He was with us at every meeting, but two.

Nov. 25. Meeting in the evening at the schoolhouse, attendance good, order not so good, from the fact, that the house was poorly lighted, which gave some boys a chance to be a little noisy.

Nov. 26. Met at Bro. Daniel Mellot's for worship. Attendance pretty good and the order excellent. At this meeting we received the glad news, that two precious souls had resolved to come over to the Lord's side so after services we repaired to the water where they were immersed. These two persons were but lately united in wedlock and now they have also vowed allegiance to king Immanuel. May God grant them a full supply of his grace that they may be enabled to hold out faithful. Services in the evening at Bro. Wm. Kline's. Order and attendance good.

Nov. 27. Our labors ended in this valley, and having to travel about 14 miles to our next appointment, we left Bro. Kline at about nine o'clock A. M. Arrived at friend David Cairns at about 4 o'clock P. M. in pretty good spirits. Services in the school house. The attention to the word preached was good.

Nov. 28 finds us on our way to the large meeting house near Bro. Jacob Steel's in the Hopewell congregation. Dined with Bro. Jno. Rush. In the evening we met for worship, also next morning. In the afternoon we were on our way home, arrived at 6 o'clock in the evening. Found my family well, for which I try to thank the good Lord.

On the morning of the 30th Bro. Joseph left for his home.

Altogether we had 14 meetings, 10 of which were held in Sidling Valley and we are constrained to say, that we have found the members very attentive to their duty. They would conduct us from one place to another and nothing seemed to much for them to do. One old Bro. was with us at every meeting that we had in this valley,

Upon the whole we had a pleasant time and we hereby tender our thanks to the brethren and sisters for their kindness manifested to us.

BY J. H. MOORE.

—S. Bollinger, of Kusho, Webster Co., Iowa, says: "There are no brethren here, and consequently I have opponents on all sides; but none try to question the ground you have taken. They dare not say it is not safe."

—While on our trip to Bond Co., Ill., we learned that the Brethren were erecting a new meeting-house, south of Mulberry Grove. They already have one good house of worship in this arm of the church.

—We also, learned that the Brethren in Adams county, Ill., have finished a new meeting house, making two houses in this church.

The next District meeting, for Southern Ill. will be held with the Brethren in Adams county, commencing October 11, 1875. This is about the oldest church in the State, having been organized many years ago, by Elder George Wolf, who has since gone to his long home.

—The late Annual Meeting held near Girard, Macoupin Co., Ill., did much towards advertizing the Brethren. A letter from the state of Maine, addressed to the Elders of one of our leading churches, making considerable inquiry about our faith and practice.

—Mr. Roe, the assistant editor of the American Christian Review, when speaking of modern Church Festivals, says: "It costs ten cents to get in and ten dollars to get out."

—A letter from near Neosho, Newton Co., Mo., says: "There seems to be quite a stir among the Baptists here at this time. One of their preachers, a close neighbor of ours, seems to be much concerned about trine immersion. Perhaps the next time I write, I will be able to tell more about it."

—We have a letter from Warsaw,—Ind., containing 50 cts., for pamphlets or "Trine Immersion" but contains no name; and of course cannot send the books until the name is known. Among the many thousands of letters received from all parts of the United States and Canada during the two last years, this is the first one without a name. When writing letters of any kind always see that you name is there.

—J. H. Garman of Sinking Springs, Ohio, says: "Your reply to Elder C—, in the Pilgrim is read with much interest, so much so, that my number of the Pilgrim will soon be worn out. I think you ought to have that reply published in tract form, so we could hand it around. I think I could make good use of five hundred, to start on." The reply is now in print, and will soon be ready for delivery. It will contain 16 pages and be sent post paid for $3.50 per hundred, or 2 copies, 10 cts. Hope all will take an active part circulating it.

—The weather to-day—Dec. 5, looks almost as beautiful as the spring season of the year.

MARRIED.

BREIDENTHAL—SNIDER—By the undersigned, Nov. 17, 1874, at the residence of the brid's parents, Mr. Thomas Breidenthal to Miss Sarah Snider, both of Bedford Co., Pa. L. Furry.

DIED.

TRAVIS.—In the Jerusalem District, SanJoaquin Co, Cal., Nov. 20, '74, Mrs. Mary Travis, aged 70 years, 7 months and 28 days.

Mrs Travis lived a consistent member of the Calvanistic Baptist Church for a number of years and died as she lived, calmly resigning her soul to God who gave it. Her body was encased in a metallic coffin and buried in the Union Cemetery. Husband, son and two daughters followed her to her last resting place, sorrowing to part with one they loved so well. The funeral discourse was delivered by the writer and Elder Myers, in the Union school house, to a large assemblage of friends and neighbors, from Rev. 14: 13. Eld. G. Wolf.

BECHTEL.—In the bounds of the Yellow Creek Church, Bedford Co., Pa., Nov. 21st; 1874, Mrs. Elizabeth Bechtel, aged 63 years, 2 months and 19 ds. Occasion improved by the Brethren, from Heb. 14: 14. L. Furry.

BRUMBAUGH.—In the Yellow Creek Branch, Bedford Co., Pa., Bro. David Brumbaugh, born Sept., 23 d 1797, died Nov. 15, 1874, aged 79 years, 1 month and 23 days Occasion improved from Heb. 13: 14 by John W. Brumbaugh, and others.

The subject of this notice had been in the ministry for more than fifty years, though labored but little in the last twenty years on account of gfiddiness in his head and defect of his speech. His wife preceded him over 14 years. She died Sept 21, 1860, at the age of 58 years, 5 months and 10 days. He was a strong advocate of the order and simplicity of the old brethren, and had a remarkable strong memory which he retained to the last. Hope he died in that faith which overcometh the world. L. Furry.

RITTENHOUSE.—In Williams county, Ohio, Aug. 20, 1874, sister Jane Rittenhouse, daughter of David and Amanda Rittenhouse, aged 14 years 2 months and 25 days.

She enlisted in the service of the Lord on the 10th of June, 1873, and had the pleasure of attending three Communion meetings. She was not ashamed of her Lord and Master, leaving the fashions of the world, to be adorned in modest apparel while in her health, so that when the monster death prevailed in closing her earthly career, she was ready and died in hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral occasion improved by brother Jacob Brown, from 1 Pet 1: 23, 24.

Other obituaries crowded out, but will appear in the next number.

Description of Jesus Christ.

Copy of a letter from Publius Pentulas, governor of Judea, to the senate of Rome representing the person and actions of our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, which serve as strong testimony and evidence in favor of the divinity of the Lord's person and doctrines against the stale objections of the deists, as the authenticity of the manuscript from which it was translated is founded on the best authority. Tiberius Cæsar caused this letter to be published throughout all the Roman provinces, which is as follows:

There appeared in these our days a man of great virtue named Jesus Christ, who is yet living among us, and of the Gentiles is accepted as a prophet of truth; but by his own disciples is called the Son of God. He raiseth the dead and cureth all manner of diseases. A man of stature somewhat tall, and comely, with a very reverend countenance, such as the beholders may both love and fear; his hair is the color of a filbert, full ripe, and plain almost down to his ears, but from his ears downward somewhat curled, more orient of color and waving about his shoulders. In the midst of his hair goeth a seam or partition of his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites; his forehead very plain and smooth; his face without spot or wrinkle, beautiful with comely red; his nose and mouth so formed that nothing can be reprehended; his beard somewhat thick, agreeable color to the hair of the head, not of any great length, but forked in the midst; of an innocent, mature look; his eyes grey, clear and quick. In reproving he is terrible, in admonishing, courteous and fair spoken, pleasant in speech, mixed with gravity. It cannot be remembered that any have seen him laugh, but many have seen him weep. In proportion of body, well shaped and straight; his hands and arms right delectable to behold; in speaking very temperate, modest and wise. A man for singular beauty surpassing the children of men.

Words Spoken in the Family.

We commend the following extract from an article in the S. S. Times to the attention of mothers:

In families where absolute falsehoods would be rebuked, there will often grow up a propensity to idle and frivolous conversation; a fondness for the marvelous and sensational; a censorious spirit in regard to the actions and characters of others, that imperceptibly exert a deleterious influence upon all the members. One neighbor is spoken of with contempt. The sincerity of another is doubted. The feeble intellectual abilities of another are dwelt upon. Even the generous deeds of the liberal are sharply criticised, and the motives of the worthy and pious are impugned. Thus children grow up in the exercise of an uncharitable spirit that destroys all true kindness of feeling, incapacitates them for any real friendship, and renders them very disagreeable objects in society. A life that might have been inspired with noble sentiments, and generous impulses, degenerates into a protracted sneer. A habit is formed of speaking disparagingly of others, and detracting in every possible way from their merits, while, at the same time, a selfish spirit is manifested, that is disgusting to every high-minded beholder. Many of the gossipping tendencies that are so fatal to social confidence and friendship, and destroys the happiness of social intercourse, are cultivated in the family. They descend from parents to children, and blight whatsoever they touch. Few adults are aware how very early children understand their words and imbibe their spirit. Under the impression that much that they say and do is not noticed by the little ones, there is a freedom of utterance that has a corrupting influence before they are aware of it.

Those who sink under persecution or are impatient in a sad accident, put out the fires which the Lord hath kindled, and lose those glories which stand behind the clouds.—Jeremy Taylor.

"A DROP OF JOY IN EVERY WORD."

Plymouth, Huntingdon Co., N. J., June 25, '71.
Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—It is with a happy heart that I pen these few lines to acknowledge that you and your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets are blessings to the World. These medicines cannot be too highly praised, for they have almost brought me out of the grave. Three months ago I was broken out with large ulcers and sores on my body, limbs and face. I procured your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets, and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers have healed and left my skin in a natural, healthy condition. I thought at one time I could not be cured. Although I can but poorly express my gratitude to you, yet there is a drop of joy in every word I write. God's blessing rest upon you and your wonderful medicines is the humble prayer of Yours truly,
JAMES D. BELLIS.

When a medicine will promptly cure such terrible eating ulcers and free the blood of the virulent poison causing them, who can longer doubt its wonderful virtues? Dr. Pierce, however, does not wish to place his Golden Medical Discovery in the catalogue of quack patent nostrums by recommending it to cure every disease, nor does he so recommend it; but what he does claim is this, that there is but one form of blood disease that it will not cure, and that disease is cancer. He does not recommend his Discovery for that disease, yet he knows it to be the most searching blood cleanser yet discovered, and that it will free the blood and system of all other known blood poisons, be they animal, vegetable or mineral. The Golden Discovery is WARRANTED by him to cure the worst forms of Skin Diseases, as all forms of Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions, also all Glandular Swellings, and the worst form of Scrofulous and Ulcerated Sores of Neck, Legs or other parts, and all Scrofulous Diseases of the Bones, as White Swellings, Fever Sores, Hip Joint and Spinal Diseases, all of which belong to Scrofulous diseases.

Historical Charts of Baptism.
A complete key to the history of Trine, and the Origin of Single Immersion. The most interesting reliable and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22x28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting at a single glance the impossibility of single immersion ever having been, the Apostolic method. Single copy, $0.50. Four copies, $1.50. Sent post-paid. Address
